HOMICIDE IN SENTENCE

'Each day Cherry'll suffer; remember he killed a person'

PHILADELPHIA

"Yes, I think 'Cherry' received a just sentence with life imprisonment.

"He will have more time to suffer — day by day.

"Each day he will suffer and remember that he killed a person who wasn't deserving.

"The electric chair would have been too quick — in a few minutes everything would have been all over."

* * *

MRS. JACKIE PINCKNEY, of 5417 Chestnut St., was speaking about Henry "Cherry" Reed Jr., 43, of Angora Terrace near 60th St., who stabbed her 'adopted daughter' to death six months ago in front of her and 30 other choir members during rehearsal at the Heritage House, 1346 N. Broad St.

The victim was attractive Mrs. Lillian Reed, 31, of 210 N. 54th St., who was dragged from the rehearsal room before the horrified eyes of the choir members and stabbed to death in a hallway.

The couple had been divorced.

A 12-year-old daughter is in a boarding school at the Mother Drexel School in Cornwell Heights.

* * *

MRS. PINCKNEY said she thought of Lillian as her daughter since Lillian's mother had died.

Reed was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge David Ullman.

Judge Ullman said the sentence represented the unanimous opinion of three Quarter Sessions Court Judges who decided in 10 minutes that Reed was guilty of murder in the first degree.

Reed testifying at his trial cried when he talked about his daughter.

* * *

HE SAID he did not remember fatally stabbing his ex-wife.

But claimed he went to the choir practice to give her $115 for the care of their daughter.

Reed said he had a knife with him because he had bought it just that day for a fishing trip that night or the next morning.

Reed said his pockets were filled with fishing equipment.

HE TESTIFIED he pulled the knife only after the choir members started for him "menacingly."

Witnesses testified Reed entered the rehearsal room shouting at his ex-wife and pushed aside the choir director, Dr. Eugene Waymon Jones.

When arrested, Detective Harold McGrath said, Reed readily admitted the stabbing.

Services Monday for Elmer W. German

Elmer Wesley German, 50, died Wednesday after an extended illness. He was the son of William German and the late Mrs. Mary German, longtime residents of South Baltimore.

Born Dec. 13, 1911, Mr. German was married to the former Miss Eliza Frances Robinson, Jan. 1, 1933.

The family will receive friends at the Rice Funeral Home, 661 W. Barre St., Sunday at 2 p.m.

Funeral services will be held Monday at the funeral home at 10 a.m. with burial in the Baltimore National Cemetery.

SURVIVING ARE his father, his wife, two sons, Stewart German and Elmer (Buddy) German, a student at Rutgers University; two daughters, Mrs. Caroline Flowers and Miss Barbara German; three sisters, Mesdames Eva Glover, Gertrude Vaughn, Baltimores; and Mrs. Mary Johnson, Shrewsbury, N.J.; four brothers, James, Ellsworth, Bernard and Thomas German, Baltimore; three grandchildren, Cindy German, Kathy and David Flowers.

John Williams

Funeral services were held Thursday at New Trinity Congregational Church for John E. Williams, 25, local band leader, of 4707 Gwynns Falls Parkway.

Mr. Williams was shot in the chest and thigh Saturday night at a tavern in the 400 block Eutaw Pl. He was dead on arrival at University Hospital a short time later.

James C. White, a 22-year-old dental technician of the 900 block W. Lanvale St., was arraigned on a homicide charge in connection with his death.

Witnesses reported Williams was shot after he and another man bumped each other.

* * *

MR. WILLIAMS was born in Bel Air Md., the son of Mrs. Bessie Harvey, and the late Preston Hill. He joined the Navy after completing Towson High and was honorably discharged in 1956.

Besides his job as cook, Mr. Williams also led his own band, "The Royal Spades," in the night club engagements throughout Baltimore.

In addition to his mother, Mr. Williams is survived by his wife, Mrs. Leola S. Williams; five children, Carolyn, Valerie, Charles, John Jr., and Valerie Ann; six sisters, Margaret, Bessie, Jeanette, Constance Rosalyn and Rogena.

Other survivors include three uncles, Charles, Robert and Dennis Jr.; two aunts, Carrie Williams and Mrs. Joseph Armstrong; and a grandfather, Dennis Williams.

Burial was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

Flower-decked funeral for socialite

By MILDRED O'NEILL

PHILADELPHIA

Mrs. Lillian Cross Douglass, former Philadelphia socialite, was funeralized and buried in the manner she lived — amidst glamour and finery.

Monday night at modest Trinity AME Church in North Philadelphia several hundred mourners paid final tribute to their former neighbor and friend who, last week, lost a lingering and painful battle for her life. She was 40.

Mrs. Douglass, wife of Alfred Douglass, proprietor of Harlem's famed Red Rooster Cafe, lay in state at the church in a bronze casket lined with white satin.

* * *

HER SHROUD was a white chiffon dress, ballerina length with sequin top.

Her white gloves were elbow - length. She wore white shoes and in her hands were two large purple orchids.

There were 150 floral wreaths which covered almost the entire interior of the church.

One of the wreaths was from her former husband, Tommy Cross, an ex-prizefighter.

* * *

SHE MARRIED the New York businessman in 1956, following her divorce from Cross.

Approximately a year later she became ill and, despite extensive treatment by specialists and long periods in hospital, never fully regained her health.

Following her marriage to Douglass, who also was owner of the Douglass Hotel in NYC, the couple moved into a swank home in Englewood, N.J., across the river from Harlem.

Visitors described Douglasses' home as "a showplace," with all the embellishments which considerable wealth affords.

* * *

AMONG THE Douglasses' neighbors were Sarah Vaughan, the singer; Milton Berle and a number of other show personalities and nationally syndicated columnists.

The Rev. Isaac Patterson, Trinity pastor, officiated at the funeral. Burial was in Mount Lawn Cemetery, Sharon Hill, Pa.

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. Marvina Blue of Trenton, N.J., and Mrs. M. Williamson, stepmother.

REED CITED

'Won't need you,' coed says

PHILADELPHIA

"Dear Dad, when you get this letter I may be in jail; but I won't need you."

These were the words used by an assistant district attorney to describe the alleged involvement of students, both college and high school, in the fight to abolish racial discrimination.

Assistant District Attorney Thomas M. Reed told a gathering of approximately 500 persons at the annual banquet and awards convocation of 32nd and 33rd degree Masons, Friday night, of how his 20 - year - old daughter, a student at Howard University, risked jail to picket in Washington, D.C.

* * *

MR. REED, a member of the district attorney's staff since 1952, was cited by De Molay Consistory No. 1, as the "Distinguished Citizen of the Year."

The Consistory is composed of 32nd and 33rd degree Masons.

Using the action of his daughter, Miss Florence Reed, as an example of what young people are doing to combat racial bias, the assistant district attorney urged the Masons to support the Freedom Riders and Sit-In students.

Florence, along with her mother and three sisters heard Mr. Reed's speech.

"They are standing up where their elders failed to stand up, and will accept nothing less than complete citizenship for all," Mr. Reed declared.

* * *

THE DISTINGUISHED Citizen's Award to Mr. Reed was presented by Ralph H. Hobart C. Jackson, administrator for the Stephen Smith Home for the Aged, was the main speaker.

He said: "We must recognize that to obtain first-class citizenship we must approach the battle on all fronts.

"We must support all of our organizations, the NAACP, the Urban League and the United Negro College Fund — not one at the expense of the other."

MR. JACKSON added: "We must not be confused by being identified as' colored people when it gives us solidarity and strength to put over significant programs.

"We who for too long have been accustomed to being on the receiving end must begin to experience some of the real benefits and joys of citizenship."

Other speakers on the program included:

Father Jesse Anderson, rector, Saint Thomas Presbyterian Episcopal Church; William H. Harris Jr., William R. Venable, Emmett R. Bailey;

Henry D. Horner, Walter C. Beckett, the Rev. James W. Jenkins and William O. Holmes.

A NUMBER of Masons received citations and special awards.

The Consistory presented Mr. Jackson with a check to buy equipment for Stephen Smith Home.
