PSALM 9:1

Off The Beaten Path —

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

By Elizabeth M. Oliver

St. John's College students gathered on the Annapolis, Md. campus Wednesday night in sub-freezing weather to learn more about the Freedom Riders and sit-in demonstrations to continue their support of the movement.

Among speakers were Miss Marsha R. Hood, CIG coordinator in the Annapolis area; the Rev. Carlyle Haynes Meacham, pastor of the Unitarian Church, Annapolis; Mrs. Marita Carroll, a teacher at Bates High School and participant in adult demonstrations responsible in 1960 for opening the Annapolis bus terminal restaurant.

• • •

THERE ARE only 250 students enrolled in the college. Although colored students have been graduated in past years, there are none on the campus this semester.

Among those who went were some who have picketed restaurants in Annapolis since November, have been sprayed with fire hoses in freezing weather, subjected to abuses by restaurant owners.

• • •

CHILDREN of some of the nation's oldest and most respected families, they eagerly listened while Miss Hood reviewed the activities of the Baltimore Civic Interest Group since its founding on Morgan State College in 1960.

Her talk concluded with passages from Martin Luther King's book, "Stride Toward Freedom."

The Rev. Mr. Meacham disclosed plans for the publication of a list of 100 leading citizens in the Annapolis area who support Maryland legislation for public accommodations regulations.

To be published in the Annapolis daily paper, the full-page advertisement will also congratulate restaurants open to all patrons.

Mrs. Carroll revealed the difficulties the adult sit-in demonstrators have experienced in opening resturants.

Also on the program were CORE members from Baltimore.

A STUDY course on Christian Mission in Latin America was opened at Sharp Street Memorial Methodist Church on Wednesday, Jan. 10.

Sponsored by the Woman's Society of Christian Service, the course will run four weeks, meeting each Wednesday from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Miss Mary C. Allen was the first guest speaker. Other speakers include Mrs Esther Jackson, Mrs. Sara Rayne, Mrs. Myrtle Wake, Mrs. Virginia Smith is chairman, the Rev. Edward G. Carroll is pastor.

• • •

MRS. SARAH DIGGS was called to Atlantic City suddenly on Thursday. Her sister, Miss Julia Fernandez, who resides there is ill.

Mrs. Diggs has been substituting as a dormitory director at Morgan State College since November. She retired as director of Truth House in 1961.

Miss Fernandez, her twin, sister, recently inherited the home and priceless antiques from a wealthy companion who died last year.

An interesting person, she traveled with her companion around the world 10 times. Each year they spent early winter in Atlantic City but went abroad after January until Easter.

Tai rider—No. 5

Four cars were damaged, and a taxicab passenger suffered a minor injury Monday in an accident at Carey and Baker Sts.

The injured man, William Shelton 18, of 1226 Bonaparte Ave. was treated for a knee injury at Provident Hospital and released.

Mr. Shelton was riding in a cab driven by Thomas W. Alston, 39.

• • •

POLICE SAID the pile-up was caused when a late model automobile driven by Paul E. Garringer, an 18-year-old serviceman from Fort Sill, Okla., ran a red light and struck an automobile driven by Joseph P. Smith, 58, waiter of 2101 Bryant Ave. The impact of the crash forced the Smith car into the cab, which in turn struck an automobile driven by Harry Crystal, 39, a salesman of 4914 Belle Ave.

• • •

GARRINGER WAS charged with reckless driving, leaving the scene of an accident, running an automatic signal and driving without a license.

The car driven by the young serviceman was reported stolen from Harold W. Bebbe of Newark Valley, N. Y.

World unity is theme of Filson talk

World Unity was the key subject of J. W. Filson, representative of the world headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses, who spoke in Baltimore Sunday.

He directed the attention of the 1,911 persons in the audience to the failing unity in the United Nations today:

"Who remembers when the Security Council or the General Assembly could agree without a dissenting veto on any major issue?

Such disunity is dangerous to mankind: it not only leads toward wars and unhappiness, but holds back scientific progress and development, and is contrary to the purpose of man's Creator."

The discourse was the high point of the three-day convention held with delegates from some 19 Maryland cities and Baltimore area in attendance.

All it takes to be a big brother is a boy and a man

By FRANK HUNT

Sixteen - year - old Kelly wants to go to college to become a lawyer, a healthy ambition for a boy who is well - liked among his classmates and makes above average grades.

But just eight years ago Kelly was headed for a "bar" of another sort, and eventually, perhaps to the other side of the prison bars.

He was the prototype of Mark Twain's Tom Sawyer. Usually you could find him down by the waterfront looking at the ships when he should have been in school, and more often than not, he could be found within the boundaries of a "no trespass" sign.

His father was an alcoholic and had left home when the boy was five years old. His mother was a hard working domestic who just couldn't find time to keep up with the youngster.

His teachers looked upon him as a typical product of a broken home and shook their heads as he seemed destined to follow the path of many such unfortunates.

When Kelly's meanderings began to include petty theft, he came to the attention of the Juvenile Court Authorities, and then to the "Big Brothers of Baltimore, Inc."

Kelly's first Big Brother was a young lawyer who had been in the Navy and had traveled widely. Kelly was enchanted by tales of the sea and far places.

Later he had other "big brothers" — a salesman, a sales manager, and a social worker. But he never forgot his first real friend and his current ambition is based on that relationship.

• • •

IS KELLY'S case unusual? Not really, according to Francis Shevlin, executive director of Baltimore's Big Brothers Inc.

"A simple thing we all take for granted — a man's relationship to a boy — can mean the difference between a social liability or a social asset," he maintains.

He said about one - sixth of the population of the city are "Kelleys" — boys who come from homes where a father is missing, and who can be helped by "an older buddy".

• • •

THE QUESTION came into its biennial sharp focus this week, which is known as "Big Brother" Week. Twice a year the organization launches a drive to find that special type of man who "has what it takes to give what it takes".

"What it takes" Mr. Shevlin says, "is the ability to share oneself with a boy, be able to communicate with him, and provide him with a relationship which, because of his environment, he would not get."

A "Big Brother' must be a well - adjusted person capable of handling his own problems and responsibilities and of projecting an image of manliness and maturity to a youngster.

Profession or education does not play a part in the selection. The old nursery rhyme "Rich man, poor man, baker man" — with the next occupation necessarily omitted — describes aptly the kind of men who succeed as Big Brothers.

• • •

AND A PERSN with no more than an elem (tary school education can sometimes be more effective than a man with a doctorate degree in social work.

The present corps of "Big Brothers" currently include such disparate professions as lawyers, steelworkers, doctors, barbers, salesmen, an investment broker, and a member of the Maryland House of Delegates.

All of them have one thing in common — the realization that time shared with a youngster is hardly wasted.

• • •

"THE BIGGEST excuse we get is that I just don't have the time.' But it doesn't really take much time," Mr. Shevlin asserted.

"A Man can share his everyday hobbies and leisure time activities with a youngster and this in itself will provide a medium for the relationship," he pointed out.

In one case, a big brother who spent an average of 20 hours a month with his youthful charge actually spent only four hours extra time, that is, periods in which the due engaged in activities which were outside the man's normal routine.

The youth, who came to the organization as a 16-year-old on probation for a petty larceny charge, in 18 months became purposeful and forward - looking. He is currently in the Navy and is taking courses which will eventually lead to a high school diploma.

• • •

THE BIG BROTHER and the teenager attended sports events together, looked at television, had dinner at the man's house with his family, did yard work together.

But mostly they just talked. The boy found a willing ear for his problems and a wholehearted interest in his successes and failures. There was an important void filled in his life.

• • •

PERSONALITY - WISE, the Big Brother is not a "type". He is not a "Cheerful Charlie" or a "do - good-er", but a man who represents the norm — security and social acceptance — as contrasted to the abnormal situation in which a youth finds himself through no fault of his own.

The man and the boy are fitted together in terms of personality, religion, common interests, race, and age, so that the boy's identification with his older friend is made easy.

The 16-year-old whose ambition is to be a lawyer like his first Big Brother is an example of the kind of influence the friend can exert.

• • •

AT THE BOTTOM of any Big Brother - Little Brother relationship is a factor which must be keenly considered — that of the boy's relationship to his family.

While the man does not attempt to interpose himself between the boy and his mother or sisters and brothers, he must be aware of their place in the youngsters way of thinking.

• • •

IN ONE instance where a nine - year - old truant was referred to the organization, it was discovered that he hated his mother.

The woman, who had to work to support three other children, was unkempt and grossly fat. She had no patience with the youth and rather than discuss his problems with her, he would spend as much time away from home as possible.

The Big Brother actually persuaded the mother to lose weight as well as develop more patience with the youngster.

The boy is now in junior high school, his grades have improved 100 per cent, and one of his mother's new hobbies is painting water colors.

"The mother is basic to the whole set-up here. She gives the child the foundation of security he must have for us to be successful with him," the director of Big Brothers said.

• • •

THUS THE need for the kind of man who can work his way with such diverse circumstances becomes important.

"The most frustrating thing in the world for us is to have to turn away a boy we know we can help because we don't have a Big Brother to assign to him," Mr. Shevlin stated.

And the need, according to Big Brothers of Baltimore, Inc., can be filled by the majority of the thousands of men in the city.

Not miracle makers, they say. Just a man who can be a friend to a boy.

"The "miracle" will take care of itself.

Youth panel examines problems due to divorces

At the fourth City Wide Youth Forum, Andrea Hill, senior at Western High School presided over a panel of students concerned with "The Teenager Faces Family Problems".

Dr. Clifton R. Jones, sociologist of Morgan State College was moderator for the panel composed of David Williams, Carver Vocational High School, Melvin Ashe, and Betty Brown of Dunbar, and Sondra Banfield of Forest Park.

Should children be embarrassed to acknowledge divorce or separation of parents was the first question addressed to Dr. Jones.

This problem was described as one that was apt to suffer as much from community interpretation as from family tensions.

This has to be accepted as an increasingly growing way of dealing with parental difficulties. Implications vary from family to family. The teenager has to face this reality and not feel guilty about the action of his parents.

Mrs. Louis Johnson, representing the Me-De-So Wives, explained the scrapbook project on the colored American. Prizes are $20, $15, $10 and $5.

Instructions are available at the Madison Ave. YWCA and the Druid Hill YMCA. The contest closes on Tuesday May 8.

The Forum is sponsored by the Me-De-So Club, the YWCA, the YMCA, and the Urban League Family Life Project.

Mrs. Gilbert L. Banfield is chairman. Meetings are the first Friday of each month at the Madison Ave. YWCA. auditorium, from 7 to 9 p.m. All youths between the ages of 13 and 18 are welcome.

Duquesne wins Morgan debate

Duquesne University took the first place trophy in the Fourth Annual Tau Kappa Alpha debate Tournament, Saturday at Morgan State College.

The winners compiled a won and lost of 7-1 and 282 points to win the award.

William and Mary College, Norfolk, also recorded a 7-1 score, but amassed only 275 points to take the runner-up trophy. William and Mary also captured first place as the best negative team with 154 points.

St. Peters with a 4-0 record, took honors for the best affirmative team with 162 points.

Individual honors went to Miss Susanne Gastano, Marymount, with 84 points as the best affirmative speaker; and Larry Sherman, University of Pittsburgh with 88 points as the best negative speaker.

The four rounds of debating was the topic: "Resolved: that labor unions should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation."

Other schools participating were: Brooklyn, CCNY, Morehouse, Randolph Macon, St. John's (Jamaica, L.I.) W.C. Post, Morgan State.

Also American, Delaware, George Washington, Howard, Johns Hopkins, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Rutgers and St. John's, Brooklyn.

CAMPUS NOTES

Semester examinations at Morgan on Jan. 22

Morgan State students look forward to semester examinations scheduled for Jan. 22.

An exhibit, "Perceptions and Visual Expression," will be on display at Murphy Fine Arts Center, beginning Jan. 15.

Also on display are staff and faculty collections.

Dr. Raymond Bamford, dean of the University of Maryland Graduate School, recently talked with seniors in the Student Union.

The music department holds its annual recital in Murphy Auditorium Jan. 17 at 10 a.m. Compositions are written by the students.

Kappa Karavan is scheduled for the refectory Jan. 19, 8:45 p.m.

Personality:

Who said athletes were all brawn?

Raymond Jones, a track star, who is a history major, also writes poetry in his spare time.

Mr. Jones who won two track metals in New York at the recent Weschester Tournament, is also an avid jazz fan, and has done independent study into historical problems.

Cultural activities held at Morgan State

Romantic music from the 19th century German composer Robert Schumann was demonstrated by Mrs. Elizabeth Katzenellenbogen, adjunct professor of Music at Goucher College, during the Student Assembly in Murphy Auditorium at Morgan State on Wednesday.

The pianist first gave a brief lecture on "music in which the personal feelings of the composer are expressed strongly and subjectively" before her performance. She then played twenty movement selected from Schumann's "The Carnaval."

"Perception and visual expression" is the theme of the exhibition in the Murphy Fine Art Galleries at Morgan beginning Jan. 15 through Feb. 5.

The show makes use of texts, graphic analyses, reproductions and photographs to stimulate greater understanding of the visual arts.

PURPOSING TO "raise the level of scholarship in undergraduate chapters by offering awards to undergraduate brother who exemplify excellence in scholarship and leadership qualities," the Pi Omega Chapter of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity has named four recipients of awards totaling $750.

The awards were made in McKeldin Union Building Thursday. George L. Bennett, former Basileus of the Pi Omega Chapter, made the awards address.

The Morgan students receiving the cash honors are: Walter E. Morgan, $300 for the highest cumulative average above B; Henry A. Blackwell, $250 for the second highest cumulative average above B; Samuel McNeill, $150, third; and Louis G. Abney, $50 for incentive.

Members of the Pi Omega Scholarship Committee are Clarence J. Fields, chairman, Earl L. Hagen, hasiljus, John J. Cardwell, Robert L. Gill and Richard I. McKinney.

Education for jobs discussed

Albert Whiting, dean of Morgan State college discusses the question of "how far colored persons should go up the educational ladder, considering today's job situation" on the Know Your Facts broadcast Sunday over Station WEBB, 2:15 - 2:30 p.m.

The program is sponsored by the Baltimore Urban League in co-operation with that radio station, as a public service.

Hopkins to build unified eye center

Plans for construction of a $1,200,000 eye research building at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore, providing the world's largest unified research center for the study of the eye, have been announced by Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, president of the Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Eisenhower said that the new building will, for the first time, enable integrated teams of medical scientists to work on the major causes of blindness within a single research facility.

Since study of the eye provides valuable diagnostic aids for tracking a variety of diseases, he declared, future research findings should "contribute to advances in the entire field of medicine."

Carver upgrades courses to meet industry's needs

In Carver Vocational-Technical High School, Pressman and Bentalou Sts., meeting the educational requirements demanded of its graduates by industry today?

Carver, according to its principal, Dr. Saul Perdue, is keeping up with demands for better educated workers by "upgrading" the courses already being taught.

"I honestly believe the courses we are offering here supply the needs of our students," Dr. Perdue said.

Carver students come from all walks of life, with varying degrees of educational background.

• • •

WHAT Dr. Perdue means by upgrading is adding to the course new information that will enable students to cope with today's problems.

For example, in dry cleaning is simply not throwing clothes in a pressing hopper. The study of fabric chemistry is being required of students. They are taught how and what chemicals best remove certain stains.

"Stainer removers can draw salaries of $100 or more a week," Dr. Perdue added.

For girls taking food preparation and service, cooking is now a small part of their learning. Students are learning economical purchasing, marketing, keeping records, management public relations and supervision of tea rooms.

Putting the course on a self-supporting basis gives students added experience in handling money.

STUDENTS studying cosmetology are now required to know something of hair tint chemicals, manicuring, shampooing, facial and body massages.

These skills will ready them for the state Board examinations to become licensed operators.

Dr. Perdue cited other examples of upgrading in carpentry, dressmaking, business and distributive education, all geared to give students information that will best equip them for their chosen fields today.

In electronics, so necessary in this space age, Carver has combined into a common tenth grade, students in electrical construction, radio television and maintenance.

Here they study various kinds of circuits and the workings of magnetism and electricity.

However, the bulk of this field is taught at Mergenthaler Vocational-Technical Senior High School, 35th St. and Hillen Rd.

Under "Title eight," the government subsidizes a program to prepare students for the technical fields. Mergenthaler students prepare for the jobs of tomorrow.

Carver does not have the Title Eight program because Dr. Perdue says, "We do not have enough people who want it."

Dr. Perdue feels this is because colored students believe there are no jobs opened to them as technicians.

"They tend to seek the softer, sweeter—easier jobs," he added.

The discriminatory policies of some trade unions in the past has also prevented colored persons from getting jobs, Dr. Perdue said.

"More of us must develop an appreciation for this technical kind of work," the principal urged.

With more opportunities opening up, Dr. Perdue feels pupils should become more acquainted with the technical fields, enter into them and seek the jobs that are becoming available.

Two job coordinators and the teachers are all busy now seeking new job opportunities for graduates and students still in school, Dr. Perdue said.

"I think, however, if Baltimore is to continue to meet these needs of industry we must develop a technical institute and offer most of our technical work in the 13-14 grades—on a junior college level.

There is good reason for high school students to force specializing until finishing the 12th grade.

"SOME of these reasons are a desire to have a broad education.

"Another is that employment opportunities are limited for teenagers finishing high school too early.

"And the quality of mathematics and science can be better met by more mature high school students," Dr. Perdue explained, as a third reason.

Automation, too, will affect workers both young and old, who will have to be retrained after a shake-down period, Dr. Perdue said.

Despite these things, the job picture will grow increasingly brighter for students as they continue in education, Dr. Perdue believes.
