Miss Loretta Irene Dorsey scores triumphat Museum

By ADAH K. JENKINS

Charm, talent and superior training combined to make Loretta Irene Dorsey's appearance at the Baltimore Museum of Art a cherished experience.

In a white brocade l a c e gown the pretty lyric soprano was most gracious without any artificiality. S h e held her audience through a long and difficult program t h a t included arias from three operas, a mass and a motet, as well as groups of German and English art songs.

Only in the last aria from the modern opera "Susannah" was there even t h e slightest evidence of strain or tiredness.

Loretta has the bel canto qualities well suited to t h e early Italian classics w i t h which she opened her recital, as well as to the intricate Baroque flights of Mozart.

Her "Alleluia" from t h e latter's motet had an effortless fluency as well as a sense of exhilaration that goes far beyond the notes.

"Incarnatus est" (w a s made incarnate) from the Mozart C minor Mass is an exacting work for the experienced singer.

One can imagine what Miss Dorsey will add to it in spirituality as the years of study and living are added to her present gifts.

The playing of Wilda Heiss, flutist, with this aria gave ample display to the exquisite beauty of the composition.

The singer's power of expression and general sensitivity was apparent in t h e "Farewell" aria from "Traviata" and the "Monica" aria from the contemporary opera "The Medium".

• • •

HER SCHUBERT leider (art songs) a true test f o r the vocalist, showed depth of mood and ability at projection that auger well for the future, "Go way from my Window" and the coquettish "My Laddie" from the group of English songs were well received also.

Loretta Dorsey is a scholar ship student at Peabody where she is majoring in Music Education and is a v o l e e student with Mme. Duschak.

Tom Russell, also a Peabody student of attainments, proved a well trained a n d sympathetic accompanist. He was accorded warm applause for his solo appearance in Schubert's "Impromptu in G flat major".

A large and distinguished audience of friends of the co - sponsors, the Jack and Jill of America, Inc. and the Baltimore Museum of A r t, gave the young singer hearty appreciation.

FRIDAY and Saturday, Feb. 9th and 10th, 8:15 p.m. The Lyric, the comic grand opera, "The Marriage of Figaro", by Mozart, with t h e Baltimore Civic Opera Company.

The libretto (story of t h e opera) which was written on the eve of the French Revolution, represents the plain people getting the better of t h e aristocracy. Leading roles will be taken by imported and local soloists of rank.

The chorus, which is interracial, is conducted by Rodney Hansen and Carol Lynn is training the ballet. Rosa Ponselle is artistic director Otto Verner Mueller, of Canada, guest conductor and Russell C. Wonderlic, president of the opera company.

In the Figaro cast are LaVergne Monette, soprano, formerly of Louisiana, Bette Hankin, mezzo soprano w h o is well known to local audiences and William DuPree, tenor, who appeared with Singing Sergeants at Morgan State College several years ago, if memory serves us.

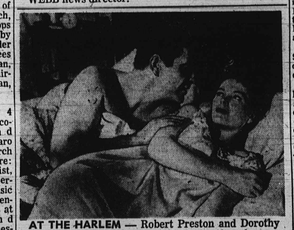
SUNDAY, Feb. 11 at 8:30 p.m. at Cathalic University, Washington, D.C., Peabody Echange concert. Performing will be the Conservatory Orchestra, with F. Sanz Guerrero conducting, the Chamber Orchestra, directed by William Jeagy, Jeanette Walters' and Mabel Lewis, soprano soloists, Ruslana Antonovicz and John Beyers, pianists and Robert Dure, tenor.

• • •

SUNDAY, Feb. 18 at 5 p.m. in Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, Madison Ave. near Gold St., Jeanette Walters, soprano, w i l l be presented in concert by the choir of the church.

This gifted soloist, who is a junior at Peabody Conservatory won second place in the recent regional Metropolitan Opera auditions.

SAMMY JAY, right, wellknown WEBB personality, in addition to his regular duties at WEBB, will work with the growing sales and promotion staff for American Beer and Shannon Cream Stout. Sammy joins Evelyn Campbelle, who, as special sales representative for the American Brewery, is the first woman to represent a local brewery in dealer sales contact work. The third member of the American Brewery "team" is Edmund S. Dorsey, WEBB news director.



AT THE HARLEM — Robert Preston and Dorothy McGuire star as the husband and wife who encounter marital difficulties in Warner Bros.' Technicolor comedy - drama, "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs," at the Harlem Theatre. Based on William Inge's smash Broadway success, t h e film marks Preston's return to the screen after his award - winning triumph in the stage hit "The Music Man."
