Scrabble Club four score at colorful valentine fete

with Lula Jones Garrett

The Scrabble Club did it again!

The Kappa House was the setting for the third annual Valentine party given by the club. Red and white mobiles of hearts, cupids and arrows twirled from the ceiling.

Keeping the color scheme of red and white, the ladies made a pretty picture dancing around the club room in frocks of red or white. The men matched the decor by wearing bright red ties that made a striking contrast against their dark suits.

Aside from dancing, dining and sippin' the evening was highlighted by the showing of film from last year's Valentine party.

The Scrabble Club members number just four! They are Alice Dodson, who was dashing in a red brocade sheath with splashes of gold; Phyllis Harcum, most attractive in a white shantung sheath accented with a self rose; Bettye Shelton, who was stunning in a white rayon sheath with raised silver design; and Samuel Harcum, who set the pace for men with slim knotted red tie.

Also participating as a hostess was Sadie Jenkins, a former member, who was charming in a frothy white dress of nylon organdy with rhinestone bodice.

Guests were:

Messrs. and Mesdames Earl, Warner, Milton Rice, Robert McIntosh, William Bevans, Stewart Smith, Wendell White, Joseph Felton, Samuel Harcum Sr., Toledo Mosely, Jesse Moody,

Messrs. and Mesdames John Willis, Moses Belin, William Bailey, Otto Silva, Irvin Thomas, Charles Morris, Jimmy Adams, Bernard Smith, Carl Thornton, Maxwell Dowell, Charles Dowdy, Donald Dodson and Randolph Taylor of Washington;

Misses Marjorie Shelton, Geneva Cole, Blanche Redd and Sarah Cameron; Warren Hobbs, Donald Spellman, and Elson Dawson.

GEORGE BROOKE BARRICK will exhibit his portraits at the Arena Playhouse downtown during the current Arena Players production now through Sunday night.

Mr. Barrick was born in Rosemont, Pa., where he received his early education. He attended Radnor Township High School, showing promises of artistic talent. Here he was chosen winner of the scholastic arts award over contestants from Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland area. His first place sketch, done in pencil was subsequently exhibited at Carnegie Institute in Pittsburgh, Pa.

After high school, he enrolled at the Tyler Institute of Temple University in nearby Philadelphia. Since gaining the Bachelor of Science and the Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree at Tyler, Mr. Barrick has continued graduate studies here and at other branches of the University.

Mrs. Morsell, 81, believes a girl can stay young keeping busy

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

Mrs. Elizabeth Oliver Morsell, 513 Sanford Place, received the Armed Services citation in 1946 and was also cited by the American Red Cross for spending 2,000 hours as a volunteer nurse.

These are just a few of the certificates she has received in a lifetime of doing things for others.

ON FEB. 2, Mrs. Morsell marked her 81st birthday. She retired from volunteer nursing service only three years ago to delve into other things.

"I have always been busy. I like working at something. I'll always be that way. It keeps one young," she says.

MRS. MORSELL began as a small girl at home in Pikesville, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Oliver had a farm by selling flowers, curds and buttermilk to neighbors.

THE OLDEST of six children, small Elizabeth helped add to the family income by learning to sew a fine seam and as the years went by became an expert seamstress.

She married Foreman Oliver, a cousin, who was president of his class at Lincoln University. Mr. Oliver died while their children were young.

Then came the nursing career she adopted in addition to sewing. She received volunteer nurses honors at Provident Hospital and was canned a Gray Lady at Perry Point Veterans Hospital.

Other honors came from Crownsville State Hospital where she also served.

After marriage to a second husband, Benjamin Morsell, a retired postal worker, Mrs. Morsell took up arts and crafts as a hobby.

UNTIL TODAY, she makes dolls of all kinds, complete with the clothes she sews by hand; baskets, corsages, real and artificial flowers, table cloths from dish cloths.

A member of the Seventh Day Adventist Berean Temple Church at Madison Ave. and Robert St., she is active in the Dorcas Society and the Berean Guild.

She has three daughters, Mrs. Loretta Valentine, who is associated with Summers Florists; Miss Madge Oliver, 1407 Myrtle Ave.; Mrs. Katherine Oliver Johnson, widow of Dr. Carson Johnson, and mother of Dr. Carson Carl Johnson, Jr., a Boston, Mass. psychiatrist.

And then there are her sisters, Mrs. Bessie Gunther who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Edith Eblewine in New York City; Mrs. Frances Frye, mother of Mrs. Ry Burns, the florist, who resides 2336 Pennsylvania Ave., Baltimore.

Grandchildren include Walter Lewis, a detective, Mrs. Zerita Williams Adams, secretary for Brown Allen and Watts Law Firm; Michael Vlaentine, 16, a City College student.

Great grandchildren are Edwards and Ronald Williams, Wanda Lewis, Karen Adams, the newst addition to Lewis and Clyde Kennard the group who arrived on Dec. 30, 1961.
