Tidewater group scores in presentatio of messiah

By ADAM K. JENKINS

The sweeping splendor and beauty of "Messiah" took on new significance when heard on a recent Sunday with the Tidewater A Cappella Choir at the Presbyterian Church of Easton, Md.

Under the compelling direction of Daniel Ridout Jr., the interracial, interfaith 50 voice choir sang with rare dedication. Using spare, but emphatic gestures the conductor, who teaches at Easton High School and is the son of the Rev. Mr. Ridout, director of our own Great Hymns Choir) held his forces under excellent control.

Guest soloists for the evening were Madeline Bolden, soprano; Vivian Ridout Bonsey, contralto, and Clyde knotts, tenor. Thomas Myers, bass, is a member of the choir.

Although the dramatic burden of "Messiah" rests upon the chorus, the great arias, especially in Part I, are no less demanding vocally and emotionally. The soloists met them with more than adequate results. Mesdames Bolden and Boney and Mr. Knotts are graduates of Morgan State College.

EXCELLENT accompaniments were supplied by Elva Waters, organist of the church, and Hansonia Caldwell, guest pianist. The latter who graduated last week from Eastern High School, played the involved score with assurance and appreciation. Her careful shading and phrasing in the "Pastoral Symphony" was deserving of special mention.

Following an appeal by the Rev. Phillip K. Foster, pastor of the Presbyterian Church and a member of the chorus, eight listeners from the capacity audience applied for membership in the choir.

During the Easter season The Tidewater A Cappella Choir will present Dubois' "Seven Last Words." Rehearsals are held at Asbury Methodist Church in Easton.

Following the service an informal reception was held in the hall of the new modernistic church.

THE ANNUAL technical examination and audition sponsored by the Piano Teachers Activity Group was held on a recent Sunday in the studio of Mrs. Gladys W. Davis on Harlem Ave.

Miss Louise Carlson, of the Baltimore Music Teachers Association and the music department of the local public schools, was the judge.

Arranging the audition were: Mesdames Gwendolyn Lassiter, Katrine White, Alma J. Caswell and Gladys Davis.

At the annual mid - winter concert sponsored by the Activity Group the following pupils played: Sondra Means, Cassandra Costley, Veronica Grafton, Edwina Harmond, Griselda Johnson, Linda Grant, Sancona Haywood, Monica Jones, Bruce Hawkins, Edwina Moorehead, Myra Wood, Valerie Waters.

Avvetta Richardson, Marsha Henson, Eileen Turner, Cynthia Hawkins, Virginia Moore, James Green, Carol Mitchell, Joan Brooks, Targia Johnson, Courtney Jackson, DeLysa Lassiter and and a member of the chorus, eight listeners from the

AT REGENT — Deborah Kerr feels something or someone not of this world is spying upon her in Jack Clayton's ghostly drama, "The Innocents." The 20th Century - Fox presentation, based on Henry James' classic chiller, "The Turn Of The Screw," now at the Regent Theater. The woman seated in the rear (Clytie Jessop) died under mysterious circumstances in this very house.

AT NEW ALBERT — TWO GUN JORDAN: That's what they call the inimitable Louis Jordad in Astor's "Lookout Sister." There's fun galore in store for you all this week at the New Albert Theatre.

Deborah Kerr stars in 'Turn of Screw'

Jack Clayton, who did such a masterful job of direction on the award - winning "Room At The Top," has taken Henry James 'classic of eerie suspense, "The Turn Of The Screw," and fashioned a macabre chiller entitled, "The Innocents." The 20th Century-Fox ghostly drama stars Deborah Kerr and is now at the Regent Theater.

As an English governess caring for two unusual children, Miss Kerr carries the only starring role and is on the screen 90 of the film's 99 minutes.

'Lookout Sister' at New Albert

Louis Jordan's recently completed western with music, "Lookout Sister," has the pick of Hollywood's beauties and this can be easily verified all this week at the New Albert theatre.

The beauties appear in the supporting cast of Jordan's latest Astor Pictures which Berle-Adams produced and Bud Pollard directed.

'Deadly Duo' starts today at M t

A beautiful woman plots the murder of her identical twin in the highly dramatic "Deadly Duo," a United Artists release, opening today at the Met Theatre today. The main feature is Billy Wilder's "One, Two, Three" a comedy starring James Cagney.

'Colossus of Rhodes' playing at Harlem

In the year 224 B.C., a gigantic bronze statue more than 100 feet high, representing Apollo, the Sun God, which had been erected at the entrance to the port of Rhodes, near Asia Minor, was toppled by a spectacular

Miss Walters in concert Sunday

At 5 p.m., Sunday, The Madison Ave. Presbyterian Church will be the scene of a triumphant homecoming for Miss Jeanette M. Walters, operatic soprano.

Miss Walters will be presented in concert by the choir, to which she also belongs.

It is her first appearance since winning second place and a $350 prize in the Metropolitan Opera Regional Auditions in Washington last month.

The 20 - year - old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Walters of 1631 Normal Ave., got her early voice training while singing with the church choir. She's now a third - year student at Peabody Conservatory of Music.

Sammy Jr. set for 'Playboy Penthouse'

"Playboy Penthouse," a show inspired by Playboy Magazine and featuring the tops in musical entertainment will open on WJZ-TV tomorrow (Saturday), at 11:15 p.m.

Background for the entertainment is a lavish penthouse party, but the emphasis is on the top names in show business.

A few who will appear during the opening weeks are Vic Damone, Sammy Davis Jr., The Limeliters, Woody Herman, Roberta Sherwood and the Dave Brubeck Quartet.

AT HARLEM — Lea Massari leads Rory Calhoun to believe that she is in love with him in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's spectacular new release, "The Colossus of Rhodes," now playing at the Harlem. Filmed on a massive scale in SupertotalScope and color, the picture depicts the conflict between the people of ancient Rhodes and invading Phoenicians.

No demonstrationsset on Shore

A not - so-quiet revolution is taking place on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

In the wake of eight Freedom Rides, to what has been termed "Maryland's other half," things are happening.

"There's a real change in the way people are thinking now. Both colored and white people are looking at race relations harder than they ever have. And the die-hards even if they don't like what's happening, can no longer ignore it," a Cambridge minister said.

In Cambridge, where townspeople attacked picketers in four weeks of demonstrations, the local Equal Opportunities Commission and NAACP leaders have met and called a temporary halt to demonstration activities.

This week there will be no demonstrations in Cambridge.

"They asked for a period of calm in which 'quiet negotiations' could take place," said Freddy St. Clair, co-chairman of the Cambridge Non-Violent Action Group.

"Well, now they've got it. We'll see what happens."

The meeting between the EOC and the NAACP was itself a precedent.

The integrated race relations group had taken a back seat in the racial strife which shook the Dorchester County Seat. They had contended that nothing could be done until the demonstrations had stopped.

In the interim, the Cambridge CIG is working on voter registration in the heavily colored populated Fifth Ward.

• • •

IN CHESTERTOWN, Kent County seat, another town which gave Baltimore demonstrators a warm reception, an NAACP branch is quietly dickering for negotiations with Mayor Phillip G. Wilmer.

The Mayor has staunchly refused to talk with the colored leaders so far. He stated that he "feels that" the colored people here are happy and we're happy with them."

The Rev. F. J. Jones, president of the newly - organized NAACP branch said the group is contemplating a boycott. He and other leaders feel such a move would be highly effective in the town of 4,000, where two of the county's largest food industries employ a large percentage of the colored population.

"But I think he (the Mayor) will come around," the Rev. Mr. Jones said.

• • •

CHESTERTOWN'S colored townspeople have been joined by white students from the integrated Washington College, which is located in the town.

Some 30 students have regularly participated in NAACP meetings and the demonstrations.

"We can't walk downtown alone now. We have to go in groups," said a 20 - year-old junior from Salisbury.

"It's hard not to take part in a movement like this, when you realize the world-wide implications it has. Most of the students are in favor of it even if they don't join," he said.

There were two weekend demonstrations in Chestertown, where a group of demonstrators were chased through the streets two weeks ago. Last week's demonstration was quiet, as some 120 state troopers patrolled the area.

Baltimore CIG will not return to Chestertown this weekend, but there remains a possibility of local demonstrations.

• • •

IN EASTON, in Talbott County, restaurateurs have hardened their stand. Last week they announced that they would not desegregate until a state law made it mandatory for them to do so.

Their statement has produced a similar hardened stand from the colored community, which has been demonstrating against segregated eating places over the past four weeks.

Last week some 40 students participated. About 60 are expected to demonstrate this weekend, according to local sources.

Meanwhile the townspeople are looking forward to a meeting of the Town Council Monday night, during which Mayor Sherwood Hubbard is likely to make an announcement concerning a proposed bi-racial committee.

The Mayor announced that he would appoint such a committee two weeks ago. In a recent statement, however, he indicated that he had set no deadline for the formation of such a group.

The colored community has set up an advisory committee to consult with the proposed bi - racial committee.

• • •

CLARENCE STRONG, a local businessman who chairs the advisory committee is optimistic about race relations in the community.

"I think the restaurant owners will see the necessity of de-segregating, with or without a law," he said.

Other members indicated that they felt the bi - racial committee proposal is a delaying tactic and, if the mayor actually plan to appoint a group, he will carry out the procedure over an unnecessary lengthy period of time.

PVT. LEROY ALEXANDER EVANS, one of 16 children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Evans of Calvert County, is stationed in Seattle, Wash., was home on furlough recently. He was formerly an Annapolis barber before entering the services.

New Spriggs pay bill headed for Senate okey

ANNAPOLIS — A Senate joint resolution, asking the State to compensate Horace Alexander Spriggs who was imprisoned three years for a crime he did not commit, was headed for Senate passage this week.

Senator James A. Pine (D. Baltimore), chairman of the Finance Committee, said Wednesday the resolution would be brought to the Senate floor, amended to recommend payment of $40 a week for three years to Mr. Spriggs on a weekly basis.

The resolution, as introduced by Senators J. Alvin Jones (D. 4th D., Balto.) and J. Raymond Buffington (D. 3rd D., Balto.), has asked that the Board of Public Works be authorized to grant Mr. Spriggs payment in the amount it deemed appropriate.

Senator Pine is majority floor leader, and little if any Senate opposition is expected.

• • •

A SIMILAR resolution, introduced by Mrs. Verda F. Welcome (D. 4th D., Balto.) is in the House of Delegates' Ways and Means Committee.

Meanwhile, identical resolutions asking State compensation for Edward Higgins Jr., who was pardoned recently after unjust imprisonment for 14 months, reached the Senate and House Tuesday.

They were brought in by Senators Jones and Paul A. Dorf (D. 5th D., Balto.), and by Mrs. Irma G. Dixon and Bernard Imber (both D. 4th D., Balto.)

U.S. benefits? Are Marylanders discouraged on

Troy Brailey, NAACP labor chairman and president of the local Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, says he is cooperating with Congressman Charles C. Diggs in encouraging more colored citizens in the South to take advantage of federal benefits to which they are entitled.

Recently Congressman Diggs (D., Mich.) said he was concerned because many persons were not taking advantage of such benefits as social security, civil service opportunities and veteran's benefits.

He said "a substantial part of the problem is caused by people on a local level actually discouraging them from obtaining proper information and it adds up to an annual loss of millions of dollars."

Mr. Brailey announced this week that he had provided Congressman Diggs with some concrete examples of such discouragement in the Baltimore area.

Mr. Brailey invites anyone with such complaints to visit him at the NAACP office or call him at LA. 3-8503.

On Feb. 22, he'll introduce the Charlie Mingus Jazz Workshop to Baltimoreans at Johns Hopkins University in a program presented by the YMCA at Schriver Hall.

Mike will also host the premier of the Henry Levy Concert Jazz Band at a local night club on March 5 and the appearance of Cannonball Adderley and his group at Morgan State College on March 25.

Ask home for aged on Dorchester Rd.

An appeal to operate an old age home at 3900 Dorchester Rd. is scheduled to be heard Tuesday by the Board of Municipal and Zoning Appeals.

The past Tuesday, the Board rejected an appeal to operate a beauty shop at 733 N. Gilmor St.

Approval was given, however, to use a garage at 1905 Poplar Grove St. for a car wash establishment.
