Md. state crown Tan bowler wins

Raymond 'Rickey' Taylor won the Maryland State Match Game Bowling Championship this week at Silver Hill. He averaged 202 for 24 games and will represent the state in the coming National Game Championship in Kansas City, Mo.

Taylor is the first colored bowler to win the coveted title. He represented Town Center.

Margaret Uncles, last year's women's division winner, placed third in his year's competition.

EAST LANSING, Mich. — The Michigan State - Purdue football game Saturday, involves 27 colored players on the two teams — 16 on Michigan State and 11 on Purdue.

Views Monday fight as true Pier-6 brawl

Boxing commissioner Paul G. Sullivan of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission says that the Joey Giardello - Johnny Morris fight at the Civic Center on Monday night, has "all the makings of a pier - six brawl".

Queried about Johnny Morris, Penn State middleweight champion, Sullivan said:

"MORRIS IS a hard - hitting fighter. He's fast and he is accurate. I have seen him in several of his fights and great interest."

"He is not very well known outside the state of Pennsylvania. However, that shouldn't fool the Baltimore fans.

"Morris took the state title from Jimmy Beecham and it was a hard won contest. Beecham is known, particularly in the East, for his speed and experience," he explained.

• • •

"GIARDELLO IS an experienced fighter and, in the ring can handle himself as well as any middleweight we have around today. These two should give Baltimore fight fans their money's worth," he said.

"Morris is 24 years old and has been boxing since he was 15. He turned professional in 1956 and won the State title four years later.

IN SAN JUAN — Frank Forbes, who recently was named assistant farm director of the Washington Senators "baseball club," was in San Juan, Puerto Rico, last week, on his first major assignment for the ball club. Forbes represented President Pete Quesada of the Senators at the dedication of the new new Hi Birthorn Stadium. More than 20,000, largest crowd in the history of island baseball saw the dedicatory game in which Ponce beat San Juan 6-2.

Carver coach sees Cubs 'about ready to jell now'

"I have a feeling we're about ready to jell now. And if that happens, Edmondson may look for trouble."

That is the attitude of Carver coach Charley Robinson as his Cubs prepare to take the field this afternoon (Friday) against Edmondson on the latter's field.

• • •

Neither the Carver nor the Edmondson eleven has won in Maryland Scholastic Association play this year, so both are extremely anxious to break the ice.

Because of the similarity in records (Carver 0-2-1 and Edmondson 0-3-1) both Robinson and Edmondson tutor Ron Siegert feel that today's game is the big chance.

• • •

"WE'VE BEEN woefully consistent," declares Robinson, "and not nearly so bad as the record implies. We've had flashes of good football — the kind I know the boys are capable of playing—then seizures of bad play.

"Just when we appeared to be on the right track, we'd make a mistake and find ourselves right back where we just about ready to jelle're started. I'm pretty sure we're just about ready to jell now, though."

THE CUBS, who complete their schedule next Friday with the traditional game at Douglass, were Division B champions in 1961.

They have been far off the form which carried them to that title this season—LACY.

MISS CHARLAYNE HUNTER

Georgia university students note only social bars remain

By CHARLAYNE HUNTER

ATHENS, Ga. —(ANP)— The four colored students registered as freshmen at the University of Georgia in September have many comments about their first few day as college students.

But they have little to say about their experience as colored students in a predominately white school because they say "there's really nothing to tell."

Part of this is explained by 21-year-old white graduate student and a resident of Athens who said that white students aren't "necessarily ignoring the colored students, they just plain don't notice them."

• • •

"THERE IS A small minority of students who still feel hostility toward colored people in general, and therefore to colored students at the University in particular," the student said.

But she went on to say that "there is a small minority of students who are conscientiously trying to break down barriers of tension and antagonism."

"What she means," another student quipped, "is that Georgia students pay very little attention to anything."

The routine that the colored students follow is the same for all freshmen. They have a 15-hour, three class academic load and a physical education class.

• • •

HAROLD BLACK, an 18-year-old honor graduate of Atlanta's Washington High School, is the only one of the four colored students participating in a partially extra - curricular activity.

He plays clarinet in the AFROTC band, tied in with his Air Science military requirement.

The other three are Alice Henderson, 18 and Keny Ruskin, 17, honor graduates of Howard and Turner High Schools, respectively; and Mary Blackwell, an 18-year-old graduate of Athens High and Industrial School.

Also an honor graduate, Miss Blackwell plans to major music. She lives at home with her parents.

• • •

BLACK, WHO lives in Reed Hall, a freshman dormitory, is planning to follow a pre-law course at Georgia, while Miss Henderson and Miss Ruskin have not decided on any particular field of concentration.

The two coeds share a suite with your reporter, on the first floor of Center Myers Hall, a freshman dormitory.

A senior, I have lived at Center Myers and Hamilton Holmes Hall since I enrolled in Jan., 1961.

Holmes chose to live in Athens and has remained there the entire two years he has been a student at Georgia.

We are both well pleased that more colored students have entered the university and hope that many more will take advantage of the excellent educational facilities of our state university system.

• • •

THIS PAST summer, eight colored students, in addition to Miss Hunter, studied at Georgia. Most of these students, counselors and teachers from Atlanta, were registered in graduate school and a special workshop for counselors.

One of these eight, Miss Frances Early, a teacher at John Hope Elementary School in Atlantic, received a master's degree in music education.

The four freshmen report that evidences of hostility on the campus are very minor. They use all of the facilities of the university. They all may eat in the university dining hall, and usually do, since freshmen are required to buy meal tickets.

• • •

THE BARRIERS, and those likely to fall last, are social. Although the colored students have made friends among the students, they are excluded from most social affairs, except those sponsored by the religious organizations on the campus.

"We are probably better off than most students," Miss Rushin said, "in that we have so little to keep us from our studies." The campus students have much more social contact, however, than those who live off campus.

"They are required to attend dormitory meetings and periodic parties given in, and by, the dormitory. And generally the students who live off campus eat at home, rather than in the university dining hall or snack bars."

• • •

TO MOST OF the questions about conditions at the University of Georgia, the colored people give a short curt reply: "Things are just fine."

They give much more enthusiastic answers to questions related to their class work — which so far is good — or to the Georgia football team, the Bulldogs — which so far is not so good.

They are quick to remind you that they are merely four more students added to the 9,000 who are simply trying to get through "that rough fall quarter."

All of which leads one to conclude that of the experiences at the present of four colored freshmen in a predominately white school, "there's nothing more to tell."

Friends in 6 states aid 'locked out' Va. students

PHILADELPHIA — Many communities spread over six states are playing host for this school year to 30 teenagers who have been excluded from public education in their home community of Prince Edward County, Va., for a fourth year.

These youngsters, all with ambition for higher education, represent the American Friends Service Committee's third successive emergency placement program.

They are located at the Foundation School, Berea College, Ky.; several communities in the greater Boston area as well as in Springfield and New Bedford, Mass; Iowa City, Iowa; Yellow Springs and Dayton, Ohio; Baltimore, Md.; and Media, Pa.

• • •

THEY REPRESENT a fraction of many hundreds of colored students in Prince Edward County who have been deprived of public instruction in their own neighborhood since the county board of education closed all public schools in 1959 rather than comply with an order to desegregate.

The following year, the American Friends Service Committee created its emergency placement service. This Quaker agency is dedicated to easing community tensions as well as conducting international relief and reconciliation programs.

During the school year of 1960, AFSC was able to place 47 youngsters in communities where their secondary education could be continued without interruption. In the 1961-62 school year the schools remained closed again, and 37 colored high school students were placed. This year 30 have been accommodated.

Juvenile delinquency cases drop

WASHINGTON — For the first time in 13 years, the number of juvenile delinquency cases coming before juvenile courts has shown a slight drop, Mrs. Katherine B. Oettinger announced this week.

"Our figures for 1961," she said, "show a 1 percent drop, nationwide, in the number of these cases coming before the courts in a year when the child population was increasing by 3 percent.

"This data certainly gives us no room for complacency. We can't by any means be sure that we have turned the corner so far as preventing and controlling juvenile delinquency is concerned. What we can hope is that data for next year, which will reflect the first full calendar year of the operation of the President's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime, will show a positive breakway from past patterns."

WITH PEACE CORPS — Miss Myrna Spencer, Taboro, N.C., a recent June graduate of A. and T. College, visited the college recently prior to her departure for Chile where she will work with the U. S. Peace Corps. Miss Spencer has completed her orientation training in Puerto Rico. She talks with Dr. L. C. Dowdy, acting president of the Greensboro, N.C. college.

Call To Speed Integration Heard Across Entire South

Legal action show rise in Carolinas

(From NEWS DISPATCHES)

A survey of school desegregation legal actions for the past week shows that pressure for a speedup of the desegregation process is being increased in states throughout the South.

The states involved in court actions, or face suits in the near future include Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana North Carolina and Texas.

In Alabama, where the admission of colored students to the state university is considered to be only months away, educators and public officials are calling for actions to prevent bloodshed and violence.

• • •

IN TUSCALOOSA, Frank Rose, president of the University of Alabama, said, last week, he had received assurances from both Gov. John Patterson and Gov.-nominate George C. Wallace that the State Government would not allow violence or bloodshed during any attempt to desegregate the university.

Dr. Rose noted that a number of colored students have filed applications for admissions, but that no such application had been processed by the university since 1956 when a Federal Court ordered the admission of Autherine Lucy.

In a speech delivered in Birmingham Lt. Gov.-nominate James B. Allen warned the people of Alabama not to repeat "the Mississippi tragedy."

• • •

HE SAID: "I am seeking to direct opinion in the state along the line of creating a public policy that would stand against violepce, mob rule, rioting, and inciting to riot."

The Lt. Gov.-nominate added that "nothing constructive for the South has been accomplished in Mississippi. The person denied admission is in school."

• • •

IN ITS ANNUAL conference, held four days last week in Macon, the Georgia State Conference of NAACP branches called for more school desegregation.

Declaring that "tokenism, as in Atlanta, is not the answer, the organization stated that neither the later nor the spirit of the 1954 school desegregation decision of the U.S. Supreme Court has become a reality in Georgia."

In addition to lauding the courage of James H. Meredith, the organization called for greater voter registration.

• • •

IN ASHEVILLE, N. C., Ruben J. Dailey, attorney, announced that he is filing a suit in Federal Court to desegregate the high school in Shelby.

The Shelby Board of Education, Aug. 20, rejected the application of Rayfield Cabiness for transfer from the segregated Cleveland County High School to Shelby High where the students are all white.

• • •

IN COLUMBIA, S.C., Matthew Perry, attorney for Harvey Gantt who is seeking admission to Clemson College revealed that the task of examining almost 1,000 application is about complete.

The lawyer is seeking to determine if Gantt was rejected as a student on the basis of race.

The case is due to be tried, Nov. 19, at Anderson.

• • •

IN TALLAHASSEE, Fla., the recently established chapter of Americans for Democratic Action announced that its first order of business is the integration of the University of Florida's undergraduate school.

The organization hopes "to be ready for action by the second semester of the current school term, or certainly by next September.

Hampton students told about careers in federal service

HAMPTON, Va. — Julius Thomas, industrial consultant for the National Urban League, told the undergraduates of Hampton Institute, that employment opportunities in the federal government and industry are unlimited, but they required the type of education that today's colored graduates are not obtaining.

Speaking at the opening session of the three - day Hampton Institute Federal Career Conference on the college campus, Mr. Thomas told the Ogden Hall audience that present education is below the standards for competition, and if colored graduates are to take avantage of the opportunities, they must prepare themselves properly.

Introduced by Hampton Institute's President Jerome H. Holland, as a person who has been highly influential in the promotion of racial equality in employment, Mr. Thomas said that more and more corporations are looking for trained personnel, regardless of color.

REPRESENTATIVES to present at the opening session were Arthur A. Chapan, special assistant to Secretary of Labor; J. R. Poole, assistant the director of the U.S. Civil Service Commission; and Leon M. Wallace, assistant to the Administrator, Veterans Administration.

During the afternoon of October 30, the representatives visited selected classrooms and that evening conducted panel discussions in James Hall, men's dormitory and Virginia - Cleveland Hall, women's dormitory, in relation to the conference's theme, "Changing Patterns in Industry, Government and Education." Some 500 students participated.

Representatives of 23 federal agencies were luncheon guests of Dr. Jerome H. Holland, Institute president and Fred G. Scott, official host of the careers conference, along with divisional chairmen and directors of the H
