SYPHILIS PROBLEM GROWING AGAIN

In recent years syphilis has been reappearing as a major public health problem in Maryland as well as the nation, reports Dr. Leon H. Janney, Acting Director, Division of Epidemiology, the State Health Department.

THE NEW — Here is one view of the interior of the auditorium seats more than 800. The Rev. William L. Green, pastor, and his congregation moved to the church Sunday from their 25-year-old edifice in the 800 block Warner St., which they were forced to abandon because it is in an Urban Renewal Industrial Area. The new church has 13 basement rooms, including two choir dressing rooms, a Sunday School superintendent office, a nurses office and five tilet facilities.

Slum problems reviewed at CPHA fall luncheon

A city cannot rebuild itself unless it builds up the people of its slums.

This was a major theme of local experts speaking before 150 members and guests at the annual Fall luncheon of the Citizens Planning and Housing Association held at Zion Lutheran Church Tuesday.

Baltimore must assume responsibility "to guarantee that slum clearance does not become dispersal," stated William D. Schaefer, vice president of the City Council, one of four speakers at the CPHA affair.

To get the city's slum clearance program moving more efficiently, Mr. Schaefer urged that the post of assistant mayor be created expressly to co-ordinate activities of all city agencies directly or otherwise involved in the relocation of people from urban renewal areas.

He charged "a breakdown of coordination between city agencies responsible for conservation is all apparent," to remedy this, "sub-mayor's" duties would also have to extend to elimination of overcrowding, neglect of properties by tenants and landlords in areas of the city that are beginning to deteriorate.

* * *

WITH MR. Schaeffer as featured speakers were Richard L. Steiner, director of the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency; Harold C. Edelston, executive secretary of the Health and Welfare Council and William M. Rawlings, supervisor of general adult education for the Baltimore public schools.

The city councilman also proposed more effective liaison between a revamped neighborhood council system and small businsses in areas where relocation is planned or underway.

Mr. Steiner, in his brief remarks, clarified the role of the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency, stressing that BURHA has the responsibility for site management and relocation.

He pointed out that in the decade since 1950, 5,000 Baltimore families were relocated and that this number accounted for about one per cent of all moving of family units in the metropolitan area.

In the decade ending 1970, Mr. Steiner forecast, re-location will rise to three per cent of the total of expected housing movement within the city.

With public housing, the BURHA chief stated that demand for such shelter is rising among the city's aged and large families. Some 6,000 public housing units are needed for the elderly.

With large low-income families, he explained, although such families could afford public housing they resisted it because of the "institutional quality of this housing."

Each speaker touched on the need for up-grading the living standards of people either living in slum areas or being re-located into better neighborhoods but the last two speakers, Mr. Edelston and Mr. Rawlings, took this as their point of focus.

Ghana lauds U.S. Technicians

Ghana's Deputy Agriculture Minister D. E. Asafu-Adjaye has praised the role of 30 United States AID Mission Technicians in the agricultural development of Ghana.

In view of this, he continued, the Ministry of Agriculture hopes to establish three farm mechanization training centers next year, thus offering training in the operation and maintenance of farm machinery.

Asafu-Adjaye also appealed to Senator J. Allender, Chairman of the U.S. Appropriations Sub-committee on Foreign AID, for more American assistance.

Sen. Allender arrived in Ghana recently on a month's tour of 37 African countries to observe U.S. AID Mission's operations.

Senator J. Allender expressed the hope that continued achievements would strengthen the already existing friendship between the two nations.
