A Tribute To Dan Burley

By CHUCK STONE

Dan Burley is dead.

And so is a tender piece of colored communities everywhere in America.

If anybody knew his people, Dan Burley did.

He dug the "brother," and could talk about him like a dog while fighting for equal access to every closed bastion in America.

White people coined the phrases, "cotton-pickin," "pea-pickin."

Well, Dan Burley was a pork-chop chewin', finger-poppin', box-anklin' swinger who could — as the late ofay swinger, Lord Buckeley said — look right down into the window of the littlest cat's soul and make him understand all the sounds — the sounds of freedom riders, jazz, spirituals, political power, numbers racket, sitins, black nationalism, and the double-duty dollar.

It's so hard to pay tribute to a legend, and to a guy who, even as I write this, is probably looking down on me, laughing and calling me a "square" for getting so sentimental.

But I loved Dan Burley and although we only talked two or three times a year by telephone I'm going to miss him.

Man, he could write! He painted pictures with words and his message, biting, sarcastic, pleading could sear your feelings.

But a lot of white people never read Dan Burley and I feel sorry for them. They are the poorer for it.

He had one column which he considered one of his best. I was the editor of a newspaper in New York City that ran it when we first hit the streets. It broke everybody up.

You read it — and remember this great human being who was such a wonderful guy but above all a consummate artist with his typewriter.

What Happened On The 5:15 To Suburbia

By DAN BURLEY

THE MAGIC WORD today is integration.

Watch colored faces light up when it's mentioned on the corner, in the drawing room or at a lunch counter.

Some take it to be integrated women — both races; some see it as political, still others as intellectual. Maybe this little anecdote will illustrate a more fundamental variety of integration.

It was the 5:15 to Suburbia and among the passengers hurrying home was the tall, blond, blue-eyed crewcut young man in Ivy League attire toting his alligator briefcase and with a light topcoat carried on one arm. At the same time, a fat, squat, jet-black, brown-eyed fuzzy-haired young man also carrying a bag and with a light topcoat on one arm got aboard.

They took seats on opposite sides of the aisle.

AFTER A WHILE, the blond young man reached into an inside pocket, extracted a gold-embossed cigar case, lit up a 3-for-a-dollar El Producto at the same time the squat, black young man across the aisle produced a diamond-studded case, extracted a $7.50 custom-made Upmann, lighted it with a $60 paper-thin butane lighter and slowly puffed in luxury.

The train droned ahead as passengers played poker or gin rummy while others peered out at the passing countryside. The young blond man picked up his alligator bag that doubtlessly cost $75, opened it on his lap and with a gold ballpoint pen began making notations on a pad.

At the same time without even looking up at the blond, the squat black man with the fuzzy locks picked up his bag, a $250 imported kangaroo hide job, opened it to reveal a complete portable secretary with a cigarette pack sized dictaphone, put the receiver to his ear and concentrated on dictating while fingering thick packs of blue ribbon stock and other blue chip bonds.

FURTHER ALONG, the two men closed their briefcases and settled back to relax. Neither had noticed the other, apparently.

They acted as though what was happening was part of a well-rehearsed Broadway drama. Two Americans, one black, the other white, who a dozen years ago would be separated, the black one in the car behind the coal car, the other in the air-conditioned drawing room compartment section.

Now they rode opposite one another in the same car and the black man had no fear of being hauled off after a rednecked conductor had stopped the train to flag in the first Klan cohorts he saw on the wayside to drag the black off to a necktie party.

It was shortly after that the conductor came through, muttering "Suburbia, last stop. All out for Suburbia." Passengers began gathering belongings, breaking up card games, slapping one another farewells across the shoulders.

• • •

THE BLOND BLUE - EYED YOUNG MAN with the crew cut, reached up and brought down his $350 camel hair topcoat from the rack.

But at the same time, the jet black, squat, frizzled-haired young man reached for his topcoat — an $850 vicuna — threw the tissue-thin garment carelessly across his shoulders and moved into the aisle as the train ground to a halt at the station.

Ahead of him, the white young man absent-mindedly bit at his unkept fingernails as the black young man gave a final glance at his well-manicured, immaculate hands.

They got off, one behind the other.

The white man walked with regal stride as though the world was his toward an elegant 1960 sleek, black Eldorado Broughham waiting at the curb.

The door was opened by his auburn-tressed youngish wife bedecked in a $10,000 black diamond mink. Happily hollering "Daddy" was his small son, trim in a $150 Buster Brown suit.

He kissed his wife and looked up in time to see the black, squat young man walking leisurely to a gleaming, gold-plated Rolls-Royce Silver Cloud with radio telephone, built-in bar and hi-fi record FM player.

The white young man, mouth-opened, stared as a stoutish, black chauffeur in smart uniform with boots touched his cap visor, held open the door for his employer.

Inside the white man, his wife and son gawked as the squat black young man kissed a coal black, handsome woman wearing a $30,000 Russian Sable on the cheek, fondled his son attired in a $375 hand-stitched Brooks Brothers suit and prepared to lean back for the trip home. Meanwhile, a big black boxer barked joyously from the chauffeur's compartment.

Unable to stand it any longer, the young white man rushed from his Eldorado like a madman to the Rolls-Royce and losing complete control, began banging with his fist on the hood, screaming at the top of his voice, "N—r, N—r, N—r!"

The black man startled, looked apprehensively and excitedly turned around.

"WHERE??" he screamed.

Women advised to beware of tendency to be jealous

The Rev. Mrs. Florence Washington, was guest Shorter, pastor of the Silver speaker for the 15th annual Temple Holiness Church, Women's Day services Sunday, at Gillis Memorial Church.

The Rev. Mrs. Shorter, spoke from St. John 14: 2-3, "In my Father's house there are many mansions. . . I go to prepare a place for you . . . that where I am, there you may be also."

The woman minister also spoke of the humility of the woman who touched the hem of the garment of Christ.

"A church can too often be filled with petty grievances, especially among the women. For they are inclined toward the natural female tendency of jealousy. There will be no place for this in the Kingdom of God," she stressed.

The services began with the singing of "What A Friend We Have In Jesus," outlined by Mrs. Marie Washington. Music was furnished by the combined Gillis choirs and an all woman chorus.

Mrs. Virginia Davis, gave the welcome address, with a response from Mrs. Elizabeth Roy, Shiloh Community Church.

OTHER HIGHLIGHTS of the program were a solo by Mrs. Mable Malone and a duet by Mrs. Pauline Wells Lewis and Mrs. Sylvia Preston.

Gillis Memorial Church is pastored by the Rev. Thomas C. Jackson. General chairman for the Women's Day program was Mrs. Pauline W. Lewis. Mrs. Odessa Wright was co - chairman, and Mrs. Blanche Kimball, mistress of ceremonies.

The Rev. Mrs. Maude Coleman said the benediction.

Tawes accused of dumping Judge Watts

Did Governor Tawes "sacrifice" Judge B. Watts in the recent election because of his race?

Yes, said Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell, secretary to the NAACP Legal Redress Committee, appearing before the Maryland Advisory Committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights on Thursday.

Judge Watts, appointed to the Municipal Court by Tawes, lost his seat to Joseph L. Broccolino Jr., in the general election Nov. 6.

Judge Watts, also present, disagreed with Mrs. Mitchell about his having been dumped by the Governor. He said "Race had nothing to do with, the alphabet killed me because I was last on the ballot. If I had been in the first eight names, I'd have been elected."

Judge Watts, however, did charge Tawes with inaction. "He (the Governor) did not put the sitting judges on the 'Official Tawes Ticket' ballots in the general election. This permitted various factions to issue their own ballots with nine names. There was no move to dump Bob Watts: it was to get Joseph Broccolino on the bench," he said.

THE JUDGE also felt that "if I'd been anywhere but last I'd probably have led the ticket."

Mrs. Mitchell did not agree. She said "it is the feeling of the colored community that the Democratic party sacrificed Judge Watts. Governor Tawes pushed the sitting judge principal in the primary . . . in the general election when the colored community was educated to the principle, he didn't push it."

Cherry Hill News

By WALTER A BAKER

Clarritha Dow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Dow, 700 block Roundview Rd., has received a $500 scholarship from the State of Maryland. A graduate of Western High School, Miss Dow now is attending Coppin State Teachers College.

The Rev. Robert Newbold, minister of the Grace Presbyterian Church, will speak at the cornerstone laying ceremony for the Cherry Hill Presbyterian Church Sunday at 4 p.m.

Women's Day was a success at First Baptist Church, Cherry Hill. It was reported that more than $3,000 was raised.

The Rev. John H. Clark is pastor.

Gov. Barnett faces new legal action

NEW ORLEANS — Gov. Ross Barnett and Lt. Gov. Paul Johnson of Mississippi, already cited for civil contempt, now face criminal contempt actions for their efforts in the University of Mississippi crisis.

The Federal Court of Appeals Thursday ordered the Department of Justice to file criminal contempt charges against the two for failure to purge themselves of civil contempt.

• • •

UNDER THE civil contempt citation, the governor faces jail and daily fines of $10,000, while Johnson faces a fine of $5,000 a day. To date, however, no fines have been imposed.

There's no second chance for criminal contempt conviction. Once convicted, punishment and obedience is automatic.

In civil contempt, however, one found guilty is given a deadline to comply with the orders of the court. If the deadline isn't met, punishment is continuous until the defendant does comply.

• • •

IN JACKSON, the governor expressed surprise at the court's action. He said the Department is waiting only for detailed instructions from the court.

Wife of physician

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — (ANP) — Mrs. Althea L. Mills, wife of one of Knoxville's oldest and best known physicians, was buried last week. She had died after a long illness at her home.

Jail breaks inquiry continues Monday

The City Council is scheduled to continue its inquiry of the recent City Jail escapes and the suspension of Warden Hiram L. Schoonfield at 2 p.m. Monday.

The investigation is being spearheaded by the Council's Health Committee, headed by Walter T. Dixon (4th D.), but the initial hearing the past Tuesday saw a majority of the councilmen participating.

At that hearng, Harry D. Kaufman, jail board president, charged that Warden Schoonfield was responsible for the escapes, in what he termed "a breakdown in maximum security."

Warden Schoonfield countered by blaming the escapes on a lack of guards, and circumstances caused by renovations to the main building and faulty designs of the new wing.

Mr. Kaufman pointed out that the first escape occurred June 17, when a prisoner charged in a series of armed robberies broke out in what he termed a "fantastic escape."

• • •

HE SAID the man, since recaptured and sentenced, broke from a chow line and scaled a 25-foot wall while a 67-year-old guard "froze" and delayed in sounding an alarm.

The second escape, he said, was by a man charged with murder, who had been gone 12 hours before he was missed. However, he was later captured.

Mr. Kaufman charged that the third escape on Oct. 29 of five men was "handed to the men on a silver platter."

He stated that Warden Schoonfield had turned maximum security cells housing the men into a "dormitory," and that the prisoners were allowed to roam about at will.

They escaped by sawing bars for at least 16 hours, he said, and fled over a catwalk where a guard was scheduled to have been on duty.

• • •

WARDEN SCHOONFIELD, who along with two guards was suspended Nov. 3, argued that his staff of 107 guards was inadequate to handle the 1,300 prisoners on three shifts because the new jail is "decentralized" and harder to guard.

He said that he had made a full report of these conditions, including a request for more guards, but the jail board had not given it consideration.

Warden Schoonfield was interrupted during his testimony by the call to regular City Council session.

The investigation was asked in an adopted resolution by Phillip H. Goodman, Council president, and William J. Schaefer (5th D.), Council vice president.

Cherry Hill church to lay cornerstone

The Cherry Hill Community Presbyterian Church will conduct its Cornerstone Laying Services on Sunday at 4 p.m.

Participating in the service will be the Rev. Robert S. Bower, pastor of the Harundale Community Church and chairman of the Board of Strategy; Dr. A. Brown Caldwell, stated clerk of Presbytery; Leslie Gundy, contractor, and the Rev. E. Rudolph Obey, pastor.

Immediately following the laying of the cornerstone, the Women's Association of the Church will conduct its Annual Thanks Offering Service as a part of a Vesper Service for the Cornerstone Laying Ceremonies.

The guest speaker will be the Rev. Robert T. Newbold, pastor of the Grace Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Nathaniel P. Perry, pastor of the Cherry Hill Methodist, will bring greetings on behalf of the ministers of Cherry Hill.

• • •

OTHER EXPECTED guests will be the Rev. Fred M. Webber, general Presbyter of the Baltimore Presbytery; the Rev. Allan G. Moore, secretary of the Presbyterian Association; the Rev. Reginald Daniels, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Octavius Graham, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church; and the Rev. Thomas Fraser, pastor of the Walbrook - Trinity Presbyterian Church.

The Cherry Hill Church is located on the corners of Carver and Cherry Hill Rds.
