O'Maro's rich voice thrills 800 hearers

Exhibiting an excitingly deep, rich baritone reminiscent of the late Jules Bledsoe, William O'Maro enchanted 800 appreciative music lovers Thursday night at the Willard W. Allen Masonic Temple.

Offering a highly varied program which ranged from Handel, Verdi and Bizet to Gershwin, Victor Herbert and Cole Porter, Mr. O'Maro was able to display the full range of his vibrant voice.

Particularly impressive were his renditions of Youmans' "Without a Song" and Hine's "How Great Thou Art" both of which drew prolonged applause from an appreciative audience.

* * *

MR. O'MARO, a familiar figure to members of the Leadenhall Baptist Church where he's a soloist in the choir, was clearly at his best in his offerings of religious numbers.

His reading of "O! God, Father Of Mercy" and Handel's aria from the Messiah "But Who May Abide" mesmerized his audience by their sheer beauty.

In a quick change of pace, he reminded many hearers of Paul Robeson when he rared back and let come forth in a torrent or resonant notes Burleigh's arrangement of "Deep River."

* * *

It was indeed a rewarding evening for music lovers of varying tastes. James S. Hammond, minister of music at Douglas Memorial Community Church, supplied sympathetic accompaniment.

The program was sponsored by the Maryland Prince Hall Masonic Grand Lodge, Samuel T. Daniels, grand master. — C. W. MACKAY.
