Shooting victim gives birth to child

The victim of a shooting, Mrs. Osiene Smith, 33, 1900 block Eutaw Place, gave birth to an infant on Tuesday, who died a short time later.

The birth took place at Maryland General Hospital, where officials said the child had been due in January, and the premature birth might have been due to the shock of being shot.

Mrs. Smith was wounded in front of her apartment house Saturday, following what police described as a domestic argument.

UNDER ARREST and held in $3,000 bail in connection with the shooting is Raymond Smith of the same address.

The woman was shot in the abdomen and left foot. Her condition is listed as satisfactory.

Neighbors of the Smiths said that Mrs. Smith had three other children, who have been taken to Virginia by a sister.

Mass protests set Dec. 8

Sit-in demonstrations on a large scale, titled "Operation Gateway," have been planned for December 8, according to a bulletin from the Baltimore Chapter, Congress of Racial Equality.

"Operation Gateway" is described as a "major diagnosis," aimed at determining and exposing the areas where segregation still exists in Maryland.

In a message to Northern and local college students, Walter Carter, chairman of Baltimore CORE, described racial bias as destroying "the human dignity of a large number of Maryland citizens," as stated by the publication.

ACCORDING TO the bulletin, Maryland and other border states must take the lead in riding the country of racial discrimination.

Racial segregation and discrimination, it stated, must be broken in this Border State before we can look forward to real progress in the deeper South."

The movement is also aimed at encouraging action by the General Assembly in passing and adopting public accommodations and other anti-bias laws.

Recruits and veteran sit-inners are coming from states on the Eastern seaboard to participate in the operation, said the CORE publication.

It emphasized that more interested persons are needed.

Eastside man dies of gun wound

A 33-year-old unemployed man is believed to have shot himself to death Wednesday, Eastern District police have reported.

Police said they found the victim, James Cannady, 2400 block E. Biddle St., in the bathroom with a bullet wound in the right temple when they responded to a call around 6 p.m.

His wife, Mrs. Lucy Cannady reportedly told investigators they had just returned home and she went across the street to the store when the shooting took place.

POLICE SAID the couple had no children and the victim left no note.

HONORED — Seven of the approximately 300 employees of the Western Maryland Railway Company who were honored with the presentation of service awards, presented recently by W. Arthur Grotz, president of the road were (seated, left to right): Moses Beverly, 128 Pearl St.; Charles Brown, 1005 Creek St.; Robert T. Gant, 3454 Park Heights Ave.; Elijah Wallace, 925 S. Bevan St., and Alex Richardson, 758 Ramsey St. Standing, same order: George A. Camps, 1934 Fairmount Ave.; Mr. Grotz, and Robinson C. Moore, 544 N. Payson St. All seven received a 25-year service emblem.

Kerpelman quits 4th D. organization

Charging Murray Abramson with fostering 'factionalism' within the Fourth District Democratic Organization, Leonard J. Kerpelman stalked out of the meeting Monday and vowed "I'll not return."

Mr. Abramson, who last year split with the Pollack forces, was re-elected to the House of Delegates last month on the Verda Welcome ticket.

Kerpelman, an attorney, long a foe of Pollack, was defeated in the primary in his bid for Democratic Nomination to the House of Delegates.

Kerpelman, in an impassioned speech, explained that he was resigning because Mr. Abramson had not acted in good faith" during the campaign and on election day.

"HE NEVER had a good word to say for Mrs. Welcome during the campaign," Kerpelman said," and still has not spoken a good word for her."

Kerpelman charged further that Abramson used poll workers paid for by the Fourth District Democratic Organization "in the upper end of the district to pass out literature bearing only his name with no reference to the candidacies of Mrs. Welcome or Clarence Mitchell."

Mrs. Welcome seeking to act as peacemaker at the turbulent session, explained that "it was all a misunderstanding."

She expressed complete confidence in Mr. Abramson, recalling that they had campaigned together in both the upper and lower end of the district.

She said she had given both Abramson and Mitchell permission to use cards bearing only their names since they had been printed before the ticket was formed.

ABRAMSON, TAKING the floor, categorically denied the charges made by Kerpelman although admitting "that at first I did not favor Mrs. Welcome for the Senate. Everyone knows I was backing Jacques Leeds.

"But after Mr. Leeds withdrew from the race, I worked as hard for Mrs. Welcome as I did for myself. Mr. Kerpelman has been misled," he asserted.

LLOYAL RANDOLPH, the organization's newly elected chairman, who was presiding also explained that "it is clearly a case of misunderstanding" and urged Mr. Kerpelman to reconsider his resignation.

A similar plea was made by Mrs. Welcome, who recalled how she had worked with the young attorney as campaigned during the primary.

Indication that he would reconsider, picked up his cost and walked out of the meeting. — C. W. MACKAY

Telethon chairmen named for MS drive

Committee chairman for the Maryland Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society have been announced by chapter chairman Thomas D. R. Parr.

Heading the committees as campaign and "MS Telethon" chairman is Douglas A. MacFarlane.

The 18 hour "MS Telethon" will begin at 11:05 p.m. Saturday Dec. 8, continue without interruption until 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 9.

Among the personalities flying in for the event are Lorne Greene, Betty Johnson, Doug McClure and Barbara Luna. They and possibly two other personalities will join top local entertainers in this around - the - clock entertainment appeal.

Funds raised on the "MS Telethon" will benefit patients throughout the 35-county, five-state area covered by WBAL-TV. Contributions from outside Maryland will be credited to the local chapter of MS.

Goodman to assume Mayor's role with 'intense vigor'

"As soon as I'm inaugurated Mayor on Dec. 6, I expect to assume this new role with more intense vigor than in my old role as president of the City Council.

"The first thing I'm going to do is take my coat off, roll up my sleeves and go to work."

Philip H. Goodman, Baltimore's Mayor-to-be, gave the AFRO these comments Thursday afternoon, as he prepared to succeed Mayor J. Harold Grady in office next Thursday.

Mayor Grady will resign on that date, and be sworn in Friday as an associate judge of the city's Supreme Bench.

When asked if there is any specific action he planned on taking office, Mr. Goodman stated:

"There is not anything specific at this point. But there are a number of city projects which require immediate attention, and I expect to take them on right away, catch as catch can."

MAYOR GRADY'S appointment to the Supreme Bench by Gov. J. Millard Tawes came through the retirement last month of Chief Judge Emory H. Niles, who had reached the statutory age limit of 70.

Gov. Tawes recently named Judge Michael J. Manley, who was elected Nov. 6 to a 15-year term, to the chief judgeship replacing Judge Niles.

Mayor Grady was named to fill the associate judgeship vacated by Judge Manley's elevation.

The Mayor's appointment had long been anticipated in downtown legal and professional circles.

Mr. Goodman will serve as Mayor until the mayoralty general election in May.

To date, he has refused to say whether he will be a candidate for Mayor in the March primary. However, a campaign headquarters has been opened for him in the Emerson Hotel by friends who feel certain he will be a candidate. Meanwhile, Thomas D'Alesandro 3rd, president of the City's Board of Supervisors of Elections, is generally expected to succeed Mr. Goodman as president of the City Council.

The Council vote will likely be taken on a successor to Mr. Goodman at the regular Council meeting Dec. 10.

Chief opposition to Mr. D'Alesandro is the announced candidacy for the post by Paul J. Reed Jr., attorney and veteran head of the Third District Democratic Organization, one of the three more powerful political factions in that district.

Mr. D'Alesandro expressed confidence recently though that he had the necessary 11 Council votes needed to get the post.

Daniel Banks

Daniel W. Banks, 61, 4909 Midwood Ave., died Monday at Ft. Howard Hospital following a heart attack.

He had suffered with a serious heart condition for two years.

Funeral services were held Friday in Gillis Memorial Community Church. Burial was in the Baltimore National Cemetery.

The World War II veteran was a member of the Eureka Social Club and he liked to raise flowers, especially roses, as a hobby.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Young Banks; sister, Mrs. Ollie Gray and brother, Thomas Banks.

Builder Of Good Teams, Citizens

WINNING FORMULA — Coach Banks scans clip board bearing names of players who, despite lack of "super star," status, won CIAA Championship on "team effort."

By GEORGE W. COLLINS

His immediate goal is building football players. A more distant — and important — one is building men.

He has succeeded in the former. Only time alone will determine his success or failure in the latter.

But if sound formulas carry any weight in such matters — and they usually do — success is also assured in the latter because he has a winning formula for molding men, too.

Meet Earl C. Banks, football coach and young man on the move — UP!

Barely a decade ago, Coach Banks was basking in the glory that comes to an All-American college football player.

Today he is receiving congratulations as coach of a championship college football team.

MR. BANKS won All-American honors as lineman at the University of Iowa, where he took a B.S. degree in physical education in 1950.

He's now head coach at Morgan State College, a post he has held for nearly three years. Thanksgiving Day his Bears won the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association Conference championship, romping over Virginia State College, traditional rival, by a 23-0 score.

Between these high points in the game that "gave me so much that I wanted to put something back in it," Coach Banks has learned many lessons. Some he has tried to teach his "boys".

Football is a good game and you should play it to win. But football is a means to an end — not the end itself."

ANYONE WHO thinks otherwise is inviting disaster, reasons the 35-year-old coach.

"Look at the number of men who have faded into obscurity after the last hurrah at the end of a brilliant football career," he volunteered.

Mr. Banks said his standard sermon to young athletes who join his team is:

"Be ready to march in four — graduate. You can't play football forever. Your reputation as a former football hero is a poor substitute for a degree when your playing days are over."

COACH BANKS was introduced to football while a teenager in the slums of Chicago, where "life was little more than one-room apartments, missing meals, and moving when rent was due," he recalled this week.

"Now I have a comfortable home — 3801 Elsinor Ave. — a nice family and doing what I like best, coaching," he said, adding:

"Football has been good to me and I want to do what I can for the game and those who play it."

Mr. Banks first gained football prominence at the Wendell Phillips High School in Chicago, where he won all-state honors while playing on the same team with another illustrious gridiron great — Claude (Buddy) Young.

IT WAS AT Wendell Phillips while the team was getting ready to meet a hated rival — Dusable High — that Mr. Banks decided he would become a coach.

"Our coach, Leonard Sachs, was one of the finest men I've ever known. He died in school while teaching us how to get ready for the big game.

"We won the game and the championship just for him, and I knew then that coaching was for me."

After high school Mr. Banks entered the Army where he served a two-year tour of duty before enrolling at Iowa on a scholarship.

He was a member of the varsity squad throughout his four - year stay at Iowa and was picked on the first All-American team ever to assemble in the same place at the same time — the 1947 Look team which met in New York. He graduate in 1950 and went to Maryland State College.

The next nine years was devoted to learning the "fundamentals of coaching," Mr. Banks said, and he had a good teacher — Vernon (Skip) McCain.

WHILE SERVING as line coach at Maryland he and Mr. McCain built some pretty fair football players — including Roger Brown (Lions), Johnny Sample and Sherman Plunkett, both former Colts, now plying their wares elsewhere.

"When I think of those to whom I'm indebted most, I can't help but think of Skip. He taught me everything I knew about coaching," Mr. Banks declared.

In February 1960, he came to Morgan State College as head football coach.

That's why, along with the usual anxieties, Coach Banks points out, he has mixed emotions when his Bears play the Maryland State Hawks.

"I want to prove that I'm a pretty good coach, but I'm also sentimental when our teams meet. We play hard to win, but I am grateful to Skip."

It is safe to say that Mr. McCain was a good teacher and Mr. Banks was an equally good student. Any other way and he would hardly have been picked to fill the shoes of a man whose name is legendary in CIAA athletics — Eddie Hurt.

UNTIL THIS year when Ralph Johnson joined his staff, as backfield coach, Mr. Banks was the youngest man on the coaching staff at Morgan.

Others include Talmadge Hill, line coach, and Howard Wilson, backfield coach and chief scout, both well known names in the halls of CIAA football.

When he became head coach at Morgan, the football fundamentalist had little reason to expect his charges to perform like champions.

They had just closed a dismal season, winning one and tying one of a eight-game schedule.

But he wasn't disappointed, because he had a winning formula:

"While assembling boys for the team I was guided by these points:

"Devotion, responsibility, sense of teamwork, and a desire to win football games and finish college."

If enough athletes who possessed these qualities could be brought together, the coach reasoned, "I knew we could win without a super star."

IT WAS SOUND strategy, as the following statistics show:

1960 — 3 wins, 3 losses and 1 tie.

1961 — 5 wins, 4 losses and no ties.

1962 — 8 wins, 1 loss and the championship.

In his climb to an envious perch in the football profession, Coach Banks also credits another helping hand.

This one, from Athletic Director Hurt, who, according to Mr. Banks, "smoothed out the rough edges. He was a tremendous buffer when things got rough," Mr. Banks recalled.

A stickler for the facts of life, winning the championship has caused the coach to dust off another trueism, future Morgan teams are bound to hear:

"It's tough getting up there, but tougher staying."

THIS WEEK was the first time Mr. Banks has been able to have dinner at home with his family since Sept. 1, he said.

His family, incidentally, is divided between two cities.

Of his four children, three — Wanda, 16; Yvonne, 15, and William, 10 — attend school in Chicago where they live with their grandmother, Mrs. Odessa Banks, "because they like it there."

Son Raymond, 16, is an end on the varsity squad at City College.

The coach's brother, "my adopted son," Robert, 14, keeps Raymond company.

Wife, the former Miss Essie Molock of the Eastern Shore, fills dual roles as housewife and teacher.

Coach Banks enjoys building football players because football has been good to him.

But since football is a means to an end — and not the end — he gets greater delight from building men, who in turn become young men on the move — UP!

RARE MOMENT — Coach Earl C. Banks, for the first time since Sept. 1, gets to spend a few quiet evenings at home with wife, Mrs. Essie Banks; brother Robert and son Raymond. They are admiring trophy, one of his Maryland State College baseball teams won while takingfour out of five CIAA championships. Three other children are in Chicago.

Adopt Child

The continuing need for adoptive homes for colored children was emphasized today by Miss Elizabeth G. Smith, acting director of the State Department of Public Welfare.

A recent survey conducted by the department as part of a cooperative effort to locate adoptive homes for such children under the care of private and public agencies are available for adoption.

In reviewing the survey Miss Smith pointed out that many of the children awaiting placement in their adoptive homes are infants, and almost two-thirds of them are under six years of age.

Of the 344 children, 40 are under one year, Thirty-six are between one and two, 37 are between two and three and 104 between three and six. The remainder of the children are over six years of age. One hundred and ninety-seven are boys.

Two hundred and twelve of the children reported as awaiting adoptive homes are under the care of the Baltimore City Department of Public Welfare. The remainder are under the care of other local welfare departments in the counties of Maryland or voluntary child placement agencies licensed by the State Department of Public Welfare.

MISS SMITH explained that the State Welfare Department operates a registration service so that children are available to any eligible colored couple regardless of where in the state the couple lives. Local welfare departments and private agencies welcome the opportunity to talk with couples who may be interested in adoption.

A leaflet giving details on adoption is available and can be obtained by writing to the State Department of Public Welfare, 301 West Preston St., Baltimore 1, Md.

Principals Speak On Controversial Groups

Newspaper readers heard much about a group that called itself the "Fighting American Nationalists," during this past summer's race rioting at Riverside Pool.

F.A.N. members usually were on hand each time the colored swimmers appeared.

They carried signs which denounced integration and attacked the NAACP as a Communist - front organization.

Recently, attempting to gain grass-roots support for their cause, they asked permission to appear before the student bodies of at least two schools to give their views. They gained entry to Dundalk High in Baltimore County.

Since, there has been a pro and con discussion of whether F.A.N. should have appeared in the school.

The Baltimore School Board has a definite policy on teaching controversial issues in the schools.

PLAINLY SPELLED out in its administrative handbook, the general thinking of the School Board on teaching such issues is that the child should have a right to:

1. Study any issue which has political, economic or social significence and which can be studied understandably at the child's level.

2. Have free access to all related materials, including that circulated in the community.

3. To study under competent instruction in an atmosphere of bias or prejudice.

4. To form and express opinions on controversial issues without harming the child's relationships with others.

In general, the Board policy underlines that "teachers must recognize that the treatment of issues in question must be within the range, knowledge, maturity and understanding of the child."

With this policy in mind, the AFRO asked city senior high school principals their thinking about permitting controversial group representatives to appear before their student bodies.

Here is what they had to say:

HENRY YOST, Baltimore City College — I would be opposed to such groups appearing before the student body.

I have not received a request, and if I did, I would not honor it.

WILLIAM BADER, Eastern High —I would be in favor of having a teacher of social science tell her class about such controversial groups.

However, I would not permit any of such a group's members to come into the school and explain their own point of view.

CLAUDE BURKERT, Poly — I don't feel that we should let our schools be sounding boards for such controversial groups.

The boys have been given some idea of the activities of some of these groups through social science classes.

MRS. NANETTE BLACKISTON, Western High —I have no comment to make on the question at this time.

* * *

MRS. DOROTHY DUVAL, Forest Park High — If the newspaper reports about some of these controversial groups are accurate, I would not be in favor of allowing them to appear before my student body.

CARROLL RANKIN, Edmondson High — I would certainly not extend an invitation to let groups that represent ideas contrary to our way of life appear before my student body.

However, I would have to consider each group on its own merits before coming to a decision.

G. EDWARD GREIFZU, Mergenthaler High —I would consult with the School Board, ruling on permitting such groups to appear before my student body.

JULIUS GLUBB, Southern High — I would refer to the School Board's policy on permitting such groups to appear before my student body.

But frankly, there are so many groups around that we wouldn't know where to stop.

MRS. LILLIAN P. MURPHY, Douglass High —We would have to evaluate each one as to its purpose and intent before permitting the group to appear before our student body.

However, there is a select group of students with a mature enough mind to grasp such controversial issues, that could be permitted to hear them.

G. GORDON WOELPER, Patterson High—I would abide by the rules of the Board of School commissioners' policy on such matters.

DR. SAUL PERDUE, Carver High School—My concern would not be so much if they were controversial, but if they are unamerican.

I would definitely not want any group coming to the school to talk to my student body about things I consider unamerican.

Of course, there are many controversial issues that could be discussed in a social studies class, or an American problem class.

* * *

ROBERT DIGGS, Dunbar High—Personally, I would not permit the entire student body to be exposed to a controversial group's views.

Tree Care

In preparing for winter, don't neglect your evergreens. H. C. Buckingham, State Forester of the Maryland Department of Forests and Parks advises that evergreens should be protected as fully as possible against drying winds, fluctuating temperatures, and storm damage.

Water the plants thoroughly at 7 - to 10-day intervals; continue this as late in the year as soil conditions permit.

Spread a thick mulch of straw or similar material over the root area; this will help stabilize soil temperatures and conserve moisture.

Erect a screen of burlap, canvas, or woven evergreen boughs around the plant to shield it from the sun and wind.

To protect up-right-growing evergreens against mutilation by storms, wind a stout cord spirally around the plant from bottom to top and top to bottom, fastening it securely at the base of the trunk.

POET'S CORNER

Beautiful women of yesteryear

I wonder as I see them pass unheeded down the way
(The women who were once beloved, imperious and gay)
Holding with frail, pale hands the cup of Life's discarded Wine
If memories were bliss enough
To make the drink divine!
