THE JUST TWELVE CLUB had fun at the home of Bessie Womack when Phyllis Walston and Emma Dudley joined with her in hosting the group, last week.

It is, of course THAT time of the year ... so when the delicious hors d'uvres and drinks had been followed by a full course dinner, gifts were exchanged by each member ... and each guest was given a gift.

The guests were Mrs. Verna Clay, Glenford Dudley, Henry Matthews, Charles Demby, Charles Womack, Mr. Walston and Franklin DeShields.

Members of the club are Mesdames Jane Harrison, Elizabeth Demby, Emma Dudley, Bessie Womack, Willa Mae DeShields, Mary Jenkings, Phyllis Walston and Clarissa Matthews; and Misses Marion Jones, Carrie O. Johnson and Margaret Gassaway.

Whitney Young calls forhard work and efficiency

Warning that "democracy gives no free rides," National Urban League Executive Director Whitney Young, Jr., last week urged that colored American must prepare to work hard and efficiently as well as protest and complain.

Mr. Young delivered the address at the 96 Founders' Day of Morgan State College.

"TO SOME great changes" have made it possible for colored Americans to have an attitude of "faith and confidence" instead of one of "despair and hopelessness," Mr. Young said.

But he warned that the real challenge the colored American must face now is "not to misread the signs and protest, but he said the colored American must aslo "give increasing attention to the obligations and responsibilities of this society." He said:

"He must be a realist and accept the fact that there is no substitute for painfully hard work and efficient service — that for the same results he must work even harder than others — that he must make his own opportunities and be prepared to take full advantage of them when they arise — that the individual member of a disadvantaged group in the long run must advance with his group or not at all — that tre struggle can never be relaxed until the goal of equality is won."

Postal workers aid Chest drive

Employees of Baltimore's Post Office Department supported the 1962 Community Chest-Red Cross United Appeal with contributions totaling $13,483.90 — an increase of 42 percent over the amount raised last year by that group.

The increase, campaign officials say, can be credited to William F. Laukaitis, postmaster, and Albert Naeny, assistant postmaster, chairmen of the postal employees campaign, who, in agreement with the Labor Management Council, adopted the short-term pledge plan of solicitation, which allows the employees to spread their contributions over five or six pay periods.
