BALTIMORE AFTER DARK

On the TOWN with the Pub Crawler

This is one of those weekends when it's great to be alive. It not only marks a rare occasion when not one, but two of the greater lites of the entertainment heaven shine on our town, but there is an added attraction thrown in for good measure.

First, there was the Duke himself who enraptured music-lovers with the Fellowship House benefit concert at Poly Thursday.

Too bad the weatherman had to go into his act at the last moment after being so nice for so long, but then you can't have everything.

Tought, it will again be Poly's turn to break in the news. That's when the undefeated Engineers square off with the Miami (Fla.) High School gridders in the Orange Bowl.

We're rooting for the home team, natch.

• • •

Saturday, the incomparable Sammy Davis Jr. and his troupe will bring a touch of Hollywood to our town when they move into the Stanton for an 8:30 and 11:30 performance.

If this isn't sufficient to keep you busy over the weekend, along with Christmas shopping, there are still more things to do.

For instance if you haven't caught the Jolly Jax, who have enjoyed a long and profitable run at Casino, you still have time.

Carroll, Herman, and Jerry Hill, brothers all, will be hitting the road come the 16th and won't be in these parts again until early spring.

They'll launch an extended tour in Pittsburgh and cover much of the mid - west before returning to home base. And we repeat for the zillionth time, these guys are the greatest.

It's kinda nice knowing that one of our favorite people, Ethel Ennis, will be taking part in the Multiple Sclerosis telethon over the weekend. Don't forget to tune her in.

Ethel is a mainstay at Red Fox, the house of jazz and the starting point of fascinating girl singers.

Phyllis Rogers, currently pinchhitting at Red Fox while Ethel wraps up a out-of-town engagement, is performing up to the treasured standard of the house. Go hear her.

MACEO PAYSOUR sprung his "Man of the Month" feature at Maceo's this week. And from initial impressions, we would say this will develop into a big deal.

At respective stops at North End and Dotson's this seven, we learned that the former is working like mad to pull in a "name" artist for the upcoming holidays. Prospects are good, too.

And if you think that Dotson's is having a swinging summertime hideout down on the farm when ol Sol is at his hottest — and it is — you should see how Frank Reddish has converted it into a holiday show-place with those fabulous decorations.

You can bet he'll have a "name" there too at the height of the holiday season.

LINDEN LOUNGE, where North and Linden meet, is rapidly becoming a favored gathering place. But then this is to be expected because Moya is quite a magnet.

Big Bill at Adams Cocktail Lounge down Turner Station way, wants you to know that you have a standing invitation if it's fun, frolic, and good entertainment you're seeking.

Howard Dixon, now leaning solidly on the girlie shows, is stepping up his pace to get set for a way-out holiday bill. By the by, Tony Major and Toni Vargas go into the seventh week of teasing, taunting and tantelizing Comedy patrons.

• • •

ANOTHER SPOT you should keep in mind during your swing around is Kleeco, the hideout of the Tall Man, Greta, Jerri, and Shirlee. It's a sure bet for easy-going and relaxing moment.

Knotty Pine, Carnival, New Colony, Alpine Villa and Jones Cocktail Lounge round out the schedule of places you should hit.

And a special message to all you soul brothers and sisters: Sunday 6 p.m. is time you can't forget. The place is Polytechnic Institute. The event — the AFRO's Holiday Festival of Music.

It's for the benefit of the Mrs. Santa Fund, the project with a heart that brings gladness to hundreds of young hearts at Christmas time.

I know we can count on your being there!

Marylanders turn out for cultural program

Hundreds of distinguished Marylanders filled the Pikesville Armory for the $50 - plate formal dinner and closed circuit telecast "Pageant of the Arts," staged by the Maryland Area Committee for the benefit of the National Cultural Center.

Baltimore was one of 67 localities throughout the nation which participated in the entertainment, with half of the proceeds to be given to the Maryland Institute, the Baltimore Civic Opera and the Children's Theatre Association.

The other half will be Maryland's contribution to the $30 million National Cultural Center in Washington, which will be devoted to the performing and cultural arts.

In this spring, ground will be broken for the center, which will have a symphony hall seating 2,750, a 2,500 capacity ballet, opera and musical comedy hall and a theatre for 1,200 patrons.

• • •

IN HIS opening remarks on the telecast President Kennedy stressed the importance of the arts as "the great democrat regardless of race or color, that frees the human spirit and strikes a responsive chord throughout the world."

After greetings from Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy and Mrs. Eisenhower, honorary co-chairmen of the center, Leonard Bernstein hosted the program.

The Maryland Committee includes Dr. Furman L. Templeton, who attended with Mrs. Templeton. Among the leading citizens who were introduced were Senator J. Glenn Beall, who spoke briefly, and Dr. Martin Jenkins, president of Morgan State College.

• • •

PRESIDING AT the dinner was Mrs. Thomas G. Tinsley, chairman of the Maryland Area Committee. Dr. T. Guthrie Speers, chaplain and adjunct professor of religion at Goucher College, gave the invocation.

Prior to the dinner, Richard Cassilly, well - known Maryland tenor, with the New York City Center Opera Company, sang the "Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by Julio Esteban, distinguished pianist and member of the Peabody Conservatory faculty.

Dinner music was furnished by Rivers Chambers Orchestra, with - Ambrose Smith at the piano. — Adah K. Jenkins.

Grambling tackle first AFL draft pick

DALLAS, Texas — A 6-foot, 7-inch, 274 - pound tackle from Grambling University led a contingent of 24 tan player plucked by American League teams in the early rounds of their annual draft, Saturday.

Junious Buchanan, whose fame as a behemoth with unusual speed is the talk of both pro leagues, was not only drafted by the Dallas Texans, but was immediately signed as well.

Although he can't play until his class at Grambling is graduated next June, Buchanan is expected to commence collecting a salary at once. The terms involve a personal-services arrangement.

Scouts report that Buchanan's size by no means impairs his mobility. He ran the 100-yard dash on Grambling's track team in 10.4, the 220 in 22.5 and the 440 in 49.2

ALSO DRAFTED by the Texans was halfback Stone Johnson, a classmate of Buchanan's at the Louisiana College. Johnson was a sprinter on the 1960 U.S. Olympic team.

Dallas also tapped Minnesota All-American Bobby Bell and New Mexico State halfback-Preacher Pilot.

Among other draftees were:

Penn State end Dave Robinson, U. of Pacific tackle Roy Williams and Miami of Ohio tackle Paul Waters by San Diego;

Jackson State end Ellie Richardson, Syracuse end John Mackey, Whittier College end Stan Anders, Villanova guard Charley Johnson, and Minnesota halfback Bill Munsey by the New York Titans;

VIRGINIA UNION tackle Harlan Fullwood by the Buffalo Bills; UCLA halfback Kermit Alexander, Florida A and M Fullback Hewitt Dixon, Iowa end Marvin Fleming, Michigan State halfback Lonnie Sanders;

Villanova fullback Billy Joe, Florida A and M halfback Bob Paremore, Washington halfback Charlie Mitchell and Toledo fullback Frank Baker by the Denver Broncos;

Zephyrs vs Pistons at Civic Center

Super Attractions, Inc., sponsors of the NBA games, will admit ladies free on a basis of, "buy one — get one."

If the husband or date buys a ticket he will get the seat next to her free.

Before the game, ladies will be schooled in the finer points of professional basketball by former Baltimore Bullets star, Buddy Jeannette.

A local florist will hand out to the first 100 ladies entering the game, a fresh carnation. And 12 lucky numbers will receive $5 retail value Christmas trees from a local merchant.

For pure basketball pleasure, the Zephyrs will bring to town Walt Bellamy, NBA rookie of the year for 1961 and Big Ten standout and an all-America Terry Dischinger.

Others to see action for the Chicago quintet are Bill "the Hill" McGill, Si Green, Mel. Newell, Woody Sauldberry, and Charlie Hardnett

The Pistons, unable to get unhiged thus far, will send into action high jumping Willie Jones, veteran Walter Dukes, and rookie Ray Scott.

Detroit aals will bring with them assistant coach, Earl Lloyd, former West Virginia State star, and a native of Washington.

Lenny Moore Day set at Colt-Skins game

Lenny Moore Day ceremonies, which will highlight the Baltimore - Washington football game tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon, are scheduled as a pre-game ritual.

The all - pro halfback of the Colts and his wife and family will be ronored during the activities

A series that has been characterize by tight scores and thrilling finishes will be renewed tomorrow (Saturday) when the Baltimore Colts entertain the Washington Redskins at Baltimore's Memorial Stadium.

It's the Colts' lone Saturday appearance of the regular season and will be televised nationally — except in the Baltimore - Washington area.

The kickoff is scheduled for 1:30 p.m.

• • •

THIS WILL be a considerably different team from the one that the Colts buried, 20-0, and , 27-6, in their last two meetings.

By virtue of those triumphs, the Colts will carry a 6-5 series edge into the contest.

They will be facing for the first time as Redskins, however, such classy Injun imports as backs Billy Barnes, Bobby Mitchell and Bob Freeman and linemen John Nisenton, Bob Pellegrini and Gordon Kelley — all obtained from NFL rivals.

• • •

WITH THE addition of a couple of fine rookies and the rapid second year development of quarterback Norman Snead, fullback Jim Cunningham and linemen Fred Hageman, Riley Mattson and Joe Rutgens, coach Bill McPeak has forged a contender for Eastern Conference honors.

• • •

IMPROVED BLOCKING up front and the exciting Snead to Mitchell aerial combination has given the Redskins' offensive potential a terrific boost. They can reach paydirt from any spot on the field.

Mitchell's duel for air supremacy with Bobby Boyd, Baltimore's crack defensive left halfback and leading pass interceptor, should make for spectacular action.

Mrs. Proctor first on TV bowling show

A lady bowler will be the first of her race on the television show "Strikes and Spares."

Her name is Mrs. Yoiand Proctor, 32, 4807 The Alameda. She has been bowling for eight years and is currently the high average bowler in her league, the Catholic Ladies League.

She has a 102 average at duck pins.

The story behind the story is one of persistency by Joseph Brown, owner-manager of the Lafayette Bowling Alleys.

He worked very diligently to get applications on the program," said Mr. Brown.

This is the first time that colored bowlers have had a chance on the duck pin show," he added.

• • •

WHEN MRS. Proctor appears on the show Dec. 13, she will have a partner who is unknown at the present time and compete for high money prizes.

Mrs. Proctor is an elementary school teacher and the wife of Joseph Proctor, 32, a postman.

They have three children, Gwynette, 10; Beverly, 9 and Joseph Jr., 6.

They also have an adopted son, Norman Richardson 18.

Last year, for the first time, Mrs. Proctor won bowling trophies. She received a trophy for third high average in her league and a trophy for second place team in a YWCA meet.

Poly unawed by top Miami 11

By SAM LACY

AFRO Sports Editor

MIAMI, Fla. - Undismayed by the presence of six Miami High players on the All-Metropolitan Schoolboy selections, a thoroughly confident Baltimore Poly football squad waited eagerly for tonight's (Friday) kickoff of the scholastic classic in the Orange Bowl.

Poly, here to meet Miami High in an intersectional charity, was confronted with publication in a local daily of the top picks among area elevens.

The newspapers was on the stand in the lobby of their Alcazar Hotel quarters when they returned late Thursday afternoon from a sightseeing trip to the famed Miami Seaquarium.

• • •

AS THEY FILED off their chartered bus behind Coach Bob Lumsden and other Poly school officials, the youngsters from Baltimore saw the big headlines hearlding the 1962 All-Metropolitan High School selections.

Their eyes caught such names as Larry La Pointe, Joe Cooper, Steve Diamond, Tom Tarbert, Robin Payan and Ken Edwards, all from Miami High and all potential Friday night adversaries.

The Poly players viewed the selections, made mental notes of their names, numbers and physical characteristics, then went to a 13th floor assembly room to watch films of their opponents in action.

• • •

"WE KNOW they have a good team," a smiling Ernie Torain told the AFRO. "But we think we have a better one.

"They run hard, they block well and they d tackle with real good determination.

"We do all these things, too, and I think we may do it a little better," the surprisingly articulate 180-pound halfback declared.

Off to the side, a group of Engineer players discussed the selections briefly.

"Maybe they're that good," opined one undentified voice, "but who thinks they could put six guys on a picked team from our league?"

• • •

LATER, AS the films of two Miami High games were being shown, the Poly youngsters appeared to be giving special attention to the behavior pattern of each stingaree Athlete whoe name was in the All-Met lineup.

Each offensive play on the film clip was run off, backed up, and re-run over and over.

Lumsden's voice boomed through the deep gray of the shuttered room.

"Check this blocking pattern. See, when they pull up into a straight block, it's always a pass. You react accordingly.

"Watch that belly fake— you corner men close in, hit that quarterback high so you smear his option.

"This has to be a weak team here, otherwise that No. 71 (tackle) would be playing on the 12-10-14 (years) team."

"Here now," the coach came in at another point, "right here is play like ours. Frantze (center) and Sicone (end) you know what to do when you see it coming."

• • •

THE COACH and his assistants went over every detail of the Miami attack it was unfolded on the screen.

They invited questions from their deeply intent athletes and listened attentively as quarterback Warren Dempsey offered an observation on the Stingaree defense.

His observation led Lumsden to the discovery that the rival team slanted toward an anticipated play, that it didn't shift.

The result was that the coaches were able to suggest certain minor changes in blocking that might wreck the balance of the defending unit.

"It's pretty obvious, I believe, that my boys are down here to play football," Lumsden ventured in a short lobby interview before tucking his chargers in bed.

"They're an alert bunch and they have learned the value of helping each other.

"You can be sure if Miami beat us, they'll beat a good team in a solid team effort."

Tenn. State ends worst grid year

JACKSON, Miss. — Two TD's each by seniors Willie Richardson and Chico Jordan helped Jackson State College drub Tennessee State University 36-6 here last week in Alumni Stadium before a jam-packed, 7,000 plus crowd.

Orange Blossom Classic-bound Jackson scored in every quarter and led 24-0 at Coach Lawrence Simmons' Big Blues their seventh setback of the year.

Bringing down the curtain on the worst season in the school's half-century gridiron history, Tennessee State won one, tied one and lost seven.

BOAT BAILER

And while we're on the subjects of boats, shop around for the cheapest plastic dust pan you can find.

LENNY MOORE DAY—Mayor J. Harold Grady hands Baltimore Colt halfback Lenny Moore a proclamation designating Dec. 8, Saturday, as "Lenny Moore Day" in the city. Lenny will be saluted prior to the Colts game with the Washington Redkins at the stadium on Saturday.
