First tan selectee on Silver All-America

NEW YORK — The 1962 Sports Illustrated Silver Anniversary All-America roster was announced today.

Among the 25 winners; elected from the ex-gridders who played their last collegiate games in 1937 is the first colored ever to be nominated for the award—Western Reserve's Frank Leon Kelker of Cleveland, Ohio.

The stories of all the winners are told in the December 10 issue of Sports Illustrated.

The silver goal post trophies were presented to each man at the National Football Hall of Fame Dinner here Tuesday.

Kelker was nominated by Western Reserve University, athlete who was elected by his classmates Outstanding Senior Student for 1937-38.

Since then Kelker has devoted himself to education and youth leadership in the Cleveland area, with a long list of recognitions mentioned in the citation.

Incidentally, he was first colored ever nominated by any college for the Silver any college for the Silver Anniversary All-America.

FRANK I. KELKER

CHARLES GORDONE of NYC, production manager of Van Dyke Productions, caused considerable excitement at Greensboro when he proceeded to supervise filming of a sitin demonstration in the S. and W. Cafeteria. Gordone later revealed he was making the film for the United States Information Service as part of a documentary, "The American Negro — Progress Report."

OUTDOOR TIPS

STORE YOUR OUTBOARD

Here's a good way to store an older motor you don't want to leave at your dealer's during the winter.

Wash salt off if you use in salt water. Then mix regular motor oil and gasoline half and half.

Put in fly sprayer and spray into the nooks and crannies of your machine.

Gasoline evaporates and leaves inner and outer workings coated with a fine oil film.

HANDY CANDLE

Once again we call attention to the vast rewards to be derived from a sturdy plumber's candle.

It can be used to start stubborn fires; rubbed on zippers to make them work freely; heat your tent; light your camp. If you're starving to death you can even eat it.

BRIGHT FLOATS

Plastic lemons make one of the most "seeable" bobbers you can find.

DUSTFREE GUN COLLECTION

It's okay to talk about oiling guns all the time, but what about the collectors of antique gun buffs whose kicks come from handling their weapons all the time?

Oil is dirty and collects dust like crazy. How about this? Polish the guns with clear (transparent) shoe polish.

Handy packets make the job a snap and high grade of wax most shoe polishes consist of will stay on through hard use, yet can be admired and used.

PIPE FIDO AT EASY

Scrap pipe can make a fine non tangle anchor for your dog's chain.

Make like this: Cut a four foot length of one and one quarter inch pipe. Cap.

Sink capped end in ground leaving six inches above ground. Into this slip a four foot six inch pipe. Screw a 90 degree elbow to the top.

On this screw a four inch nipple with end cap. Drill end cap for eye bolt, secure bolt and place on nipple.

Inverted "U" swivels in larger pipe to face whichever way your dog wanders.

REEL PEE DREGULATOR

The spool of your reel might not run at a speed to suit you. It may be too fast; may be too slow.

DON'T regulate speed by tightening bearing caps. DO use lubricating oil to do the same job neatly and safely.

Heavy oil will slow spool speed, light oil speed it up.

Tanganyika, Uganda bar La. Senator

NAIROBI, Kenya (NNPA) —Tanganyika became the second African nation Monday to refuse admission to Sen. Allen J. Ellender, Dem., La., because of his statement in Southern Rhodesia that Africans are unfit for self-government.

The Uganda government announced the same day that Ellender would not be welcome there for the same reason. He is the first person to be barred by Uganda since it achieved independence last Oct. 9.

Ellender was quoted as saying in Salisbury he was convinced that "the average African is incapable of leadership without white assistance."

Bad news on a busy morning: 'William is lying in alley'

By WALTER DEAN JR.

For busy Mrs. Mary Holmes, 566 W. Preston St., the first report Tuesday that her oldest son, William, was not in his bed, did not at once strike her as ominous.

It was 6:30 a.m. and she had just launched her husband William to his masonry job and turned to the task of preparing breakfast for 12 children — seven of whom attend school.

When 11 - year old Kenneth Holmes told his mother that 12 - year old William was not in bed, Mrs. Holmes thought that William must have got up a bit early.

"LOOK FOR him in the yard, Kenneth," she commanded.

Obediently, Kenneth went into the yard to search for his brother. Breakfast was nearly ready.

Suddenly, Kenneth screamed: "Mama, my brother is lying in the alley."

As Mrs. Holmes rushed toward her door which leads toward her concrete yard, she heard an adult neighbor's voice say: "Don't come out here."

"I didn't go out," said Mrs. Holmes.

She later was notified that her son was dead. He apparently had fallen from the roof of a three - story high row house next door onto the concrete yard.

A blood spot can still be seen on the concrete.

The death of William Holmes, a 12 - year - old sixth grader, not only shocked the neighborhood, but also created some bewilderment.

"I would like to know what happened,' said his mother, "for my own peace of mind."

So would others.

MRS. HOLMES said that she sent her son to bed at 10:45 p.m.

William, whose nickname was "Butch," was watching the "Third Man" on television.

What happened between the time Butch went to bed and the time his body was found is uncertain.

One theory is that William Holmes climbed out of his third floor window and scaled a waste products pipe to the roof of his house. Presumably, he must have been walking near the edge of the roofs and he either slipped or lost his footing and stumbled through the darkness to the concrete yard.

William's brothers and sisters are extremely upset about his death.

"I have tried to explain Butch's death to them," said his mother, "but they just don't understand."

William Holmes is survived by his mother and father and brothers, Kenneth, 11; Anthony, 6; Donald, 4; and Joseph, one week; sisters, Margaret, 10; Katheleme, 9; Patricia, 7; Elizabeth, 5; Lindy, 3 and Kim, 1.

Among those present were:

Senator-elect Verda F. Welcome (4th D.); Clarence M. Mitchell 3rd, House of Delegates-elect member (4th D.); Judge Robert B. Watts, of Municipal Court; David L. Glenn, executive secretary, Equal Opportunity Commission; the responsibility of paving over them.

Mrs. Jaunita Jackson Mitchell, NAACP's Legal Redress Committee; Mrs. Audrey B. Norris, advisory Children Center; William Adams, businessman; Henry G. Parks, president, Parks Sausage Co., and Calvin Douglass, attorney.

The 101 new buses are to be air-conditioned, and will replace 98 streetcars now in service on these lines.

The City Council passed the ordinance over the strong protest Monday evening of Councilman Anthony F. Di Domenico (2nd D.) who argued that the company's past service did not merit such relief.

Also voting against the ordinance were Councilmen William L. Hodges and Michael J. McHale (both 6th D.)

MR. POLLACK'S political group and the new Mayor's Goodman—Kovens organization have been generally considered hostile rival factions in the past.

The ceremonies also attracted almost all fo the City Council members, except Walter T. Dixon (4th D.), lone member of his race in the Council.

The City Council is expected to vote Monday on a successor to Mr. Goodman's vacated president seat.

Thomas D'Alesandro 3rd, president, Board of Supervisors of Elections, is in the forefront for this post, and is believed to have th eneccessary majority votes to be elected.

Mr. D'Alesandro is being opposed, however, by Paul J. Reed Jr., veteran Third District political faction leader.

The executive board of the Federal Neighborhood Improvement Association has voted to press its demand to have a piece of property in the 2900 block E. Preston St., condemned to make way for a school. The new school would relieve overcrowding at Fort Worthington Elementary School No. 85, Lakewood Ave., and Oliver St.

"The matter is still alive and we will continue to press and smoke out who, what and why the ordinance to condemn the property was withdrawn by the City Council, " Paul Cockrell, the association's attorney promised.

Ordinance 414, to condemn the warehouse property owned by the firm of Levinson and Klein, was dropped two years ago, according to Mr. Cockrell.

MRS. GLORIA FARRAR, school teacher and president of the School No. 85 PTA, said her group voted the issue of the Levinson and Klein property.

Mrs. Farrar, a leader of efforts to get a new school in the congested pupil area said:

"We see no sense in bringing up the issue.

"Our object is education now for the children.

"No interference should stop the building of the school on the present school site."

Ambrose Chlada, director of school facilities, asked by the association to come to the meeting held at St. Paul Church of God, Lakewood Ave. and Hoffman St., said interference would definitely slow up the plans to build the school on the present school grounds.

As envisaged by Mr. Chlada, the new school will be built next to the present one. It will cost about $1 million, contain 24 classrooms, an auditorium, cafeteria, gymnasium, library and a health suite, he said.

An enlosed crossway will connect the old and new buildings to allow both to use the cafeteria, auditorium, gymnasium and library, Mr. Chlada said.

DISSPELLING complaint the new school would take up all the children's recreation space, Mr. Chlada said it would take in less than one-fourth of the present grounds. Work will begin on the school next summer, he said.

Mr. Chlada also told them that condemnation proceedings will begin this month for a piece of property at Lakewood Ave. and Federal St., as a site for a primary center, which will handle the school's kindergarten and first grades.

This center should cost about $250,000 the director said.

Segregated school wants Jencks House

A private law school, which does not admit colored students, wants to buy a mansion from the city for $25,000 less than what has been offered by another prospective buyer.

The Board of Estimates approved Wednesday a contract giving Harry L. Gladding, an automobile dealer, an option to purchase the W. Mt. Vernon Pl.

According to Mr. Gladding he plans to use the mansion for his own home and has offered to buy it for $100,000.

The Eastern College of Law, next to the Jencks House, opposes the sale to Mr. Gladding, claiming it wishes to buy the house for college expansion, and has offered $75,000.

Before the sale is final, the City Council must approve it. A public hearing, where college representatives to oppose the purchasing of the house by Mr. Gladding, will be held.

The date of the hearing had not been scheduled at the AFRO presstime.

VOLUME 1 HOLIDAY EDITION NUMBER 5
BELLOWS GAZETTE
When Thomas Edison First "Electrified" Christmas!
'Twas the week before Christmas, 1912 when, all through snow-covered Madison Square Park, New Yorkers beheld the glow of Thomas Edison's wondrous electric bulbs emblazoned — for the first time — on a huge outdoor Christmas tree.
And no doubt those same holiday strollers saw the stately Bellows & Company "electrics" as they silently sped on their rounds, carrying fine imported foods and wines and, most important of all, rare Kentucky spirits to New York's distinguished hostelries, clubs and residences.
For then, as now, Kentucky Bourbon from Bellows was the choice of epicures among the "400," and no social register party or bon vivant dinner from Washington Square to upper Fifth Avenue was deemed festive without it.
Those gala days are long since gone, but their mood is still with us in this season's bottling of Bellows Club Bourbon. Its special old "Bellows House Print" gift wrap harks to the gracious days of yesteryear. Its rare mellowness and authentic Kentucky bouquet bring back a taste of past good living. Both these characteristics make Bellows Club Bourbon an astute personal purchase...as well as a most thoughtful holiday gift. For today...as it has been for 132 holiday seasons...
