Accused once star grid player No. 41 at Central

By B. M. PHILLIPS

Aly Ivan Chandler, charged here in Baltimore with the Dec. 15 killing of his mother-in-law, is a onetime star football player at Central State College, Wilberforce, Ohio.

Walter Fellers, assistant public relations officers at the college, recalled that Acy was 'an excellent halfback . . . an outstanding football player." He wore uniform No. 41.

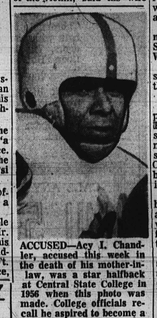
He remembered Acy entered Central as a transfer student from Drake University in 1955, and remained at Central from 1955 through the first semester of 1957, when he withdrew.

ACY MAJORED in physical education, and had 'an outstanding' record until his marks fell off, and he withdrew.

He was a member of the college choir, and had 'a very good' baritone voice. He also belonged to the club if the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity.

He told Central State officials he hoped to become a college coach.

"He was a very likeable boywhen he was here," Mr. Fellers added. He said his information was that Chandler left school to join the Ft. Wayne, Ind. police force.



ACCUSED—Acy I. Chandler, accused this week in the death of his mother-in-law, was a star halfback at Central State College in 1956 when this photo was made. College officials recall he aspired to become a football coach.

declared.

Chandler was advised that he is charged with a crime that carries the capital punishment and anything he said could be used for or against him.

During the brief hearing, Chandler, unshaven, and in need of a haircut, kept glancing around the courtroom as if looking for someone.

WHEN HE was led to the lockup, the accused shook his head, and mumbled incoherently.

Witnesses to the Tuesday evening tragedy which struck without warning said it came while many residents of the area were busy with Christmas chores.

When this reporter reached the scene minutes after Mrs. Everett's body was removed to the city morgue, relatives and neighbors were in a state of shock, weeping hysterically.

"Why didn't she run out the back door, why didn't she run out the back?" a sister, Mrs. Edith Walbarrow, asked repeatedly as tears streaked down her face.

"Poor mama, poor mama, why would anyone do this to her?" a daughter, Miss Ernestine Everett, a former debantante and Baltimore County school teacher, sobbed.

Mrs. Chandler, estranged wife of the accused, wept silently, but her body shook violently as she walked blindly through the neatly furnished house.

MR. EVERETT, husband of the victim, said his wife was slain while protecting their two grandchildren, ages 3 and 4.

"I was in bed when I heard the children scream in the cellar. I jumped up and started looking for my pants.

"Before I could find them, a man came up stairs and asked where was Eleanor. I told him she had gone outside to make a telephone call.

"While he was still in the room, I ran downstairs to the cellar. I saw my wife on the floor. I knew she was dead.

"I rushed back upstairs and told him: "You killed my wife!"

"Yes, I killed that b. . . and I'm going to kill that other one, too," Mr. Everett quoted the man as saying.

MR. EVERETT said while he stood too dumbfounded to move, he man began searching for Mrs. Chandler, who was hiding in the closet, using her mother's coat as a camouflage.

"I had the coat over my head but I could see the light when the door closet opend," Mrs. Chandler said.

She escaped possible death when her would-be assailant mistook her for a bundle of clothes in the closet, Mrs. Chandler reported.

Unable to find his second intended victim, the assailant returned downstairs and grabbed one of the children and stalked out of the house, Mr. Everett t o d this reporter.

THE SUSPECT was arrested at a house in the 800 block of Whitmore Ave., when the owner, Mrs. Nelliene Watts, ran out and alerted police who were canvassing the area.

"The man you want is in my house and I'm scared," Sgt. Otis Dyson quoted Mrs. Watts as saying.

Police found the suspect setting in the house holding the child detectives testified.

MRS. CHANDLER, a keypunch operator for the City Planning Commission, said she and the accused were married five years ago, shortly after they both left Central State College, Wilberforce, Ohio, in their senior year.

They lived in her husband's hometown in Indiana for two years, where he was a member of the police force before moving to Baltimore.

Mrs. Chandler reported she and her husband have separated for 18 months and divorce proceedings had been started at the time of the tragedy.

They were living with her uncle (Mrs. Everett's brother) until she moved out, Mrs. Chandler stated.

HER UNCLE, Aaron Rogers, said the suspect was still living at the Hilton St. address at the time of the incident.

Mrs. Chandler wept unashamedly while telling of events leading to the holiday tragedy.

"I first moved in with my cousin on Greenmount Ave., but had to move as soon as my husband found where I was living," she said between sobs.

THE SLIGHTLY built city worker said she had had no trouble since she moved into a second-floor apartment in the Somerset Homes in East Baltimore until this Monday night.

"My husband must have followed me from workbecause around 6:30 he kicked my door in and started beating me. He choked me until I was unconscious then he slapped my face to bring me to," she recalled Wednesday.

Mrs. Gertrude Lancaster, who occupies the apartment adjacent to Mrs. Chandler's, said she was attracted to the apartment when she heard noises.

"When I got there, he was sitting on her with his hands around her neck and she was unconscious."

Mrs. Lancaster said she begged the man to get off Mrs. Chandler, asking him "are you crazy?"

THE SUSPECT then dragged Mrs. Chandler from the apartment, down the stairs and paraded her through the projects while she wore only a slip, a jacket and no shoes, she reported.

Police arrived shortly before the man brought Mrs. Chandler bodily back into the apartment.

They ordered him out of the apartment, but did not arrest him, Mrs. Lancaste said.

After police left, Mrs. Mrs. Lancaster said the man returned to the apartment and warned Mrs. Chandler and a cousin, Mrs. Rose Boone:

"If you call police again, I'm going to kill every woman in the family."

Exactly 24 hours later Mrs. Everett was slain.

A WARRANT, on the complaint of Mrs. Chandler charging assault and striking, had been issued for the suspect's arrest when he was picked up on the homicide charge, detectives told Judge Finnerty.

Mrs. Chandler, who said "My mother gave her life for me and the children because she loved us so," and sent her upstairs barely five minutes before the front door at the Harlem Ave. house was kicked in.

"I started to use the telephone in the hall, but mama said 'Don't use that-one, go upstairs and make your call,' she told me.

"Mama was crazy about the children and when he kicked in the door, she ran downstairs to protect them. She was trying to get them out the back door, but he caught her before she could make it," the grieving daughter sobbed.

Mr. Everett said his wife worked at a local airplane plant until 1959, but has since devoted her time to sewing. She was personal seamstress for many prominent Baltimore families, he said.

When the AFRO visited the Harlem Ave. home Wednesday, Mr. Everett, his daughters, and Mrs. Mrs. Walbarrow presented a pitiful contrast to the gayiety of the holiday season.

While talking with their minister, the Rev. Mr. Carrington, Mrs. Chandler was fumbling through a handful of Christmas cards just delivered.

Her face was swollen and bruised with a scar running the length of her nose.

She said she sustained the injury Monday night.

As she silently thumbed through the cards tears rolled down her cheeks dropping on the gaily sealed envelopes leaving rain drop-like spots.

Other survivors include: Mrs. Edna Jordan, sister, and Lindsay Rogers, brother, both of Virginia, and James Rogers, brother, of New York.

Also Freddie, Montiessie, James, Matthew, Homer, and John Everett, brothers-in-law.
