13,000 learning new skills under new retraining act

WASHINGTON

More than 200 schools and colleges are already conducting training programs for over 13,00 unemployed men, women and out-of school youth under the new Manpower Development and Training Act the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare announced today.

By Decmeber 10, the 15th week of operations under the new law, there were 361 such programs in operation in 39 States and the District of Columbia. More than 10 additional training proposals from communites around the country are currently under review by Federal and State education and labor authorities.

The legislation provides that public vocational education facilities shall be used for training wherever possible. Such facilities include vocational schools and high schools with vocational training workeshops; technicals institutes and junior colleges; and municipal and State colleges offering special non-and adult extension services baccalureate programs.

Training nay be offered in any field which there are job opportunites.

Currently, training is available in nearly 100 occupational categories, chief among which are electrical and mechanical trades and The urgent need in most parts of th country for service help in health fields has stimulated a growing number of programs for nurse aides and practical nurses.

Courses range in lenght from about three weeks to a year, depending upon the nature of training. In the trades and industrial occupations training time has been averaging approximately 25 weeks.

Training costs to date are nearing $7 million approximately a third of the $20 million allocated for the period ending June 30, 1963. Fifty mlion dollars additionally has been set aside for training allowances paid to unemployed heads of families and youth between the ages of 19 and 20.

The Manpower Development and Training Act is a three-year program aimed at reducing unemployemnt caused by technological change, shifts in market demands, relocations of industry and foreign competition.

It is estimated that about 50,000 people will be trained for new jobs by the middle of next year. Because training is offered only in fields exists, placement should be consistently high. At present, 90 percent of those who who have completed training are employed.

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is designated as administrator of training under the legislation.

The Secretary of Labor directs surveys of employment opportunites in each State and is responsible for selecting areas of substantial and persistent unemployment, directing payment of training allowances to those who are eligible. Training is planned and carried out by local vocational education and employment security, the U. S. Office of Education; and the U. S. Department of Labor.

National, State, and local advisory committees, made up of representatives of education, organized labor, business, industry, agriculture and the public, serve to generate the cooperation necessary to make the legislation effective.

In the District, 230 trainees are participating in the retraining programs with an estimated cost of $33,139.

At Mytilla Miner School, 615 - 15 St., NE: 20 trainees are learinging to become service station salesmen.

One hundred and eighty trainees are studying to become clerk-typists at Armstrong High School, 1st and O Sts., NW, under the program.

And at Margaret Murray Washington Vocational High School, also at 1st and O Sts, NW, 30 trainees are learning both practical and registered nursing.

Is Another Disaster Around The Corner?

AN EDITORIAL

In keeping with his promises, Governor J. Millard Tawes has asked the Legislature to place enactment of Civil Rights legislation on its must list.

We must wait to see whether a strong equal accommodations bill eventuates.

Meantime, this administration has left us without colored judges by the simple operation of leaving the names of all judges off the sample ballots in the general election Disaster No. 1.

Secondly, this administration has sponsored and seeks nactment of a Curlett Commission Report, which would end the independence of Morgan State College and place it on the level of teachers colleges under a state-wide board.

If ever there was a disaster, this would be a tremendous one under Mr. Tawes' administration.

We are in great sympathy with the Governor's program to change Teachers colleges into liberal arts schools.

There is no need to involve Morgan or the University of Maryland in this change, and no strong argument is given for disturbing Morgan's present administration.

The Governor has stated that he favors the basic principles of the Curlett report.

We need to wait to see whether he adds a very important amendment—one exempting Morgan from its provisions at this time.

Morgan is an undergraduate liberal arts college. Its president has asked trustees to approve expansion enabling the college to offer graduate work.

It should not be placed under the direction of any new trusteeship whose chief function is to change teachers institutions into liberal arts colleges.

deal. Some 4,000 men are striking in Baltimore.

Mr. Haile came to Baltimore in 1916 from his native Roanoke, Va. He started work on the waterfront in 1921.

He was elected vice president of Local 858 in 1936. After two years in that post he unseated Jefferson Davis as president on his third attempt. He was president of Local 858 for seven years when he was defeated in 1947.

He won back the presidency in 1950 and in 1953 after the death of Mr. Davis, became Atlantic Coast District vice president. That was the position he moved up from to his new job as international vice president.

Mr. Haile and his wife, Laura, have a daughter, Frances, 8, a third grade pupil at School 144. The family attends the Union Temple Baptist Church where Mr. Haile is a member of the trustee board.

WILLIAM HAILE

—Trap inspector

the inspector answered:

"Maybe we can get together and work things out."

"Right then and there I became suspicious," Mrs. Minus said.

After the man remarked that "I don't know how much money is in this house," according to the complainant, she decided to "play the game his way," Mrs. Minus continued.

"I TOLD HIM I had $25, but he said 'those other people would be mad if I came back with that little bit of money,' according to the widow.

She said Woolf then asked if she had a savings account and she produced her bank book, but concealed the balance.

"He then told me if I would give him $125 he would guarantee that I would never see another inspector,'" Mrs. Minus stated.

"Ordinarily, I would have let him go and call the Building Inspector and tell him not to send him to my house again. But he made me mad when he threatened me.

"Why should I let anybody threaten me when I haven't done anything wrong?" she asked.

MRS. MINUS said the violation claim grew out of the use of the third floor apartment without having a fire escape to the building.

She pointed out that since only two people live in the building, she considers it as a one-family dwelling.

"But if they want to call it two families, my friend can move to the second floor. I can close the third floor and we'll still need no fire escape or six doors."

Mrs. Minus said she is convinced that the accused inspector is part of a shakedown ring. Here's why:

"I had some electrical work done in November. When a city inspector came out to check it, he paid no attention to the electrical work, but started talking about building violations instead."

"You are in trouble," she quoted the man as saying.

"I paid him no attention because I knew nothing was wrong that I couldn't fix without any trouble," Mrs. Minus stated.

SHE SAID she heard nothing further until Woolf left one of his cards at the house while she was at work, asking her to call him.

The Dec. 28 visit by the inspector resulted from that call.

Records in the Building Inspector's office do not show when Woolf uncovered the alleged violations.

Raphael Fratter, general superintendent, said the electric[illegible] was wiring on Nov. 26.

He said the electrical inspector apparently observed building violations and notified the building division and Woolf was assigned to check the complaint.

However, neither Mr. Fratter nor Jafes Nicholas, deputy chief engineer, could explain why it took the building inspector a month to check the alleged violations.

ROBERT G. DEITRICH, city building inspection engineer, said Woolf has been suspended pending the outcome of the case.

William J. O'Donnell, state's attorney for Baltimore, said the case will be taken to the grand jury in two or three days.

Section 23 of Article 27 of the Criminal Code provides, upon conviction of the charge, a fine of from $100 to $5,000 or a penitentiary sentence of not less than two or not more than 12 years or both.

Building inspection officials denied that a shakedown ring exists in the office, pointing out that "this sort of thing happens in cycles. We usually have this trouble about every five years."

A spokesman for the state's attorney office said there is no current evidence of a ring, but several complaints involving the handling of alleged building violations have been referred there for investigation.

Boycott in Jackson brings quick arrests and reprisals

WASHINGTON

Two more students have been arrested for picketing downtown stores that discriminate against colored workers and consumers. This increased to eight the number of persons jailed for promoting a boycott of Capitol St. merchants.

Miss Dorie Ladner, 20, of Hattiesburg, Miss., and Charles Bracey, 18, of Jackson, were arrested in front of the F. W. Woolworth store. They carried signs saying "Boycott Capitol Street—Buy Elsewhere." The formal charge was obstructing the sidewalk.

This was the same charge placed against four other students, a white professor, and his wife, after they were jailed on Dec. 12. All of those arrested are from Tougaloo Southern Christian College at nearby Tougaloo.

The professor and his wife, John R. and Edith Salter, are advisers to NAACP youth groups taking part in the campaign. The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) and CORE are also part of the movement.

PICKETING BY the Salters and four of the students signaled the start of the boycott, which has been described as 60 per cent effective. Some white residents of Jackson are said to be supporting the effort.

On the other hand, several of the boycotted businesses are reported to be big contributors to the White Citizens Councils of America, which has its national headquarters here. Mayor Allen Thompson has publicly stated that he will line Capitol St. with 1,000 policemen if necessary to stop picketing.

The boycotters contend that their arrest for picketing violates liberties guaranteed under the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. This guarantees freedoom of religion, speech, press, peaceful assembly, and petition.

Therefore, attorneys for the Gandhi Society for Human Rights, affiliated with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), have asked for transfer of the cases to the U.S. courts. State courts have held up action until the Federal Court here decides if it will take charge.

Meantime, the Salters and the students were freed under cash bonds provided by NAACP, the Gandhi Society and the Southern Conference Educational Fund (SCEF), an integration group based in New Orleans.

"One of the very basic reasons that the boycott is developing quickly into an excellent success is because of the unified organizational front which has developed with the movement, says the official bulletin of the North Jackson Youth Council (NAACP).

THREE NIGHTS before Christmas, holes were found in a window and screen at the Salters' home. It appeared that a bullet had been fired through them, but no shot was heard and no bullet was found. If a bullet went through the holes, it narrowly missed the Salters' 9-month-old daughter, who was asleep in a bed by the window.

A sign was found on the Salters' lawn which read: "Santa Claus — Boycott Tougaloo! NAAPWT, National Advancement Association for the Poor White Trash Merry Christmas, White Folks."

Hampton releases expansion program

HAMPTON, Va. — The year 1962, with building permits valued at $3,289,000, will be remembered as the beginning of Hampton Institute's modern expansion program. President Jerome H. Holland stressed in a year-end review.

Construction was started during the year on a communications center - music building, an investment of $1,689,00, and two dormitories, valued at $1,600,000. These units will be dedicated in time for the opening of fall term in 1963.

Accommodations will be available for an additional 343 students when the dormitories open next September. Of that number, 181 will be women and 162 men. Because of insufficient housing about 150 students are presently renting rooms off campus.

Powhatan school must integrate

RICHMOND

Judge John D. Butzner Jr. Thursday ordered a Powhatan (Va.) elementary school to immediately admit three colored children and barred the county from closing public schools to prevent integration.

Handing down his ruling in Richmond Federal District Court, he ordered the county—effective next September—to assign all pupils to various schools in the county on the same basis, without regard to race.

In a second order, Judge Butzner told his hometown of Fredericksburg to admit three colored children to predominantly all - white James Monroe High and Maury Eelmentary Schools.

Powhatan is just a few miles from Prince Edward County where schools have been closd since 1959 to avoid integration. Another phase of the Prince Edward case will be heard in Alexandria January 9.

Chicago detective on job even when he's in hospital

CHICAGO — Det. Stuart Bradshaw, 34, served notice on law breakers that he'll even take time out from his sick bed in the hospital to catch a crook. He was in the hospital awaiting his fourth operation of the year to correct a spinal ailment.

Bradshaw's roommate told the seven-year veteran of Chicago's finest that "I think a couple of guys are trying to steal a car." The detective joined his roomate at the window and saw two men take a sample case from the car.

Bradshaw quickly phoned police. The two men hailed a cab and the detective relayed the information. He hardly had hung up the phone when squad cars nabbed the two suspects. Identified as John E. Adams, 31, and Ivory Clark, 36.

'Free by '63', Masonic theme

The militant slogan "Free by '63' will be sounded anew Sunday when some 4,000 Prince Hall Masons will be joined by Hiram Grand Lodge Masons in observance of the 100th anniversary of the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation.

The program is scheduled for 3:30 p.m. in the beautiful Willard W. Allen Masonic Temple, 1301 Eutaw Pl., at Lanvale St.

Banda leads Nysaland out of CAF combine

BLANTCRE, Nyasaland — (ANP) — Dr. Hastings K. Banda, mild mannered Chicago-educated physician who became a fiery African nationalist, has led this country out of the federation with wealthier Northern and Southern Rhodesia.

The action which has won London approval breaks up the European-domin a t e d Central African Federation which Sir Roy Welensky, Prime Minister, has struggled vainly to keep intact.

While the breakup has been brewing for some time, it was signaled officially when the British government said it accepted in principle the secession of Nyasaland from the combine.

THE FEDERATION, established in 1953 and embracing Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland, has long been a source of discontent for African nationalists. They have often scoffed at the European sponsored idea that the union was a "partnership."

Nyasaland, easternmost sector of the African grouping, has a population which includes 2,500,000 Bantu tribesmen and 2,600 Europeans. Dr. Banda's Malawi Congress Party controls the Nyasaland government.

Shriners give Christmas party at East Biddle

A Christmas Party was presented by the Shriners of Jerusalem Temple No. 4 at the East Biddle Theater, Dec. 22, to entertain youngsters of the community.

During the program the children watched a full length movie and cartoon, which was a treat from the theater management.

At the conclusion of the program each child was given a stocking full of candy, cookies and other "goodies."

The Christmas party was directed by William C. Dare and his party committee.

Police in Detroit stage numbers raid

DETROIT — Police seized 2,100 mutal and number bet slips last week in raids on three near east side apartments.

Racket squad detectives linked the operation with the giant numbers ring cracked Nov. 9 in a raid on the Gotham Hotel. Some of the bet slips confiscated last week bore the same code numbers as those found at the Gotham, police said.

Welfare Dept. spikes literacy classes story

The State Department of Public Welfare has reprimanded Miss Esther Lazarus, director, Baltimore Welfare Department, for what was termed an "erroneous" news release to the daily press on the matter of literacy classes.

The news release, which reportedly misconstrued the Welfare Department Board's position, was brought to the board's attention by Howard to be of benefit there, must be [illegible] Murphy, veteran member, who contended a clarification should be made.

As a result, Miss Elizabeth G. Smith, acting director of the State Welfare Department sent Miss Zazarus the following letter about the news release:

"The content was erroneous in three areas.

"First, the State Board of Public Welfare has a rule-making power and the board has taken no action regarding the proposed literacy classes.

"Second, the staff of this department has repeatedly emphasized our conviction that for educational classes to be of benefit there must be motivation on the part of the recipient to use the resources, and this motivation will not be gendered by a compulsory order tied to the money grant.

"This was put out to you in discussion with Mrs. Don - Leary and confirmed in the memorandum to which you referred at your board meeting.

"OUR POSITION was reiterated at the state - wide meeting on Dec. 3, when the question came up in connection with the possibility of work projects for ADC - E recipients.

"Third, final material implementing the 1962 amendments permitting a works program for ADC - E recipients has not been issued by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and, therefore, Maryland is not yet in a position to develop work projects for recipients in this program."
