HUSBAND HELD IN DEATH OF BARMAID

Baltimore Notebook

By MAX JOHNSON

Mr. Johnson, a regular member of the panel of the Maryland News Conference TV program, will be seen this Sunday over WBAL-TV at 5 p.m. This week's guest is A. Gordon Boone, newly named Speaker of the House of Delegates. Mr. Johnson's column appears in this space every Friday.

An ominous split is shaping between the top independent Democratic organizations in the city's Fourth District — over the matter of mayoral slate support for the March 5 primary.

This became more pronounced following Monday's deadline withdrawal date — when the three Democratic mayoral tickets remained firmly drawn.

And this split has prevented general agreement on a common independent Democratic City Council slate for the district.

That is, one that could be pitted against the district's long - ruling Pollack faction and its three incumbent councilmen — with some measure of assured success.

Now, it appears somebody wants to take advantage of personal gain for the moment — rather than unify efforts for the betterment of the district as a whole.

The three Democratic mayoral tickets have formed thusly:

1. Mayor Philip H. Goodman for Mayor; Thomas D'Alesandro 3rd for City Council president, Councilman Henry R. Hergenroeder (3rd D.) for Comptroller.

2. C. Meredith Boyce for Mayor; Councilman Peter G. Angelos (3rd D.) for City Council president; Hyman A. Pressman for Comptroller.

3. Dr. R. Walter Graham Jr. for Mayor; Councilman Solomon Liss (5th D.) for City Council president; James J. Lacy Jr. for comptroller.

HERE, NOW, are the three major Fourth District independent organizations — and their reported alignment.

1. The Fourth District Democratic Organization, headed by State Senator Verda F. Welcome; Murray Abramson, chairman, Baltimore's House of Delegates representatives, and Lloyal Randolph, veteran political leader.

This top independent organization in the district is strongly supporting the Goodman - D'Alesandro - Hergenroeder ticket.

2. The Greater New Frontier Democratic Clubs, headed by S. Edward Smith.

This organization is reportedly backing the Boyce-Angelos - Pressman slate.

3. The Monumental Democratic Club, headed b form Senator J. Alvin Jones.

Senator Jones told the AFRO this organization has not decided which ticket to back — but there are widely circulated rumors of dickerings with the Braham - Liss Lacy ticket heads.

The Senator publicly announced the past October he and his organization were severing ties with the Pollack faction — after more than 20 years of association.

SO, WE have in the Fourth District three key independent Democratic groups — each set to support a different mayoral slate in March 5 primary.

There is nothing politically unusual about this — it's done all the time.

I am concerned here with the apparent harmful effects this particular division of effect has on the possible nomination of long - needed independent City Council representatives — and their subsequent election.

As of now — all three groups have different ideas about the Council race.

There are nine colored and eight white candidates seeking the three Democratic nominations in this district.

THE WELCOME - Abramson - Randolph group has sought general agreement on this slate of two colored and one white:

Henry G. Parks Jr., president, Parks Sausage Co.; James W. McAllister, recently resigned assistant state's attorney, and Mrs. Maureen Michelson, civic worker.

Ed Smith's group is backing the candidacy of William A. Welch Sr., insuranceman and unsuccessful member on the Welcome - Abramson - Randolph State Legislature ticket.

Miss Hildagardeis Boswell, a new face on the political scene, is another Council candidate and member of the Smith group expected to get this organization's support.

Joining these two colored candidates to form a Council ticket is expected to be Louis J. Pucci, resident of the upper Reisterstown Rd. sector.

Senator Jones said his organization would back the Council candidates who go along with the mayoral ticket this group supports.

WITH THE exception of Councilman Walter T. Dixon, Pollack faction ally, other colored Democratic candidates are virtually unknown politically.

They are, Alonzo D. Ames, Mrs. Evelyn Hatchett, Dr. Donald W. O. Hughes and Mrs. Linda L. Randolph — four people neither of the three organization heads are claiming as members.

So — we have a picture of a muddled City Council Democratic race facing independents in the Fourth District.

And it is muddled — because somebody wants to let personal gain for the moment interfere with rightful colored representation for the district.

It's just this sort of thing with muddy - up - the - waters candidates that has kept this district backward politically.

And it's high time somebody put a stop to these shenanigans.

Russian Roulette Fatal To Teen

A teenage girl was shot to death Wednesday night while her boyfriend was playing Russian Roulette, police reported.

Pearlene Wilson, 14, 900 block W. Fayette St., died of a bullet wound of the head, sustained at the home of her boyfriend in the same block, Homicide investigators stated.

A murder charge has been lodged against the 16-year-old youth and he is scheduled to be arraigned in homicide court in a few day, police said.

FUNERAL arrangements for the young victim had not been completed at AFRO presstime.

The tragedy heaped more trouble on the shoulders of Mrs. Lula R. Wilson, mother of Pearlene, who already is on the brink of destitution.

Mrs. Wilson said she has six other children and her husband deserted them several months ago.

When the AFRO visited the home Wednesday, the family was burning paper for heat and had to borrow a bulb to light their way through the dark house.

Urges Finan review his housing ruling

Miss Ruth Fegley, executive director of Baltimore Fellowship House, today called on Atty. Gen. Thomas B. Finan to remove "the negative effect" he has left on the possible passage of housing legislation in this session of the General Assembly.

Following a ruling by Mr. Finan last month, William C. Rogers, chairman of the Governor's Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations, withdrew a proposed housing bill.

Citing the case of "Case vs Colorado Anti-Discrimination Commission," which had been ruled unconstitutional in a lower court of Colorado, Mr. Finan questioned the constitutionality of the proposed local law.

"Because of the lack of authoritative and unanimous court approval of this type of statute, we must express some doubt as to the constitutionality of this legislation," he said.

• • •

MARYLAND'S chief legal officer said the Colorado lower court had found its Fair Housing Act of 1959 "unconstitutional because of vague and indefinite language in the statute and an unlawful delegation of legislative power to an administrative commission."

• • •

HOWEVER, the Colorado Supreme Court on Dec. 17, in a 6 to 1 opinion, ruled the Housing Act constitutional providing certain subsections are deleted.

Following the ruling and in response to an inquiry from Miss Fegley, who is collecting data on housing laws in various states, acting director of the Colorado Commission, Edward Terrones, wrote:

"...We are still very much in business."

Mr. Terrones added:

"Your attorney general's doubt as to the constitution-

Teacher killed in New Year smash-up

Leon Jose Bartz, 35-year-old schoolteacher, became the city's first traffic fatality for the new year when a police car crashed into his auto at Liberty Heights Ave. and Hilton St. 8 p.m. Tuesday.

Mr. Bartz, who lived at 3600 Harlem Ave., a graduate of Douglass High School and Howard University, was dead on arrival at Lutheran Hospital.

The Medical Examiner ruled that death was caused by a crushed chest sustained in the smash-up.

Officers Robert Hall and Francis Murphy, of the Accident Investigation Division reported that Mr. Bartz's auto was struck by a police radio car driven by Officer Dale L. Wroe, 26, 4300 block Dedar Garden Rd.

• • •

MR BARTZ was driving a 1961 model foreign car and was southbound on Hilton St. while Patrolman Wroe was eastbound on Liberty Heights, investigators reported.

The teacher's car, struck on the right side by the 1962 police sedan, was knocked 100 feet from the point of impact, Officers Hall and Murphy said.

Filing of traffic violation charges are pending the completion of an investigation, the Traffic Division told the AFRO.

Investigators declined to state whether evidence in

Club operator indicted on tax evasion

A former uptown sporting figure and now East Baltimore night club operator is the first local person indicted in the Federal Government's new crackdown on rackets.

Raymond T. Torain, 42, 100 block Springfield Ave., was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury Thursday. He is accused of income tax evasion.

U.S. District Attorney for Maryland Joseph D. Tydings and his assistant, J. Hardin Marion, said the businessman understated his income by $33,338 during a three-year period.

• • •

CRIMINAL information on which the jury returned the indictment shows Mr. Torain understated his income in 1956, '57 and '58.

Judge R. Dorsey Watkins set bail at $5,000, but the clerk's office said it had not been posted at noon today.

Mr. Torain was convicted of lottery violations in state courts in the mid '50's and formerly operated the old Tijuana night club in the 2200 block of Pennsylvania.

Patrons witness killing in bar

"This year can't be any worse than last. It just can't. ..."

This was Mrs. Lucy DeShields, 1900 block W. Lanvale St., who haltingly was responding to a "Happy New Year" greeting from a well-wisher Wednesday.

For her last year had been "bad."

Her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Lorraine DeShields, 26, was stabbed to death noon Monday and her son, Junior Russell DeShields, 26, has been charged with murder.

• • •

WESTERN District police said the younger Mrs. DeShields, a bar maid at a club in the 1600 block Pennsylvania Ave., was killed New Year's Eve while she was at work.

Eyewitnesses told police that she was working behind the bar at Club 1601 when a man went behind the counter and struck her in the left chest with a butcher knife.

She was dead on arrival at Provident Hospital.

Mrs. DeShields' death ran the number of victims of holiday violence to 9. Eight others also met violent death during a 13-day period—Dec. 18 to 31.

• • •

MR. AND MRS. DeShields had four children, ages 5 to 9, who have been taken in by their grandmother. She said the couple had been married nine years and lived in the 700 block Payson St.

The grandmother, who kept a watchful eye on the four handsome children, three girls and a boy, fought back tears as she attempted to talk to a reporter Wednesday.

Each attempt to answer questions was choked off with emotion, and all responses ended with a slight shaking of the head and whispered words.

"This is something," she repeated, while referring to the tragedy which struck on the last day of the year.

• • •

SHE SAID her son is a former postal employee, but conducted a lunchroom concession in the 2000 block of Lanvale St. at the time of the incident.

Dets. Oliver Walker and William Burke, who arrested the suspect, said evidence shows that a quarrel triggered the slaying.

The accused had been arrested the day before on an assault complaint lodged by Mrs. DeShields.

The couple had been estranged since the incident, they reported, and the slaying occurred when a try for reconciliation failed.

• • •

FUNERAL SERVICES will be held 1 p.m. Friday at the Kelson Funeral Home, 1348 N. Calhoun St. and burial will be in the National Cemetery.

In addition to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Weems (Louise), and children, Mrs. DeShields also is survived by seven brothers and sisters.

Mr. DeShields is being held without bail for a preliminary hearing in Homicide Court, date of which is to be set by the State's Attorney's office.

Baby 'X' mystery unsolved

"I've never seen anything like it in all my years of police work."

That's how Southwestern Police District Lt. George W. Hasson explained the deepening mystery of "Baby X."

Police are no nearer a solution today than they were over a month ago when the partially decomposed body of a baby boy was found in an isolated ravine in Mt. Winans Nov. 24.

How he got there, who put him here, who and where are his parents are questions still baffling police, Lt. Hasson told the AFRO this week.

• • •

LONG AND tedious checks of hospitals, door-to-door canvasses of homes in the Cherry Hill and Mt. Winans areas have failed to turn up a single clue leading to the identity of the child or his parents, Lt. Hasson stated.

Anonymous callers have flooded the station with tips they thought would shed light on the mystery, but all proved futile when checked out, the officer said.

Following the Dec. 1 edition of the AFRO carrying an artist's conception of how the baby looked before his death, investigators visited homes throughout the city in response to calls, according to police.

In each case they were

SOMETHING NEW IN ROCKETS — Gone is the traditional sheet of the KKK, the Rev. David Andrews, Methodist chaplain at Morgan State College, staged a one-man demonstration in front of the segregated Northwood Theatre in the Northwood Shopping Center.

The Ku Klux Klan was never like this

A North Carolina born clergyman, the Rev. David Andrews, was the sole picket in front of the Northwood Theater, Wednesday night.

The white Methodist chaplain for Methodist students at Morgan State College was protesting the long standing segregation policy of the theater.

Clothed in a white sheet, imitating a white sheet, "KKK", which was intended to place emphasis on the sign he was carrying, the Rev. Mr. Andrews' sign read: "Day of Klan is PAST Let's Join the HUMAN RACE and the 20th Century."

On the reverse side was, "After [illegible] years, Equal Rights for All Citizens, Northwood Theater: OPEN TO EVERYONE."

"My parent though Southern, were good religious people and liberal minded. I was taught to believe that the color of a man's skin is unimportant.

"I believe that segregation is obviously unscientific, undemocratic, unnecessary and contrary to our religious beliefs," said the one time medical student and graduate of the University of North Carolina and the Duke University, School of Divinity.

EX-ROOMER CHARGED IN DEATH OF GRANDMOTHER

Housewife saved from $500 loss

'I could just hug and kiss them . . .'

"I just could hug and kiss them. When I get on my knees I'm going to ask God to build a fence of protection around them!"

Those were the jubilant reactions of a housewife who was apparently snatched from the clutches of two alledged film-flam artists in downtown Baltimore Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Dorothy Wells, 57, 200 block N. Arlington Ave. was talking to a reporter in the presence of her rescuers — Det. Sgt. Raymond Ratcliffe, and Dets. Harry Klages and Earl Potter.

The officers, of Headquarters Hotel Squad, had just testified before Chief Municipal Court Judge T. Bourington that they caught two Chicago women in the act of taking $500 from Mrs. Wells.

The women, who police said arrived in Baltimore early Wednesday, are:

Mrs. Valerie Michelle Morland, 21, 300 block Englewood Ave., and Mrs. Verlita Nelson, 20, 4400 block Berkley Ave., both of Chicago.

• • •

SGT. RATCLIFFE said they arrested the suspects in a downtown bank, seconds after Mrs. Wells had given them a red pocketbook containing $500.

The officer stated that the three-man detail had put the women under surveillance after they "by instincts" became suspicious of their actions.

Mrs. Wells testified she met the two women in Howard and Lexington Sts. when one asked her if she (Mrs. Wells) was "lost."

One of the suspects began talking to her, Mrs. Wells said, and kept saying, "I like

'Mr. Courage' Tells Why

JAMES MEREDITH

"His major concern is for the safety of his family . . ."

WASHINGTON

The AFRO learned Tuesday that there are five major reasons why James Meredith is seriously considering leaving the University of Mississippi at the end of this semester.

They were listed as:

1. Fear for the safety of his parents and his son, who is residing with his parents at their farm home in Kosciusko, Miss. Gunfire riddled the home during the Christmas holiday.

2. The fact that if he wants to go to the library he must notify Federal marshals and his Army bodyguard a week in advance.

3. The inconvenience of giving his Federal escorts an hour's notice in advance before securing his meals. "By the time they arrive I'm not hungry any more," he said.

4. The refusal of Federal authorities to extend their protection to members of his family, who have become targets of the White Citizens Councils and other bitter-end segregationists.

5. His inability to get adequate sleep because of the continuing practice of dormitory students on the floor above him moving furniture about through the night.

"His major concern is for the safety of his family," Mrs. Constance Baker Motley, Meredith's attorney told the AFRO.

The NAACP lawyer said that not only is Meredith concerned about his parents' safety, but is constantly worried about the safety of his son who is living with

Patuxent given OK

"Unlike penal institutions operated by the Maryland Department of Correction, the Patuxent Institution for defective delinquents was found to be totally free of racial discrimination."

This was the report issued by a four-man team of investigators representing the Civic Interest Group and the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance at the end of an inspection tour of Patuxent on Wednesday.

The Patuxent Institution was the fourth penal facility toured by this group of probers and the only one thus far found to be free of racial segregation.

Previously the CIG-Ministerial Alliance team had toured the House of Correction, the Maryland State Penitentiary and the Maryland Institution for Men. All of these facilities were described by a CIG spokesman as "almost completely segregated."

• • •

AFTER THE Patuxent inspection, Leo Burroughs, public relations officer for CIG, said:

"This proves that if integration can work successfully at Patuxent it can work at other penal institutions in our state as well.

"We salute the administrators and civilian employees of the Patuxent Institution for a job well done. It is most gratifying to tour an institution which respects the dignity of all men. While in the dining hall we noted numerous instances of colored and white inmates sitting at the same tables. Sectional segregation such as that existing at the House of Correction, the Maryland State Penitentiary and the Maryland Institution for Men was no where in evidence."

Mr. Burroughs also noted that "there was complete integration of housing facilities.

All of the tiers or cell compounds that we visited had a mixture of white and colored inmates. The various work and shop programs are equally free of racial barriers.

"In the light of the satisfactory conditions which ex-

Suspect arrested at home

A parking lot attendant, Louis Walter Pulley, 48, 700 block Dennison St., has been charged with murder in the death of Mrs. Inez Mobley, Gwynns Falls Pkwy. grandmother.

Pulley, on parole from a prison term in New York State, and former roomer in Mrs. Mobley's home, homicide investigators learned, was held without bail for action of the grand jury.

Chief Judge T. Barton heard no testimony during arraignment Thursday, but ordered Pulley held when police stated he had signed a statement admitting the slaying.

DETECTIVES ARRESTED Pulley at his home Tuesday after a round-the-clock investigation of the brutal slaying of the 52-year-old grandmother.

The suspect had been questioned and released earlier police reported, when they were unable to uncover evidence pointing him at the scene of the crime.

Pulley was re - arrested when unknown persons reported seeing him enter the house the day Mrs. Mobley was slain, the AFRO learned.

The accused is a native of Maryland and has police records in other states, investigators learned.

Mrs. Mobley's body was found in the basement of her home at 1602 Gwynns Falls Pkwy., by her grandchildren who went there Dec. 29 after she failed to answer the telephone.

They were admitted by Melvin Frooks, a third floor attendant.

A construction pick was buried eight inches in her skull.

Neighbors reported last seeing the victim alive 10:30 a.m. Dec. 26, she was found 2 p.m. Friday.

The Medical Examiner, who later ruled that death was caused by strangula-

400 ready for state jobs —will they find them?

In 1963 will the state of Maryland give colored high school and college graduates who seek government jobs the same shoddy treatment as in former years?

This question comes after an AFRO poll this week of schools and colleges in the Baltimore area that revealed approximately 400 colored graduates have expressed their intent to apply for government careers at the state and Federal levels.

J. Percy Bond, director of placement and admission at Morgan State College, stated that he felt the 400 total "a conservative figure."

It was Mr. Bond's finding that at Morgan alone, "well over 100 students slated for graduation would be attempting to get positions in government." This Morgan total added to tallies made by school officials in predominantly colored high schools would total 400.

In its continuing investigation of racial discrimination in state agency employment the AFRO has repeatedly reported that hiring officers with various state agencies have stated they would be willing to hire any "qualified applicants regardless of race."

• • •

THAT SUCH has not been the truth has been proven in a series of articles on job bias in government by the AFRO.

On this subject, Dr. Saul M. Perdue, principal of Carver Vocational High School, stated that graduates of trade courses it this school had received little or no help in job placement from the Department of Employment Security, an agency now under investigation by Federal labor officials for its racial practices.

Dr. Perdue said: "We are not satisfied with the job re-

Republicans beat Democrats to punch, introduce rights bill

Delegate J. Glenn Beall Jr., House minority leader from Allegany County introduced a public accommodations bill in the Maryland General Assembly Thursday.

In a statement preceding the action, the Republican lawmaker, speaking for the bill's 17 co-sponsors, said:

"Eighteen of the Republican members of the House of Delegates are introducing a bill today to provide for statewide equal public accommodations.

"The sponsoring members feel it most important that this legislation be enacted during the present legislative session.

"We feel that we, first of all, have an obligation to each of the citizens of our state to see to it that their rights are not infringed.

"While it obviously would be more satisfactory if the privileges of equal accommodations were granted upon a voluntary basis; if they are not, it then becomes the responsibility of elected officials to act on behalf of those whose rights have been denied.

• • •

"SECONDLY, it is our feeling that there can be no recurrence of the several incidents where people have been refused service because of their race.

"These incidents were embarrassing, not only to us as citizens of Maryland, but they were perhaps more embarrassing to the government of the United States.

"It is most regrettable that the U.S. Government was placed in a position of having to apologize to another government because its officials were denied service

BLUE STREAK SPECIAL

Requiem For A Native Son, By A Native Son

By RALPH MATTHEWS JR.

What follows concerns a friend, Leon Jose Bartz, and this city he, you and I call home.

Leon is of a family that settled on Druid Hill above North Ave.

So much has Baltimore grown just two decades ago this territory - McCulloh, Druid Hill, Madison - was called Sugar Hill by residents outside.

The late Harry Pratt, principal of Douglass High until his death during the Forties, had a rambling corner mansion of a house at Madison Ave. and Whitelock St. Other distinguished Baltimoreans were everywhere in this neighborhood.

In this area just below Druid Hill Park, Leon grew to manhood. His family, neither richest nor poorest, was a good one. No matter what later adventures my friend was caught up in he never forgot what and where he came from.

I first took notice of him toward the end of our days in high school. His was before integration. I still bitterly recall that most of our textbooks were worn discards from white high schools.

My math textbook had the name Aaron Goldman, Western High School, written inside the cover. The thought of being alloted some white kid's hand - me - down book with pages missing and ink-stains on many pages infuriated me.

For a long time if ever I ran into anyone named Aaron Goldman he was going to be punched dead in the mouth. Of course I am older now. Ragged text-books were not Aaron's fault. Whoever, wherever he may be, my blessings go with him now.

• • •

WE WERE a proud though segregated bunch of youngsters then. Leon was as proud as any.

He chose not to dress in the fashion of other teen - agers.

Every quarter he had went into regal suits from an exclusive downtown men's store. These garments made him look older than his age. It was years before I realized that we were indeed the same age.

This passion for clothes, I came to understand later, was part of Leon's need to be an independent personality. It earned for him the nick - name "Sharp" Bartz. Some kids called him this nastily, some with utter respect.

Nothing anyone said changed Leon's notion of what to wear. For a teenager not to go along with the crowd is to my mind an act of heroism.

• • •

SOMETHING else about Leon caught my young mind then.

A fellow who sat next to me in the Douglass band trumpet section was one day arrested and charged with the rape of a white woman on Park Ave. All of us in school were shocked and preferred not to think about this case at all.

One afternoon I saw Leon on his traditional corner of North and Druid Hill. He was elegantly dressed.

He told me he had not come to school that day but instead went to Criminal Court for the accused boy's trial.

Leon wanted to know something about this case. I remember that Bartz described the courtroom drama in colorful and accurate detail.

He had the gift of acting out his experiences for you in conversation so that you saw and heard each person he was describing. Years later, I have been in far - off cities and have begun
