Can you name the 6 reasons Martini devotees prefer the glorious Gordon's Martini?

1 To this day, the ancient pot still method is used in distilling Gordon's Gin. 2 Only gin from the heart of the run is bottled for Gordon's. 3 Gordon's uses only juniper berries and other choice botanicals aged to the peak of maturity. 4 Gordon's is extraordinarily dry. 5 Gordon's has a distinctively delicate flavour. 6 Gordon's maintains its exceptional quality because it still harks back to Alexander Gordon's original formula created in England in 1769. Reasons enough for enjoying a Glorious Gordon's Martini soon, wouldn't you say?

Jazz in religion discussed here by Lorenzo C. Handy

By ADAH K. JENKINS

As a concluding (but, by no means conclusive) thought on the controversial issue of jazz in religious music, we had an enlightening and provocative interview with Lorenzo C. Handy, cantor at Mt. Calvary Episcopal Church and rehearsal tenor soloist with the Baltimore Handel Choir.

Mrs. Handy's particular interest in this subject dates from his college days at Washington. While a member of the choir there he participated in an Episcopal mass, in which the liturgical music was based upon the jazz idiom.

Entitled "A 20th Century Folk Mass", it proved to be a most exhilerating experience for Mr. Handy, who declared "it was in no way irreligious, since it was composed by the Rev. Father Goeffrey Beaumont, an East London Vicar of the Church of England."

He feels that "this is an effective way to bring the message of the church up to date and to express old religious faith in contemporary terms".

Further explaining this theory, Mr. Handy pointed out that "the music used at Holy Eucharist in apostolic days was the normal music of that day and became 'church music' when it arrived with definite church association in Western Europe, where it developed itself into the plainsong we know now. The word 'folk' meant literally the normal, everyday popular type of music."

* * *

QUOTING Father Beaumont, Mr. Handy affirmed "that there has been nothing since Elizabethan period that could properly be called a 'folk mass' and that church music (unquote: meaning the strictly liturgical music) is utterly foreign to the majority of people".

The Baltimore musicians also recalled "that love songs and even drinking songs, such as 'greensleeves' were transformed often into hymns and carols."

Since returning to Baltimore Lorenzo Handy met Ed Summerlin, a scholarly musician of 35 with a doctorate in composition, who is a member of the music faculty of North Texas State College.

Mr. Summerline has written settings for Morning and Evening Prayer (of the Episcopal Church) using the jazz idiom. The latter was commissioned by last year's Dies" at one of our central First International Jazz Festival which was held in Washington.

"Ed feels that jazz is significant musically," stated Lorenzo, "because it is capable of a powerful comment upon the crisis experiences of existence, without sentimentalizing in the manner of the commercially popular, whether rock-and-roll or gospel song".

In Mr. Summerlin's case the Morning Prayer setting was composed after the loss of his nine month - old daughter. Upon consultation with his minister, the composer was encouraged to express his religious experience which had come to him thru his bereavement.

* * *

RECENTLY MR. HANDY attended the presentation of Rev. Ernest Marvin's "Passion of Christ" entitled "A Man Dies" composed in the jazz idiom.

The work was, given by Presbyterian Church with a narrator, five leading characters, two soloists, chorus, with accompaniments played on two guitars, bongo drums and organ.

Virginia May Woolley directed the production, with the assistance of James Slater Crawford, IV and the Rev. Horace T. Allen, minister of education at the Towson church.

The Rev. Mr. Allen spent some time in Bristol, England, where the Passion was originally produced in St. James Presbyterian Church and later televised on the national program.

Mr. Handy stated that "Rev. Allen reported varying responses to the Jazz setting from protests in Parliament that it was sacrilegious, to profound praises that it was a unique experience, utilizing new forms and meaningful response to the Passion of Christ.

* * *

HE HASTENED to add that this experiment is using the jazz idiom in liturgical and other religious forms has nothing to do with the present trend of popularizing the litrugy". Reference here is to the "dialogue mass" sometimes called the "People's Mass." which has met with notable success in the local Roman Catholic church.

Mr. Handy reported that "many people have said to me that jazz is good and that religion is good, but the two don't belong together. It is much safer, of couse, to put religion in a separate compartment that has nothing to do with the rest of life. . If jazz is too unholy for church then it is too unholy for any part of life".

He added, with a philosophical smile, "I suspect that many of the outraged cries (against jazz in religious music) are really expressions of guilt from persons who experience unfortunate associations when they hear this music."

It is to be hoped that the Towson Presbyterian Church group maybe prevailed upon to repeat "A Man Dies" at one of our central-ly located churches, so that more people may have the opportunity of hearing this provocative and significant music.

A LARGE and enthusiastic audience attended the kick off meeting and reception of the current ticket subscription campaign for the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, which was held last week at Walters Art Gallery.

Dr. Peter Adler, conductor, William Boucher III, acting president of the Symphony Steeper, general chairman of Association, Richard E. Steeper, general chairman of the subscription drive and Clinton Norton, new manager of the orchestra were among the speakers.

Two brilliant piano compositions were played admirably by Marjorie Benson, after which kits for the drive were distributed.

Those interested in securing information about seating arrangements and prices or about the special benefit plan for organizations may call the Symphony Office at 727-7300 or this reviewer at LA. 3-4795.
