EOC asks housing bill delay for Mayor's bill

Baltimore's Equal Opportunity Commission voted Wednesday to ask the City Council to delay action on the Dixon open occupancy housing ordinance, pending introduction of Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin's proposed civil rights package legislation.

H. Warren Buckler Jr., EOC chairman, said his commission is now drafting the package rights ordinance for the Mayor, and it will contain a housing sector.

This promptly raised the ire of Councilman Walter T. Dixon (4th D.), author of the open occupancy ordinance now before the Council, who charged the issue is too important for delay.

"Without discussing the merits or demerits of the pending ordinance," Mr. Dixon stated in an angry reply to EOC's action, "let me say that further delay in considering this measure will tend to crystalize sentiment which might well lead to another Birmingham, and this no one in his right mind would approve."

Mr. Buckler told the AFRO the housing sector in the Mayor's package rights legislation would follow, with minor variations, the same proposals as the Dixon open occupancy ordinance.

He said the commission felt that the package ordinance would have more chance of passage that a single ordinance touching on a single topic.

LIST AMONG efficient folks to be admired, Verna Gosnell. . .not that Mr. Gosnell (William) doesn't come in for his share of the happenings on the Gosnell heath.

When Mr. and Mrs. Gosnell entertained members of the For-Win-Ash Garden Club, Sunday, at their brand new and elegant suburban home, one would have thought the couple had been settled for years, instead of mere weeks. The rose garden was in full bloom, the flowers bloomed at the front, and the luscious vegetables came from the Gosnell garden.

The only visible thing that the versatile Verna and Bill had not accomplished by their own industry was the magnificent view from their living room that nature had been in the hundred of years building.

The Gosnell place is a real estate . . . with acres and acres of land. . . and their low, long house a dream. Guests gathered in the living room, because the day was a showery one, but spread to all sections of the house, and particularly the music room.

Following the elaborate dinner, they settled to cards . . .against a background of music, with talented Wilbur Matthews at the organ. Mr. Matthews was joined by Mr. Gosnell, who also plays the organ beautifully then the former moved to the piano, and we did have music that was music, with the duo performing.

During an interlude, Mrs. Naomi Camper drew the group into a brief meeting, during which they paid a tribute to the hosts with the singing of "God Bless This Home"; with the reading of an original poem by Nellie Buchanan (she had composed it between hands at cards) and with the presenting of a gift to the hostess. Tears trickled down Verna's cheeks.

That over, the party swung into continued gaiety.

About were:

Inez Kent, Olga Chambers, Nellie Buchanan, Cathryn Parker, Rosalie McGuire, Carrie Johnson, Myrtle Lee, Anne Payne, Olga Rodney, Agnese Browne, Isloene Crowner, Madeline Harding, Lula Patterson;

Messrs. and Mesdames Douglas Camper, Leslie Bell, Webster Kendrick; Drs. and Mesdames Albert LaForest, I. Bradshaw Higgins, Charles Campbell, Ray gins, Charles Campbell, Rayfield.

Guests were Mesdames Gertrude Urquhart, Allegra Taylor and Margaret Wheatley.
