Parade will open Fire Prevention Week

Fire Prevention Week will be inaugurated this year on Saturday, Oct. 5 with a parade that will be bigger and better than ever before... more units, more bands... more floats! The parade will form at the 5th Regiment Armory at 1 p.m.

It will start promptly at 2 p.m. and will proceed south on Howard St. to Baltimore St. — east on Baltimore St. to Holiday St. — north on Holiday St. to Lexington St. — east on Lexington St. to Gay St. where it will disband in the vicinity of the Memorial Park.

The reviewing stand will be at City Hall where the Mayor and other dignitaries will review the parade.

Here is a sample of some of the units participating in this year's parade:

Post Office Band, ROTC of Loyola, high school bands from city and county, several Boy Scout units, majorette and drum corps units, several military units and Bands such as the 327th Army Band from Edgewood, clown acts, Fire Department equipment, modern and antique, American Legion, Tall Cedars, Knights of Columbus and Boumi Temple.

THE WEEK of Oct. 6 to Oct. 12th has been set aside as Fire Prevention Week throughout the entire country. Mayor McKeldin has issued a proclamation of this week for the city of Baltimore.

One of the most interesting and spectacular events of Fire Prevention Week will be the Fire School Show which will take place on Tuesday, Oct. 8 and Thursday, Oct. 10 at 7:30 p.m.

These demonstrations are to be held at the Fire School, 6720 Pulaski Highway and the public is cordially invited to attend.

There is no admission charge and tickets are not necessary as seats cannot be reserved.

stock and barrel.

It is a generally accepted belief that had Wallace remained silent and kept his troopers away from Birmingham, there would have been very little trouble when schools were integrated this fall, and perhaps . . . there would have been no bombings and no deaths.

Birmingham is a city of violent moods, and with the governor so willing to defy the courts, the lunatic fringe had reason to believe he stood on their side in their defiance of the same courts, and was in sympathy with them.

Wallace seemed to be flashing a green light for the apostles of violence, and to give them further comfort, the National States Rights Party was at hand to keen the hate alive.

Vicious, rabble rousing and race baiting, the party is based in Birmingham and attracts to its banners the virulent anti - colored and anti - semetic hate mongers.

WALLACE IS their fair haired idol and this has made him even more distasteful to the colored citizens who see him not as a harmless clown, but as dangerous power mad man who plans to ride the horse of racism just as far as he can.

Rev. Shuttlesworth has compared Governor Guinlimite Wallace to a dictator and calls the Alabama State Troopers his personal Army, led by one of his chief lieutenants, Col. Al Lingo.

There's bitterness in the voice of Shuttlesworth and other leaders when they speak of the Troopers and sometimes, without even realizing what they are doing, they refer to them as "Storm Troopers."

IF THERE is fear of the State Troopers, then there is contempt for the local police, who after 40 odd bombings are still not able to find a single responsible party.

As far as the city administration is concerned, it is regarded as weak - willed and unable, or unwilling, to recognize that the colored community has legitimate grievances.

As far as the white people are concerned, their omination for the role as the biggest villain of them all is Attorney General Kennedy, whom they had accused of almost everything in the book, except starting the Civil War.

They hate the Justice Department because of its investigations into reports of violations of the constitution, and its efforts to bring about integration of the schools.

The Revs. King and Shuttlesworth — the two men whose voices ring loudest in the colored community—are regarded as devils without horns.

DESPITE THE influence of the ministers, faint rumblings can be heard that the non - violent Ghandian theory has failed in Birmingham, and the only answer to the bombings and shootings in the colored community, is to meet violence with violence, an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.

This philosophy finds its most vocal outlet in the minute cell of Black Muslims, who have their own Mosque, not far from the bombed out 16th St. Baptist Church where four girls died.

Walked into the Mosque, with its cramped auditorium and the biting voice of Minister James X hurls out scorn at white people, as he beats against the lectern with a pointer to illustrate the depth of his bitterness.

His theme is the same one that can be heard in any Muslim Mosque — the white man is a devil who means the black man no good, and the only answer is complete separation.

The pointer bends as he slaps it on the edge of the platform and talks about the "fool" colored ministers of Birmingham who see their churches bombed and then talk of loving the white man.

From his small audience stumble out words of approval.

These are not the leaders in the audience, and their number totals less than 50—but the minister believes that the number will grow — and who is to say that he is wrong?

Other elements in the colored city are also re - examining the non - violent approach with critical eyes. They are not as racially militant as the Muslims, but they too question whether prayers and love of one's enemies is going to change Birmingham.

THE DEBATE ranges all the way from the dining room of the Gaston Motel, the meeting place for the bourgeois of Birmingham, to dim and shabby pool rooms.

This is the main subject of discussion — retaliation or non - violence — and given the right combination of factors, it could well be the former.

The colored people have been pushed so far, that many of them just aren't willing to be pushed any further. All that it would take to light the tinder box would be a reason and a leader.

What reason might well come if there should be another bombing or another incident of overt police brutality.

WHEN A BOMB goes off in Birmingham, it is a signal for the police to appear and set up lines around the bombed building. A crowd collects and the anger toward the white people who did this thing begins to build up.

The crowd remembers that these police have not been able to solve any of the 40 odd bombings of recent years, and their anger grows.

There follows some shoving and police begin to push against the crowd using the familiar racial epithets that seem to go with the uniform.

One of the nervous policemen fires a gun, or a rock is thrown from the crowd, and the melee is on in earnest with rocks and bullets filling the air.

SO FAR, the city has been relatively lucky in escaping a blood bath, but its luck can't last forever.

If the police handled themselves differently, then these clashes could be avoided.

But the all - white police department still seems to be operating under the now departed Bull Connor, who conceived of the police as an instrument for keeping colored people in line.

Birmingham has a long list of colored people killed by the police, with the latest being a recently discharged soldier and a 13 year old boy.

The soldier was shot after the bombing of Attorney Arthur D. Shores' home on Sept. 4 as he reportedly burst out of a house with a gun in his hand, as angry colored residents rioted against police

Friends of the dead man said, however, that he was shot as he was running away from the scene.

The other death was that of a 13 - year - old boy shot in the back only a few hours after a bomb had ripped the 16th St. Baptist Church.

THE TWO killings have worsened the already strain relations between the police and the colored community, which has serious doubts that the law enforcement officers are sincere in their efforts to find the persons responsible for the terrorism in the city.

Serving also to keep the two apart are the facts, made by some elements in the white community, that the bombings might be the work of the colored community itself.

As fantastic as this might sound, this has been the view that has been expounded, with the explanation that colored people blow up their own churches to gain sympathy for their cause.

The mere fact, that supposedly intelligent white people can say such a thing, is further evidence of just how far removed from reality some of Birmingham's leaders are.

EVERYTHING IN Birmingham, from the cradle to the grave, seems designed to impress upon the colored citizens that are inherently inferior.

Even when the 16th St. Church was bombed and the children killed, segregation was still king. The ambulances that were summoned were colored ambulances. This took a little time but colored people just don't ride in white ambulances in Birmingham — not even from the scene of a church bombing.

The ambulances are operated by the colored funeral homes.

INSTEAD OF discouraging the freedom fighters, Birmingham's attempt to remain a white man's city, seems to stirred them to new heights.

Inadvertently, by its acts of terror, the white community has brought the colored community ever closer together than before, since it is evident that anyone a person does not take an active part in the movement — he isn't safe.

None of the parents of the children killed in the 16th St. Church bombing has been deeply involved in the rights movement — and yet their children died because of it.

None of the people killed in the rioting had been prominent in the movement, and yet they died because of it.

As in every other city, not every colored person is a flaming advocate of human rights, but flaming or not, they can not avoid being involved.

FROM THE planation like shacks in some areas of the inner city, to the magnificent homes in the Smithfield area, every colored person is involved.

In trying to stamp out the movement, the bigots have made it stronger.

Under other circumstances, Birmingham with its pleasant weather, its friendly people, and its easy going way of life, would be a nice place in which to live.

But hanging over everything, is the cloud of race, and it makes Birmingham an ugly and an evil city.

So ugly and so evil that many colored persons are afraid to go out in the street without some type of protection.

It is a rather unusual type of existence — the life that these people live, never knowing from one moment to the next if they will be the next casualty in the war.

Undoubtly there are many colored people who would like to leave Birmingham, but they remain because this is their home and they will not let fear drive them away.

They remain because they have faith that things have to change, they have to get better.

It is hard to see how they can get any worse.

ROBERT E. CHAMBLISS

Patrolman is suspended for pointing gun

A Central District patrolman has been charged with assault by pointing a loaded revolver at a man Tuesday afternoon while off duty on Dallas St., south of North Ave.

The suspended patrolman, Charles Bauer, has been released under bail of $250 for a hearing Wednesday in the Eastern District Municipal Court.

According to the complainant, Franklin C. Blackmon, 3100 block E. Biddle St., the officer pulled his revolver on him during an argument, which police said concerned the way in which Mr. Blackmon had parked his car.

Zoning appeal asks Garrison apartments

An appeal requesting the construction of a 42-unit apartment building at 2914 - 26 Garrison Blvd. is scheduled to be aired on Oct. 15 before the Board of Municipal and Zoning Appeals.

Also set for that Tuesday, beginning at 1 p.m. in room 231, City Hall, are appeals seeking:

The use of the basement at 2719 Baker St. for a beauty shop, and the location of a coin operated laundrymat at 1744 N. Bond St.

No hearings are scheduled for the coming Tuesday.

released on $300 bail, have been identified as Robert E. Chambliss, 38; Charles Cagle, 22, and John W. Hall, 34.

The state has given no indication that it entends to file any additional charges against the man.

IT IS this fact that has soured the colored community on the state's investigation of the fatal dynamiting. Added to this, is the knowledge that the Justice Department was skeptical about the arrests from the very start, and they have been described as "red herring".

Meanwhile, on Wednesday another explosion shook the city, but this time the police were able to arrest a suspect — something they have failed to do in over 40 some earlier bombings.

The suspect in this case is a colored youth, Johnny Lewis Ruffin, 20, who has charged with arson.

The explosion came in the East Birmingham sector and destroyed a white owned meat market in a colored area.

Police arrested Ruffin two hours after the explosion, when he went to a hospital for treatment of burns.

IN ANOTHER are of Birmingham's continuing racial problems, Earl Blair, former Army Football coach, and Kenneth Royall, former secretary of the Army, announced they are winding up a Presidential mission to the city.

President Kennedy sent the men here this strife torn city after this fatal bombing of the church.

They have been meeting with white and colored leaders—but never at the same time.

No one is talking about what went on at the meetings, but one of the colored leaders, Arthur D. Shores, attorney, said he was "hopeful that out of the visit and meetings we may be able to make progress in meeting some of the demands made on the city administration and industry".

Mr. Shores said the demands on the city included the hiring of colored police and firemen, job opportunities in various city departments and better police protection.

From industry, Mr. Shores said that more job opportunities are being fought.

Store owner robbed at gun point

An armed bandit early Tuesday went into a food market in the 500 block Gilmore St. and left minutes later with about $130 in cash.

The hold-up victim, Max Driner, of the 7400 Castlemore Rd., told police that the man came into his store about 7:45 a.m. and asked for a pack of cigarettes. When he returned with the order the man pointed a gun at him and demanded his money, he said.

Mr. Driner said that after giving the bandit all the bills he had in the register, he was ordered into the basement. He said the man also took from his wallet some cash then fled.
