Proclaims Oct. 16 as Day of Prayer

WASHINGTON (NNPA).—"Let us humbly acknowledge that we have not yet succeeded in obtaining for all of our people the blessings of liberty to which they are entitled, President Kennedy said Wednesday in declaring Oct. 16 a National Day of Prayer.

"On this day, in this year, as we concede these shortcomings," the proclamation added, "let each of us pray that through our failures we may derive the wisdom, the courage, and the strength to secure for every one of our citizens the full measure of dignity, freedom and brotherhood fr which all men are qualified by their common fatherhood of God."

The proclamation was issued in compliance with a joint resolution of Congress which was adopted on April 17, 1952.

It provided that the Chief Executive would set aside "a suitable day each year, other than Sunday, as a National Day of Prayer, on which the people of the United States may turn to God in prayer and meditation, at churches, in groups, and as individuals."

In an interview on the ABC-TV program, "Youth Wants to Know," Mr. Wilkins had several pointed comments to make on Sen. Barry Goldwater, the March on the quota system and other areas of concern to civil rights groups.

E. Farber, city health commissioner, who with other health and fire department officials had been called to the scene.

She appeared Wednesday at 1 p.m; in Housing Court on a charge of operating and maintaining a day nursery without a license. The Case was postponed by Judge Robert L. H. Hammerman until Oct. 17.

At a 3 p.m. hearing in the Northwestern Municipal Court, also on Wednesday, Miss Sharp was dismissed on the false report charge.

Her attorney, Clement R. Mercalde, told the court that Miss Sharp's intention was not as the charge stated, "to conceal the illegal operation of the nursery."

Mr. Mercaldo stated that on a previous occasion when Miss Sharp had taken a child who had been injured at the nursery to the hospital for treatment it had been refused because she was not the child's parent.

MISS SHARP testified that her only concern was for the child.

"I didn't even think about the nursery," she said. "My only concern was for Denise. I wanted her to receive treatment immediately without waiting for her mother to come all the way to the hospital."

Mrs. Gibson, an employee of the Woodlawn Social Security Building, also testified that Miss Sharp called her from the hospital and told her why she had used her name.

Judge Diener, upon dismissing the case, said he could find no evidence of an attempt to deceive the police or to conceal the illegal operation of the nursery on the part of Miss Sharp.

MISS SHARP, who helps her mother with the operation of the four-year-old nursery, told the AFRO Wednesday that police had given an erroneous report of the number of children on the premises.

She said eight of the children were members of her family, and the total number of children in the house at the time of the accident was 47.

"A few of the other children," she said, "I had been getting from around the neighborhood, to take to the fire station.

"It was Fire Prevention Week and all fire stations were having open house. I wanted the children to see the fire engines and other equipment."

Miss Sharp said she had often permitted parents to leave their children with her without asking for money for their care.

"This report about mother making $28,000 a year is false," she said. "I should whether my mother has ever been $28,000. Many of the kids we took care for nothing."

MRS. ELLIOTT, widow of the Rev. Alfred H. Elliott, who died in December and who had been an associate pastor of many years told the AFRO.

"I knew my license had expired in January, and I had intended to have them renewed, but we were having the nursery expanded and I had waited to wait until the work had been completed before getting it."

According to the Health Department Mrs. Elliott's expired license only permitted her to care for eight children. She told the AFRO that she had an enrollment of about 40.

DESPITE THE fact that reports stated that the house was poorly kept and the children not properly supervised, several parents of children cared for by the nursery disagreed, including the father of the accident victim, Mrs. Gibson.

"I had no reason to doubt that Denise was being cared for properly," Mrs. Gibson said. "She had been enrolled in the nursery for three years and she had always been happy there."

Another parent, Mrs. Mildred Rlendart, 100 block S. Catherine St., told the AFRO, "My little girl has been going to the nursery for the past three and a half years. I had full confidence in Mrs. Elliott and her staff.

"I never worried while I was at work, because I knew she was getting the best of care. Mrs. Elliott's program was well planned and my child was also satisfied."

Mrs. Rlendart, a public school teacher, said that now that the nursery has been closed, she is having a hard time finding a place where her daughter can go until after school.

MRS. ETHEL PALMER, unit block Monastery Ave., said:

"My daughter has gone to the Peter Pan Nursery since she was 18 months old, and I have often gone there unexpectantly and always found everything to be clean and orderly.

"Mrs. Elliott's nursery was inexpensive and she would often take the kids to places of interest. I remember one time she took them to Washington. She also takes them to the park, the circus, the movies and other places.

"As far as I'm concerned, if she were to open up tomorrow, I'd take my child right back to her."

OTHER PARENTS interviewed said that Mrs. Elliott had an educational program which prepared under age children for school.

"I felt that my child was ready for school before she was old enough, because of Mrs Elliott's training. She loved Mrs. Elliott like a second mother," said Mrs. Donald Petty, 1800 block Division St.

"Now that the school is closed I don't know what I will do," Mrs. Petty continued. "There aren't too many places in Baltimore like the Peter Pan Day Nursery."

AFTER HIS release, Mr. Morrison was informed by his sister - in - law of her mistreatment.

"The sergeant started yelling at me," he said, "when he heard my sister - in - law tell me that he had cursed at her."

This reporter had been standing near the sergeant and heard him say to Mr. Morrison:

"Shut up and don't give me none of your lip, or I'll lock you up again for being disorderly in the station house."

"I have a right to speak my opinion," Mr. Morrison rebutted.

At this the sergeant yelled, "Who the h . . . do you think you are, you speak any of your opinions around here and you'll find yourself right back in jail.

"You think your're smart, bringing a check down here, trying to impress somebody, you should have brought money."

Mr. Morrison told me after the incident, "I think he resented the fact that I was a colored man with a check book."

Captain George H. Deuchler, Central District commander, ordered the sergeant into his office, after being informed of the incident.

U.S. troops sought for Ala. voting

WASHINGTON

"Unless Federal protection is furnished at the registration in Selma, next Monday, there's going to be trouble," This is the prediction of John Coynes Jr., attorney and Maryland state senator Verda F. Welcome, after witnessing the attempt by colored to register Monday in Selma, Ala.

At a press conference held in the office of Congressman Diggs they estimated that from 250 to 300 colored waited patiently from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. to register.

ONLY 30 to 35 were admitted to the court house to fill out applications. Two of these persons, one of whom had a Ph.D. degree, have been informed that they were not found qualified to vote in a Selma election.

While colored stood in line waiting in a futile attempt to get into the court house, they were continually subjected to the harassment of the police force.

The force was a combination of the Selma police, Dallas County police, and volunteers whom the sheriff had assembled in case of emergency."

MR. COYNES told of seeing a large group of police "beat and kick two boys who had brought lunches and soft drinks to those waiting ing in line."

Senator Welcome and Mr. Coynes had a conference, Wednesday with Burke Marshall, Justice Department civil rights trouble shooter to request protection against this kind of action.

They emphasized that unless protection is furnished for Monday's registration attempt trouble is bound to develop.

MR. MARSHALL informed them that reports he has received indicate the situation is not serious enough for such action.

A conference with the FBI's chief administrative assistant, revealed that the FBI could only act as an observer.

By federal law the registrar could be removed by court order and federal referees sent in to register the colored.

HOWEVER THE federal judge in the area has refused to hear the case.

Mr. Coynes pointed to this as an example that having civil rights law on the book mean nothing, if the authorities won't take the necessary action.

The SNCC sponsored registration drive represents a significant step forward in Selma. In the past 12 years only 14 colored have registered. Dallas county where Selma is located is 53 percent colored.

The appeal, addressed to President Kennedy, urges the United States to "boycott and suspend recognition of the South African Government until such time as it represents all South Africans."

day to attend the "colored fair."

They are protesting the firing of Mrs. Gloria Rackley, third grade teacher, who was dismissed for "advocating lawlessness." She is one of the leaders of the Orangeburg Movement.

IN A "get tough" full-page ad in the local daily, concurred in by both police and city officials, merchants admitted they are hurting from the gripping boycott thrown around the downtown area by demonstrators.

However, they vowed to ignore the demands of colored citizens and pleaded for continued patronage from "respected colored" citizens and pleaded for white customers not to become "tools of agitators" by shopping out of town "until things quiet down."

The page ad — signed by the mayor, city councilmen, State Assemblymen, and police officials, and not merchants — claimed that demonstrators are intimidating shoppers who dare to ignore the boycott.

Declaring that Orangeburg City and County have "police officers who will protect all our people from any kind of attack at the hands of lawbreakers," the advertisement pleaded for "respected colored people" and white customers to come to the aid of merchants who face disaster as a result of the boycott.

THE DAILY Times and Democrat, also jumped on the bandwagon in a front page editorial, "We Stand With Our Merchants."

The T and D admitted that "respected colored" citizens and white customers hold the key to "whether or not some business establishments survive."

Police launched the crackdown in wake of mounting demonstrations against segregation and rising resentment over the firing of Mrs. Rackley.

Colored school bus drivers, who haul the students to the public schools, were also riled by the firing.

They parked their buses Thursday and walked off the job.

Public school teachers, declaring that "it can happen to any of us" met late Thursday and are expected to stage a protest of their own today (Friday).

In the wake of these developments, tension in Orangeburg is rapidly reaching the breaking point.
