Home bartending made easy!
15 professional tips from I.W. Harper

The Prized Kentucky Bourbon

1. Stir when it says stir, and shake when it says shake. Shaking's a clear drink, like a Martini, makes it cloud up.
2. When shaking or stirring, be thorough. Shake means shake!
3. For stirring, use ice cubes; for shaking, cracked ice. But ice only; not ice and water.
4. Pour liquor over ice, rather than dropping ice into liquor... the liquor will chill better.
5. If you're caught short without pre-chilled glasses in the refrigerator, fill your glasses with crushed ice while you're mixing the drinks. Then dump the ice and pour.
6. Remember that one ice cube makes 2 to 2½ ounces of water.
7. Use only fresh fruit, and make sure it's thoroughly squeezed.
8. When you're cutting peel for a drink, remove the white under part; it's bitter and useless.
9. Want to make a Daiquiri froth with professional flair? Add a drop of milk to your mix before shaking.
10. Soak lemons in cold water for fifteen minutes to get more juice from them. Then roll them on a hard surface.
11. Rub the edges of the bottle with waxed paper before pouring to prevent dripping. An occasional rub will do.
12. Rinse ice cubes with a few glasses of cold water to get rid of the snowy look.
13. Don't stir carbonated beverages vigorously.
14. Keep simple syrup—sugar and water, premixed—on hand for the most efficient way of sweetening drinks. It will dissolve; plain sugar will often present problems.
15. Use clean glasses—with clean ice—for seconds. Just a drop or two of a stale drink can ruin a fresh one.

Another good tip... mellow your next drink with

...it's always a pleasure!

Fashions, models sparkle in show at Glenwood Club

By ELOISE RICHARDSON

Any rumors that fashion has let romance fade away quelled here and now.

Guarding against romance - fadeout in anyone's clothes life is the look coming up . . the wonderful look, - its shapes, its colors to feel. The clothes are so flattering, and so wearable, wildly pretty, unblusingly creations for everyone.

This year's styles not only have individuality, but give a woman individuality fashion wise because she can wear what she likes and the clothes are the kind she will like.

Part of the spice of the modern woman, a special never - before kind of femininity, is her subtety, non-consistency in her clothes life and her insistence to look "different."

• • •

THE FASHIONS this year are a real conglomeration of loose cardigans, breezy plaids, dashing checks, new ideas in suits, jackets in a variety of styles, raglan sleeves, furlined jackets and coats, the new look in ensemble combinations, spacious swagger coats, velour hats, suede dresses and coats trimmed in mink, mohairs.

The colors run to clarity, lacquer reds, blues, pinks, the plaids and checks in bright shades with some mistiness around to heighten them, twills, tweeds and double knits in earth shades.

All of these ideas were enhanced before a crowd of more than 200 clothes - conscious women on Sunday at the Glenwood Country Club her mannequins paraded in delightful splendor.

These dazzling models were Mable Burton, Carolyn Dotson, Leatrice Hubbard, Ann Phillips, Patricia Press, Ella Talley, Tenyo Wiggins and Audrey Simmons. The guest models were Joann Dixon from the Patricia Stevens School of Modeling and Clegg Blackwell, wearing men's attire to show what the best - dressed men are wearing.

THE GROUP took off by the way of TWA for a holiday in Switzerland, arriving at Zurich in an array of lovely traveling outfits. There were ensembles in tweed, corduroy, plaid, jersey and double knits. The colors were greens, reds, grays and black.

Styles included the empire line jumper, the turtle -neck dickey dress, the shift, and the long-waist belted designed sheath. Felt, angora, velour, velvet and beaver tam, the cap, the cloche and the derby.

When the girls went running at St. Moritz, Switzerland, pants ensembles were featured. The pants were in stripes in a variety of colors, reds, greens, blues and black.

There also were crew neck sweaters and cardigans, - some in mohair, floral wool and nylon, designed in such combinations of colors as green and pink, white and blue. A chicken wire tweed coat with a stole was also featured.

In the scene in the salon of Madame two white and one apricot - colored French poodles almost stole the show when a model featured the white chinchilla double - breasted coat which had a mutation leopard collar and side pockets.

• • •

ALSO SHOWN was a red empire belted coat worn with a mink boa, and then came the brave and free sportives. A mohair topped dress combined with a black knit skirt and sleeves was attractive along with a two - piece red dress in a sweater material trim.

There was also the plaid shift with knit sleeves, a three-piece pleated skirt with a Scottish blocked jacket and silk blouse, a knit shift with striped sleeves and a turtle - neck, the sweater - ribbed buttoned front dress with a flat knit compete sweater, a layered - look sportive in a wool trim and and a plaid knit dress.

Colors included reds, grays, blues, maroon and burnt orange. Then came the versatile and practical ensembles. Among these were diagonal woven knit three - piece ensemble with a mink collar.

Also a green knit jacket dress with a black jersey top which is detachable. Also a brown and black plaid jacket dress with a knit top, a black double knit jacket dress with a jacket trimmed in red - dyed fox and a green wool jacket dress with a satin trim.

Hats for the outfits were designed mostly in felt and there were small and large styles such as the jet style and the roller brim in bright greens, reds, beiges and the more somber hues of gray and black.

Specially - shown knits included a gray and pink three - piece suit, a gray dress with a plaid knit coat, a gold dress with a gold stripe in three pieces, a black two - piece dress with a gray pembroidered cape and a red lace design knit.

THEN CAME the after - five highlights which included a white brocade dress with a srort jacket, a black crepe with a wide stitched a belt and cuffs, a black crepe with a beaded trim, a red jersey which featured a smart back interest with a beaded bodice.

Following these were a beige silk chiffon with a flower sequined bodice, a black velvet sheath with long sleeves and jet beading, a white brocade theater ensemble with the coat trimmed in mink, a full length black and gold brocade gown, a three - piece metallic cloth suit, a white crepe full length gown with gold trim, a black chiffon full length gown with a panel back and a white crepe with an empire sequined top.

Strategy was truly shown in the suit and coat parade. This group featured a tweed suit with a mohair loop, a hwh g trmla lhds w- white high draw string waisted coat, a moss-cyptic mohair with a mink collar, a gray worsted with a cerulean mink collar, black ottoman with a mink collar and brown velour in the short sleeve style with an ascot tie.

On the return trip home the girls were smart in diagonal weaves, stained glass designs, suede and mink, camel melton cloth, ribbed knits, swagger coats and ensembles in reds, grays, beige and black. Again the velour and felt led in the hats designs which were the poke topper, derby and helmet style.

The hats were designed by Nell Sheridan and all the clothes lore was the handiwork in selection of Pauline Brooks. For a number of years now Pauline has given the clothes - conscious woman that individualistic look in clothes and fashions and there is always good quality in each garment.

THE POPULAR commentator, Mrs. Odell Rea rounded out the show with her clever quips and Billy Fox of WSID Radio Broadcasting Station was the master of ceremonies.

The occasion was combined with a luncheon and those who sat at the head table as special guests were: Mrs. Grace Hunt, executive director of the Madison Avenue YWCA; Mrs. Elizabeth Shuey, of the Patricia Stevens Modeling School; Mrs. Gwendolyn Lee, president of the Maryland league of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Lena Lee, a member of the Governor's Advisory Council on Higher Education; Mrs. Sadye T. Jenkins of the Frontiers International-Samuel Daniels, grand master of Maryland Masons, and Mr. Hankins attend Baltimore public schools and served in the Navy. He is a local musician.

Art exhibit set for Glen Echo

WASHINGTON

Plans are under way by Humanistics Public Relations and Allied Arts to present an interracial art exhibit in the Glen Echo Town Hall soon. The project in its present stage calls for a week's showing sometime in November.

Tentative exhibitors will include four painters — two colored and two white — and a sculptor.

Efforts will be made to distribute the exposed works of art among different schools and trends. The artists will be talented but not widely known in the capital area or the United States at large.

Morris Allen has succeeded, in vastly expanding the Humanistics area of clients and operations. Activities extend as far as Tokyo, Japan, and include several aspects of public relations activities.

Besides displaying good art in the hope of attracting a large public and selling the exhibitors' works, the affair is intended to advance racial harmony and equality through a "soft-sell" approach by demonstrating the value and enjoyment derived from colored as well as white artists' creations.

27 Florida teachers sue testing service

TAMPA, Fla. — (ANP) — A suit has been filed in federal court against the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N. J. led by a group of 27 colored teachers in Hillsborough county. Eight have lost their jobs, the others say they can't get tenure or raises.

State law requires that a teacher seeking certification in Florida must make a score of 500 or better on the test. The teachers claim the service has refused to give them their scores.
