Miss Tyler, AFRO's women's editor, bride of Mr. Brooks

By IRENE BECKWITH and ALICE DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON

One of the highlights of the fall social season was the marriage, here, on last Sunday, of Miss Rosemarie Tyler to Joseph N. Brooks. Miss Tyler, woman's editor of the Washington AFRO-AMERICAN Newspaper, is the daughter of Mrs. Alice Moore Tyler.

The fashionable wedding took place at 3 p.m., at historic Nineteenth Street Baptist Church before 400 guests, with the Rev. Jerry Moore its rounded neckline accentuated by tiny seed pearl loops. The skirt, with its trim lines, swept gently to the floor to reveal matching pumps. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls.

HER HEADPIECE OF EAST Indian motif, draped with a finger-tip veil of white tulle, was designed with a tear-drop pearl adorning her forehead in a display of regal elegance and Art-Deco creation. She carried a large bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

The fall theme was carried out in every detail of the wedding. Miss Eugenia Bell, maid of honor, wore a plum shade velvet gown, empire trend with a high cummerbund and bustle of plum colored satin. She carried a bouquet of fall colored mums trimmed in dyed pumpkin.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Clara Ledan of Haiti. Her gown was of moss green maltese cloth, empire style and her bouquet was of yellow mums. Both attendants wore matching headpieces and accessories.

THE BRIDE'S MOTHER wore a green satin ensemble with matching shoes and contrasting hat and gloves of beige. She wore an orchid.

The bride's aunt wore a Japanese silk sheath of gold on green, with matching gold and green hat, shoes, and gloves. Her corsage was an orchid.

Serving as best man was Mr. Ray Coleman. Ushers were Emanuel Lipscomb, Dave Hutchinson, Henry Morgan, William Fowler, and Wiley Whisonant.

AKA Sorority House was the scene of the beautiful reception which followed the wedding rites. Decorated with palms, flowers and ribbons, two banquet tables laden with dainties, as a string orchestra played softly.

After cutting their wedding cake, the couple left for a honeymoon in New York. The bride is a graduate of Howard University's School of Social Work. The groom is a statistician with the Federal Government. They will make their home in the Washington area.

AMONG GUESTS from Diplomatic row attending the wedding and reception were Ambassador and Mrs. Edward Peal of Liberia; Mrs. Julius Udochia, wife of the Ambassador of Nigeria; Mrs. Mable Atuona of Nigeria who serves with the Voice of America; W. M. Q. Halm, Governor of the National Bank of Ghana, and former ambassador to this country from Ghana; and Mrs. Keller-Caulker, wife of the former Ambassador from Sierre Leone who is now serving as permanent representative to the United Nations.

Among high ranking government officials were George Reedy, Administrative Assistant to Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, and Mrs. Reedy; Dr. Edward Brice of the Office of Education HEW, and Mrs. Brice; Howard Jenkins, a member of the Labor Relations Board; Judge and Mrs. Andrew Howard; Mrs. Joseph Waddy, wife of Judge Waddy; Mrs. Frank D. Reeves, wife of the Democratic National Committeeman from the District of Columbia; Dr. Grace Hewell of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and Colonel West Hamilton, member of the D.C. Board of Education.

bon bows in the same colors of the church decorations, the sorority house was a festive arena for the many guests who came to felicitate the couple.

THOUSANDS OF YEARS

Self-government in Ethiopia refutes slur

WASHINGTON (NNPA).—Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia thinks Louisiana Sen. Allen J. Ellender "obviously is not aware that Ethiopia has administered herself for thousands of years" and has done that quite well.

The "Lion of Judah" gave this opinion during a press conference held Thursday in the auditorium of the State Department, as he wound up a three-day visit here as the guest of President Kennedy.

But before sizing up the race baiting legislator, the Emperor told the reporter who asked him why Ethiopia refused to permit Ellender to enter his country last fall:

"I think perhaps you know more about the answer to that question than I do."

AFTER A moment's reflection, the Emperor suggested that the report could make up his own mind about the situation.

Speaking in Amharic through an interpreter, Selassie successfully fielded several touchy questions.

Asked about Ethiopia's dispute with neighboring Somalia, which involves a million tribesmen and a section of Ethiopia known as the Ogaden, the Emperor said he was confident that all difficulties would be settled.

However, he indicated dissatisfaction with President Kennedy's explanation of the States's favoring Somalia by giving her military aid.

THE POSITION of the United States is that the assistance is intended to veer the Somalians away from the Soviet bloc in their search for arms.

This explanation left the Emperor cold. "It did not impress us very much," he said. He added that the Somali Prime Minister, Abdirashid Ali Shermarke was leading a military mission to Peking.

Asked if tribalism still continued to block progress toward unity in East Africa, Selassie said that tribalism, "if it exists", would not serve as a serious impediment.

IN RESPONSE to other questions, he said;

While Ethiopia is a constitutional monarchy, she is progressing toward democracy for all her people.

Ethiopia has contributed its share to United Nations operations in the Congo. It was not always wise for an army to remain in another's homeland, but any withdrawal should be "compatible" with UN objectives.

Women in Ethiopia are participating more fully in the government and other walks of life. They have the privilege of standing for election in parliament.

U.S. will destroy prejudice, Stevenson reports to U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.—The eradication of racial discrimination "has often been slow going — for it is the unhappy fact that ignorance is stubborn and prejudice dies hard," Adlai E. Stevenson told the United Nations today.

Stevenson spoke at the General Assembly's Social Committee on which all 111 members of the United Nations are represented.

A major purpose of the talk by the chief United States representative to the world organization was to put into perspective for other nations the report made public last week by the United States Commission on Civil Rights.

He asserted that the United States was mobilizing "to destroy racial discrimination in this society forever."

He said that the colored American was the "underprivileged one-tenth of the population, denied equal access to housing, to voting, to education and employment."

"WE KNOW that we will not win the battle of human rights overnight," Stevenson said, "but we are determined that it will happen here and that it will continue to happen peacefully."

STEVENSON CONTENDED one of the purposes of the civil rights agency was to shed light on these problem areas and to make recommendations.

By legislation, by court action and by education and by example, he said, the Government is making an effort to destroy racial bias in the nation.

"The mature reaction of world opinion to recent events in the American South shows that peoples around the world recognize the difference between a country which is having racial trouble because it is making progress," Stevenson said.

REGARDING PROGRESS in racial matters, he cited figures showing the decline of lynchings in the country.

He said 300 colored Americans were lynched in the United States in the 20 years before the Second World War, but that in the last 10 years there were only four lynchings.

Stevenson argued that in the next election, "more colored persons will vote in Southern states than in any election of this century."

TWENTY-THREE states, he explained, with a total population of 117 million now outlaw discrimination in both private and public employment.

He observed that the armed forces have desegregated and gains are being made in education and housing.

Stevenson declared "the recent murder of four innocent colored children in a church has shocked and sickened us all."

However, he classified this and other types of violence — disturbing as it is — as a result of social revolution.

UNITED NATIONS REPORT

Britain to give army, air force to white foes of African freedom

By CHARLES P. HOWARD
UN Correspondent

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. —As the independence movement in Africa moves southward, it runs into a roadblock in Southern Rhodesia. The much hated Rhodesian Federation, long led by Sir Roy Welensky, comes to an end on December 31.

Britain's plan to turn over much of the Federation's army and air force to the Southern Rhodesian "minority white government" is now beyond speculation stage. Britain's veto of the Security Council resolution in this matter is additional evidence.

African statesmen consider the turning over of much of the Federation army and air force to the "white minority" Rhodesian government as perhaps the most serious blow possible to the liberation of all Southern Africa.

DISCUSSING THIS action before the United Nations this week, Foreign Minister Kojo Botsio of Ghana had this to say:

"The Government of Southern Rhodesia, as at present constituted, is a fraud; it is undemocratic and oppressive. If as is contemplated by the United Kingdom Government, the Federal section of the powerful federal Army and the powerful Air Force are put under the control of the minority white settler government with such a notorious record of racial oppression, then these forces will certainly be used to perpetuate the suppression of the three million Africans by the few white settlers in Southern Rhodesia.

Mr. Botsio said, quoting President Kwame Nkrumah of Ghana: "Any government that is formed in Southern Rhodesia without the consent of the majority of its people will be unacceptable. Not only would we refuse to acknowlege any such government; we shall also oppose its entry into the Commonwealth and into the United Nations.

"Our recognition will only go to a government which in our view is fully representative of the people of Zambia. That is, a government based upon universal adult suffrage, based on the principle of "one man, one vote."

WHAT IS NOT said in Mr. Botsio's speech but is in the minds of every African leader is the fear, that the minority white government in Southern Rhodesia will effect a military alliance with South African and thereby ready largest and best armed military force in all of Africa (South Africa's army), thus making the liberation of all Southern Africa much harder.

Lord Home, Britian's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said:

"Southern Rhodesia would not break away towards South Africa.

African diplomats do not hinder Southern Rhodesia borders on South Africa. It is known that South Africa opposes the further extension of African independence southward, and does not want an independent black Africa country bordering on its territory.

It is also known that South Africa gave financial and other support to the political party of Prime Minister Field, enabling him to win the Southern Rhodesian election that brought to power a white minority government.

It is doubtful if Field's party could have won this election without South Africa's support.

IT IS HARDLY to be expected that this financial and other support given to the South African government was not done without some understanding between these two governments and the military alliance is the most realistic conclusion to be drawn.

Further, Britain's handling of the Southern Rhodesian situation does not follow its pattern in granting independence to other West African countries.

A great financial structure operates the mining companies in Southern Congo, Angola, Northern Rhodesia, southern Rhodesia, Mozambique, South West Africa and South Africa. This financial structure is opposed to the granting of independence to further countries having African governments in control.

Pressure from this financial giant has caused the British government to favor a white minority government or a colonial power in all of these areas, rather than the majority rule, or "one man, one vote."

The Addis Ababa Conference went on record favoring the liberation of all Africa.

It is difficult to escape the conclusion that Britain and her Western allies oppose further extension of independence movements in Southern Africa and would favor a 'little war'; such as is going on in Vietnam, Laos, Malaysia, hoping to contain it.

Further positive action through the United Nations seems stymied, It is to be hoped that the rightful aspirations of the Africans to see all of their continent free would not lead us into World War III.

Nigeria is now republic with Azikiwe president

LAGOS — (ANP) — Nigeria, the most denisely populated large nation in Africa and the 12th most popular nation in the world, last week became a republic with Dr. Nnamdi Azikiwe as its first president.

The American - educated Dr. Azikiwe, who had served as Nigeria's first African Governor - General, was a leader in Nigeria's bid for independence from Great Britian in Nov., 1960.

DURING THE recent debate on the transformation of the country into a republic, Dr. Azikiwe received a glowing tribute in the Senate, Nigeria's Upper House.

In another development, it was announced that a general election will be held in the newly - created Mid West region of Nigeria early next year. This was disclosed in a written answer to a question by a member of parliament, Alhaji Isa Haruna.

ALHAJI ISA had asked the prime minister, Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa, if there would be a general election in the Mid - West Region after the expiration of the life of the present interim administration.

In reply, the parliamentary secretary to the prime minister, S. O. Lana, stated that Section 5 of the Constitution of the Federation, as well as Section 1 (a) of the Mid - Western Regional (Transitional Provisions) Act, 1963, provide for an interim administration of the new region for only six months.

The song will be officially sung for the first time when the nation becomes independent Dec. 12.

According to an official statement the anthem is a genuine song of Africa. Its words are:

"O God of all creation.
Bless this our land and nation.
Justice be our shield and defender;
May we dwell in unity,
Peace and liberty;
Plenty be found within our borders.
Let one and all arise.
With hearts both strong and time,

Service be our earnest endeavour;
And our Homeland of Kenya,

Firm may be stand to defend.
Let all with one accord

And the glory of Kenya

ROTC aide at FAMU itching for return to S. Viet Nam

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — While many Americans who have been stationed in Communist - threatened South Viet Nam might consider the turbulent, little Asian country "a good place to be from at least one recently returned soldier would like some day to go back there.

In fact, Capt. George R. Robinson, newly assigned assistant professor of military science at Florida A and M University, would welcome the opportunity to go back to South Viet Nam immediately.

He just returned to the United States last June after one year and one day's service as a U.S. Army adviser to the Army of the Republic of Viet Nam at the Phubai Training Center, in the vicinity of Hue, South Viet Nam.

CURRENTLY HE is enjoying the reunion with his family: his wife, the former Ruth P. Blassengale of Varnsville, S.C., and his daughter, Karen Georgette, who was born Dec. 21, 1955 in Germany, where Capt. Robinson was stationed from 1955 to 1957.

However, Capt. Robinson finds it much more comfortable, currently, to reminisce about his stay in South Viet Nam and anticipate revisiting the war-torn country "sometime in the future."

The Floridian liked Viet Nam despite the weather. "The climate is hot and humid along the coast, "he said, "and much of Viet Nam is coastal. However, even during the monsoon — rainy season — it is cool enough."

THE NEW FAMU ROTC instructor, who has been in the Army nine years, liked the people of South Viet Nam. He also liked the job he was doing — training and advising Viet Namese troops.

Most of all, perhaps, he enjoyed the opportunity to visit and travel in the exotic Asiatic country. Visiting Catholic churches, Buddhist temples and other points of social and cultural inferest, the Orlando, Florida- born Army captain said he was impressed by the sincerity, dedication and friendliness of the people of South Viet Nam.

Big, athletic Capt. Robinson, who played defensive halfback for South Carolina State College, from which he was graduated with a second lieutenant's commission, was intrigued by the tremendous stamina of the diminutive South Viet Namese people.

Capt. Robinson pointed out that one gets to know the people of Viet Nam best in the hinterlands. "Saigon, the capitol, with a population of over one million is an international city" he said "You do not learn the national character of the people there any more than you learn the national character of the Malaysians in Singapore."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Lenton Robinson of Orlando Capt. Robinson has carried out military duty assignments of Fort Hood Texas, Fort Benning, Ga., Aschburg and Worms in Germany, Viet Nam and now, Florida A and University in Tallahassee.
