Church queens, 13, wait Youth Bowl coronation

Fourteen churches will have queens on hand for the second annual Youth Bowl football game, Nov 9, at Morgan College's Hughes Stadium.

The girls, all 13 years of age and under, will represent as follow:

Tanya Reynolds, Greenspring Methodist; Grace Gaines, Mt. Olivet of Catonsville; Jacqueline Pinkett, John Wesley of Aquasco; Edith Wright, Sharp Street; Sharon Lawson, A. P. Shaw, Washington; Alice Scott, Christ Methodist; Diane Hackett, Community Methodist, Washington; Ruthie Mae Hubert, Ebenezer Methodist, Washington; Wenda C. Weems, St. Matthews, Washington, and Ethel Fowler, Hopkins Methodist, Highland, Md.

Union Memorial, St. James, Govans and Metropolitan also will have have queens, but they had not been chosen at press time.

More and better jobs to be Sharp St. topic

The struggle for more and better jobs will be given the attention of a panel of experts Sunday, Oct. 27 during a panel discussion at Sharp St. Memorial Methodist Church.

The program is scheduled for 5:30 p.m.

Speakers include the Rev. Frank Williams of Metropolitan Methodist Church, who has been active in the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance's selective patronage project;

Troy Bailey, president of the Baltimore chapter, American Labor Council, which is working toward elimination of discrimination in labor unions;

Isaiah Fletcher, secretary of vocational services, Baltimore Urban League;

Marvin Jones, personnel office at Westinghouse; and Melvin Roy, staff supervisor, minority services, Division of Maryland State Department of Employment Security.

THE CALVERTON Heights Junior High School Chorus under the direction of John Miller will supply the musical interlude during the program.

The second annual Sharp Street Village Fair, featuring an exhibit of art, handicraft and photography by members of the church, will be held in connection with the program. Refreshments will also be served.

Rev. Fauntroy to talk at Fellowship dinner

Members of Baltimore Fellowship, Inc. are busily engaged in completing plans for the silver anniversary dinner to be held at the Alcazar Ballroom at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 10.

The Rev. Walter E. Fauntroy of New Bethel Baptist Church, Washington, D. C. will be the speaker. His topic is "The Power of Non - Violence."

The Rev. Mr. Fauntroy, an eloquent, dynamic speaker, is noted as one of the March on Washington planning Committee. He has pioneered in the field of social action as well as religion.

He is the regional representative for the Southern Leadership Conference and is actively engaged in service as a board member for several social agencies in Washington.

The dinner will recognize 25 years of service which Baltimore Fellowship has performed in the field of race and human relationships.

Some of Baltimore Fellowship contributions have been through the interracial group and dinner meetings first held in private homes, then in Fellowships' own quarters for the purpose of breaking down barriers.

Information about the dinner can be obtained by calling Li 2 - 2995.

Mrs. Kathleen M. Carter is general chairman of the silver anniversary dinner.

Woman of the Year award will be made on Saturday

All votes are in, the judges have reached their decision and tomorrow (Saturday) the winner of the Woman Of the Year contest co-sponsored by the AFRO - AMERICAN and Greyhound Corporation will be announced at an awards luncheon to be held at the Sheraton - Belvedere Hotel, 1 p.m.

Selection of that Baltimorean judged to have made the greatest contribution to community activity and civic leadership during the past year was made on Wednesday by a panel of five judges.

Judging candidates suggested by AFRO readers were Mesdmes John Rich, executive secretary of Woman Power; Raymond Hunt, of the Baltimore Dental Auxiliary; Lena K. Lee, attorney and officer of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs of Baltimore; Mrs. Alfred Alfred A. Dixon, national officer of ISIS, and Mrs. Kelly L. Jackson, representative of Baltimore churchwomen.

To determine the winner the five judges pored over the numerous entries submitted by AFRO readers.

THE WINNER of the Woman Of The Year award and her two "Court of Honor" attendants who rank second and third in the final reckoning, will receive engraved Riverre silver bowl awards at the luncheon in the Sheraton's Red Room.

All finalists in the contest will attend but only the judges know which nominee will be the winner.

Joe Black, director of Special Markets for The Greyhound Corporation, will be the master of ceremonies for the luncheon. The former major league pitching star has served as coordinator of the Women of the Year Award.

Mr. Black said the contest was planned to "honor all the unsung leaders who form the backbone of any community, who work for civic betterment and help others with no thought of reward."

"The Woman of the Year contest," Mr. Black also noted, "gives all of us a chance to pause and reflect on the fine community work being done by so many of our women. Ideally all women active in civic affairs should be so honored. In choosing one to wear the crown 'Woman Of The Year,' we can dramatize her accomplishments and so bring honor to all women who keep a community moving ahead in elightenment."

The Rev. Marion C. Bascom, pastor Douglass Memorial church, will gaive the invocation.

Final rites set for Mrs. James Carter

Funeral services for Mrs. Hattie Carter, widow of James Carter, former assistant to Morgan College president, Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, will be held at 11 a.m. Friday (today) in the chapel of the Charles R. Law Mortuary, 802 Madison Ave.

The Rev. Howard L. Cornish, director, Morgan Christian Center, will officiate.

Mrs. Carter died Tuesday night at the Crownsville State Hospital. Death was to a heart attack, relatives reported.

A former teacher at Morgan and Barbara Scotia Colleges, Mrs. Carter was a graduate of Morgan and Columbia University.

SHE WAS A member of the AKA Sorority and active in civic and social organizations before falling into ill health eight years ago, relatives said.

Survivors include Dr. Theodore D. Phifer, brother; Dr. Juliette Burstman, professor at Willimantic Teachers College, Willimantic, Conn.; Mrs. Ruth Griggs, Cleveland, Ohio, sisters; and Clifford Phifer, nephew.

Burial will be in the Arbutus Memorial Park.

Concert will benefit bombed-out Ala. church

A concert to aid in the rebuilding of Birmingham's 16th St., Baptist Church will be held on Sunday, Oct. 27, at the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Lanvale St. and Carrollton Ave., at 3 p.m.

Featured will be the Town Choir, William H. Wright, director, and the Trinity AME Church Choir.

Among the other participants, will be Wallace Baden, Thelma Gamby, Marshall Waters, Elaine Taylor, Frank Bryant, Florette Palmer, Lillie Nelson, Lemmuel Henson, Mary Randall, and narrations by Mary West Jones and her associates Juliet King and Ida Witherspoon.

The concert will begin with official greetings from the host pastor, the Rev. Frank Williams, with invocation given by the Rev. A. J. Arter, and benediction by the Oct. 26

The Rev. Dunn of Mt. Airy accompanied with his group of guitarists, will give a benefit for the Anna Mae Hunter Foundation, 1321 Eutaw Pl., at 8 p.m.

Prayer of the Week

Each morning we awake and come to this table for a moment of prayer before going about out duties of the day.

Our presence here attests the strength Thou givest us. The enthusiasm we bring to our daily endeavors are further evidences of Thy love and care.

Help us always be aware of this daily renewal of our strength and everyday restoration of our spirit-to be grateful for it and to give Thee thanks.

Frank Jones

Funeral services were held for Frank I. Jones, 78, a resident of the Anna Mae Hunter Foundation, Thursday at St. Peter Claver Catholic Church.

Mr. Jones died Monday in the Maryland General Hospital. He had been ill following a paralytic stroke.

Burial was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

Mr. Jones had been president of the Blind Association of Baltimore for more than seven years. Also, he was a member of the Holy Name Society at St. Peter Claver's. The native Baltimorean had worked at the Maryland Workshop for the blind for more than 50 years.

His only survivor is his sister - in - law, Mrs. Sarah Jones.

would push this five - point program of the President:

1. Work with local human relations committees or help establish them.

2. Provide leadership training for all women in intergroup cooperation.

3. Provide support, where convenient and program permit, for all or part of the proposed legislative program on civil rights.

4. Open their organizations to women of all races.

5. Work to eliminate school dropouts by promoting a program designed to get all educable children back into school and to keep present enrollees in school.

Mrs. Fischer asked that representatives of each organization present let this new Women's Committee know by Dec. 1 what it can do "toward civil rights."

THE WOMEN'S Committee for Civil Rights is temporarily using the offices of of the Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations, 301 W. Preston St., Baltimore 1, as headquarters.

Parran Mitchell, executive secretary of that Interracial Commission, told the assembly there was an urgent need for state - wide public accommodations legislation, and legislation to remove barriers in employment and in housing.

Mrs. Esther Peterson, assistant secretary of Labor, U. S. Department of Labor, was another featured speaker.

"I think we must realize we are living in one of the great moments of history," she said.

"It's been building up for centuries, this moment, but we don't have a long time to end it.

"This is a time for all of us to look inwardly. Now is the time to plan in your own community for what will happen a year from now."

SHE ASKED that each representative present become a "one - woman lobyist" for the President's civil rights program.

"Unless we get it (civil rights) firmly implanted in the land," she said, "we will have trouble."

Dr. Irene Diggs, Morgan State College professor, was moderator of a panel during a question - suggestion period.

Panelists were:

Mrs. Angela Bambace, vice president, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL - CIO; Mrs. Henry Corner, member Interracial Commission; Thomas B. Finan and Robert Murphy, attorney general and deputy attorney general, respectively.

Also, Mrs. Howard Koss, president, Maryland League of Women Voters; Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitchell, legal advisor, Maryland State Conference of NAACP, and Mr. Mitchell, of the Interracial Commission.

Mrs. Bernice E. Thompson, secretary, and Mrs. Milton Markowitz, public relations director, are preparing a digest of the proceedings for those who attended the conference.

ing will hurt his rights proposals.

But—I have a nagging suspicion his angered outbursts came mostly because the pickets pinched his vanity.

The Mayor did create some time ago a respected and likeable image in the colored community.

His many, many friends and well-wishers would like very much now to see him start living up to it.

The Mayor's concern over grabbing his party's Vice Presidential nomination in San Francisco next July is quite understandable.

His lack of attention to the colored community is not.

—Last plea awaits

in Maryland since 1959, Gov. Tawes has reduced two death penalties to life imprisonment since taking office.

The Rev. David Andrews, chaplain to the Wesley Club at Morgan State College, has wired Gov. Tawes to impose the 18-month sentence.

Leonard Kardy, Montgomery County state's attorney who prosecuted the Johnson-Giles brothers cases, told the Governor:

"I am here only as an observer. But in the nine years I have been prosecuting, I have never asked for the death penalty and I never will.

"We have no objections to Your Excellency granting whatever clemency that he desires."

MR. WITT and the defense attorneys received a couple of other boosts in their clemency plea for the convicted men.

Mrs. Howard F. Ross, chairman of the Giles-Johnson Defense Committee, presented Gov. Tawes with signatures of 6,724 persons in the state who asked that the men's lives be spared.

Mrs. Harold L. Ickles, widow of the former Secretary of the Interior, Capital Area Civil Liberties Union, told the Governor her organization of 2,500 members also backed the clemency plea.

She asked further that legislation be enacted by the General Assembly to allow new evidence to be introduced in convicted cases up to a year after sentencing, rather than the three-day time limit now in effect.

The new evidence Mr. Witt and defense attorneys, Stedman Prescott Jr., Victor Crawford, Robert Heeney and Harold A. Knapp, was centered around the girl's moral reputation and her juvenile records with the Probation Department.

Mr. Witt charged the girl, by her own admission, was of loose morals and her juvenile record was not available prior to the trials.

MR. HEENEY brought up the race issue in the case with this statement to Gov. Tawes:

"This appeal for clemency is not an indictment of the courts of Montgomery and Anne Arundel Counties. On the basis of the available evidence, I can see how judges would have arrived at their decisions.

"But, if I could change the colore of the skin of one of these persons, this would not be a death case before you."

The girl in the case, who charged the three attacked her shortly after midnight on July 21, 1961, in a lovers' lane area near the Patuxent River in Montgomery County, is tried and convicted in Montgomery County, and Johnson in Anne Arundel County.

Gov. Tawes had stayed the scheduled execution of the Giles brothers, pending the clemency plea hearing Tuesday.

The hearing was held in the reception chamber outside the Governor's State House office.

Among the 50-odd spectators present were: Mrs. Juanita Jackson Mitcrell, Baltimore attorney; Parran J. Mitchell, executive secretary, state's Commision on Interracial Problems and Relations; C. Michael Burton Jr., executive secretary, Johnson - Giles Justice Committee, and the Rev. Thomas Brooks, pastor, Jerusalem Methodist Church, Rockville.

ALBANY, Ga. — A series of teacher education workshops is underway at Albany State College under the direction of Dr. Henry T. Hutchins and Dr. Joseph Durham. The workshops will end Oct. 31.
