Today's World.

On Thursday the Rt. Rev. Noble C. Powell, bishop of Maryland, discussed Theology of Family Life. The afternoon session was a series of short talks.

The day is under the leadership of the Educational Committee, with Mrs. Beaufort E. Willis, the chairman. Mrs. Alfred E. Culley is the president of the Episcopal Churchwomen of Maryland.

The Nos - Vid - uaes Club met at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Barnes, with Mrs. Mary Edges acting as hostess for its first meeting of the season. They discused the tea of late July, and vacation trips.

Attending the meeting were Mesdames Alice Morrell, president; Valeria Gladden, secretary; Jennie Murphy, treasurer; Mary Johnson, chaplain; Elizabeth Barnes, correspondence; Mary Edges, editor.

The Gold Leaf Club, met recently at the home of Mrs. Bessie Wood, 848 Edmondson Ave., for its fall meeting.

During the luncheon, each member gave briefs of her vacation, and a resume from the hostess, who visited New York, Wisconsin and Chicago.

Names will be drawn for their annual Christmas party at the next meeting which will be held at the home of Mrs. Helen Brackett.

Dining with the Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Tarter on Sunday, were Father and Mrs. Donal Wilson. Also there were Miss Betty and Donald Tartar, and grandson Andrew Chatmon.

After dinner, Mrs. Clarice Watts, Glen and Gwen Tartar, Russell and Peggy Tartar, were visitors. The family drew names for their exchange of gifts, for the family Christmas dinner.

MRS. LOUISE LAMB hosted members of the Pierians Club in her East 43rd St. home, Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. Hazel Fleming presided and the chief activities were reports from committees on the years program and hostesses. The group is of course, chiefly working on plans for the Nov. 3rd presentation of an exhibit of photography by Gordon Parks.

This will be jointly sponsored by the Art Department of Morgan State College and held in the Murphy Fine Arts Center at Morgan.

Officers of Pierians, in addition to Mrs. Fleming are Mesdames Charlotte Mebane vice president; Catherine Wilson, recording secretary; Ruth Weeling, corresponding secretary; Jewell Mosley, treasurer.; Annette Johnson, historian;

Other members include: Mesdames Mercedes Douglas, Hilda Higgins, Audrey Norris, Lula Patterson, Edyth Smith, Vivian Washington, Verda Welcome, Verniece Reynolds, Pearl C. Brackett, Gwendolyn Tarter and Lydia Mussenden.

ALL EYES were on Lilia Ann Abron last Thursday when Morgan College formally welcomed three visiting undergraduate scholars to its Institute for Political Education.

Miss Abron, tall and attractive, hails from Memphis, Tenn., which is her home and from LeMoyne College in that city. She will remain at Morgan this school year, continuing her major in biology and participating in the several programs of the college's political education project.

Since arriving at Morgan four weeks ago, Miss Abron has found herself so much at home that she has received permission from the national office of Delta Sigma Theta to complete her pledgeship and be initiated here.

• • •

WHILE MORGAN men crowd Miss Abron, the distaff side is making the two other visiting scholars "feel at home." These are:

William A. Blakby, junior at Knoxville College, Knoxville, Tenn., and whose home is in Louisville, Ky., is taking a major in history. He, too, will return to his home college after this school year.

James A. MacPherson, history, junior at Morris Brown College, Atlanta, is a native of Savannah, and travelled throughout the west during the summer, before reporting to Morgan in September. He was editor of the campus paper at Morris Brown.

• • •

"WE HAVE been treated like kings and queens," Blakey said as he responded to words of welcome from Miss Velva Taylor, English senior from Philadelphia, who presided at the affair held in the Student Union.

"We have found that we are not regarded as outsiders by either students or faculty and we shall do our best to live up to the high expectations of Morgan State and of our own colleges."

But, the visiting scholars did not have all the spotlight. The college also honored its Congressional interns who had served 13 weeks each in the Washington offices of Maryland lawmakers. They are:

Miss Marlene Jeffries, who was assigned to Senator J. Glenn Beall; Miss Charlotte P. Hall, assigned to Representative Clarence D. Long; Frank McDougald, Representative Carlton Sickles (all Baltimoreans), and Reginald Kearny, of Jersey City, Representative Charles Mathias, Jr.

President Jenkins congratulated both the interns and the visiting scholars, and told them of the political challenges of the future.

It was quite an affair. Telegrams and letters came in from Senator Beall and the other lawmakers. The Norwood Summers Florists sent a huge basket of flowers, and there were lots of refreshments.

"And that is the last eating and sipping under Institute auspices this year. "Dr. G. James Fleming, head of the Institute, warned. "From now on, it is work, work, work."

The General Committee of the Maryland League of Women's Clubs made its final final plans for its Nov. 10 Fashion Show to be held at Douglass High School. Fashions Revue (Coast to Coast) promises to be a fabulous one.

William Douglas Hicks of St. Albans, N.Y., was the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Fredrick Hicks of 1828 Westwood Ave.

William D. Hicks, accompanied by his brother and his wife and cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Osborne, of Baltimore and Mrs. Elfa Williams, of Towson, were dinner guests of his aunt and uncle. Dr. and Mrs. Enoch Dickerson of 1593 Druid Hill Ave.

Women leaders look good at work

By E. M. Oliver

Like a flurry of autumn leaves — the hats the 200 women wore to the historic meeting at the State House Tuesday.

They mean business, too, those members of the nation's first such group, the Maryland Women's Committee for Civil Rights, Governor Tawes called the group together following the President's White House Conference with the nation's women leaders July 20. Maryland's group leads the way.

• • •

What they wore: — Gwen Lee, Md. League of Women's Club president, stately as she is, had on that stunning turban Irma Dixon, our House of Delegates member, a little slimmer, was like a model in Harvest blue, drove her smart car like the wind;

Lena Lee, in green and gray;

Ruth Marshall in black velvet and pearls;

• • •

More elegant ladies: — Juanita Mitchell and her mom, Dr. Lillie Jackson, in two more lovely autumn hats buff and horizon blue and befeathered;

Virgie Waters, a blue velvet turban on that pretty gray hair was accompanied by beauticians and Postal Alliance ladies, Florence Knox, Baltimore and Lucille Warren, Chestertown;

Esther L. Edwards, Myrtle Lofton, Ethel Day, Grace Booker Hunt, Virginia L. Brown, striking in fall hues.

Gloria Barnes, daughter of the Courtlandt Browns always chic and the bride, Lillian Lawrence Jackson were in red velvet:

These and more were there but it was not primarily a fashion parade.

The women formed an army to get on a lot of horses and ride discrimination out of the country.

Contact any of these officers and board members to join them today:

Mesdames Albert R. Fischer, chairman; Bernice E. Thompson, secretary; Mildred Atkinson, treasurer; Mrs. Milton Lang, chairman of speaker's bureau Mrs. Milton Markowitz, chairman, public relations; Miss Esther Lazarus, chairman of workshops; Mesdames Gloria Barnes, Flossie Dedmond, Mrs. Herbert Fedder, Newton Long, Grace Hunt, Henry Carter and James Foster.
