searches because "this is a policy, I don't make all policies."

Most of the warrantless searches are made in the homes of women on the Aid to Dependent Children program.

A number of them have been found ineligible for assistance because unauthorized men were discovered in their homes.

IN SEEKING to force the inspectors to use warrants, Mr. Howard said he was not, in this case, specifically seeking to end the visits to homes of welfare clients.

"What we don't want," he said, "is for the Department of Welfare to violate the constitutional rights of these people on the invalid grounds that this is necessary to prevent their cheating the department."

Using information cited by Professor Reich, Mr. Howard said that Secretary Celebrezze has power to issue regulations under Section 1102 of the Social Security Act.

For the ADC program, Mr. Howard said Secretary Celebrezze has specific power because a state "must provide such methods of administration . . . as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan." The word 'proper' is emphasized.

MR. HOWARD's statement to the board said also that on two occasions the Secretary has used his powers to set aside plans of states.

He noted that in the case Michigan House Bill 145 (a suitable homes requirement) "the general counsel said that the secretary could unquestionably disapprove a program which appeared unconstitutional."

On Monday of this week the AFRO had complained from persons not on welfare who were upset about past-midnight visits to their homes by investigators looking for someone else.

film on Nov. 25, the audience will also meet in person Ossie Davis, the distinguished actor who plays the leading role of Purlie Victorious and who wrote the highly successful play on which the film is based.

Along with Mr. Davis will be his talented and beautiful wife, Miss Ruby Dee, who has the leading female role in "Gone Are The Days".

They will be joined by Godfrey Cambridge, who plays "Getlow" in the film, Alan Alda who portrays "Mr. Charlie" and other members of the excellent cast.

THE EVENING of entertainment will not only be a memorable one for the audience, but it will also provide much needed help for the AFRO's Mrs. Santa Fund.

This is the Fund that every year provides food, clothing and toys for hundreds of Baltimore families, who have no place else to turn for help.

Evers penny, over necessary expenses, will go directly to the Fund.

It is because of the worthiness of the project that the cast members have agreed to make in-person appearances on Monday, Nov. 25.

The film has already earned praise from the New York critics, who are rated as the most hard-boiled in the country.

On Thursday, at a special local screening, it was easy to see why they raved.

Not only does the cast reach dramatic heights in the satirical treatment of a vital subject, but the photography and the musical vital subject, but the photography and the musical background are also first rate.

Here is a picture to be seen and enjoyed.

Remember—get your seats early.

—Jurors split

ing events leading up to the slaying, said he "intended to kill my wife the night before but God stopped me."

This was in reference to an incident Dec. 17 in which Mrs. Chandler charged her husband beat and choked her then dragged her from their apartment in the Somerset Housing Project and through the streets of East Baltimore.

Chandler said he was sitting on his steps when police arrived that night and "they sent me on my way after my wife told them she didn't want me locked up," the former Drake University student testified.

"But I knew as soon as my mother - in - law heard bout it they would call the police again. I knew I would go to jail for a long time so I decided I was going for something."

CHANDLER SAID he bought the knife and ice pick at the drug store after deciding to kill "all the women in the family" and then telephoned his wife at his mother's home.

He said he warned his wife that "if you have taken out a warrant for me I'm going to kill you."

Shortly aterwards, the defendant confessed, he went to the Harlem Ave. house and kicked in the door.

"My mother - in - law was in the kitchen. She looked at me but didn't say anything. She went down to the basement and I followed her.

"I stabbed her with the ice pick and knife," the son-in-law confessed and "then I looked all over the house for my wife."

Mrs. Chandler testified she was hiding in the closet of her parents bedroom. "He looked in the closet but didn't see me because the clothes were covering me," the wife told the jury.

UNABLE TO FIND his wife, Chandler said he took his son and left the house.

"I started to trade my son for my wife, but I decided to send him on his way because he had nothing to do with it," Chandler said adding that he saw police in the area but didn't attempt to escape.

In his summation to the jury Mr. White declared:

"Acy Chandler was a decent hard - working man. He had great and constant love for his wife and children. He was warm - hearted, just and fair.

"But he rather hated the merciless hounding and on the night of his black despair he was a maniac."

Pressing for a first degree murder verdict, Mr. O'Farrell countered:

"He was a good man —he only beat his wife and children and killed his mother-in - law."

give "me the right to be secure and the right to self expression."

The minister said he will never demonstrate again, "but there is a condition . . .

"I want the priviledges in being a human being."

Other proponents included: Fr. Henry Bishoff, International Students Association of Maryland; Clarence Logan, Civic Interest Group; Also James Millen, Public Affairs Committee, First Unitarian Church; Miss Lane Burke, representative of the Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations; and Mrs. Albert Fisher, Maryland Women League for Civil Rights and United Church Women.

David L. Glenn, executive director, Equal Opportunity Commission, and Stanley Z. Mazer, Mayor McKeldin's human relations assistant, defined the public accommodation section of the bill and assured councilmen that legitimate religious agencies and facilities are exempted as are genuine private clubs.

THE LENGTHY moved along quietly and with minimum of interruptions while supporters address the committee.

Heated exchanges with councilmen, and at times comical reasoning, loud and rambling discourses marked the opponents' presentation.

Williams D. Schafer, Judiciary Committee, chairman has scheduled a public on the housing section of the measure for 7:30 p.m. Nov. 19.

Savings of approximately 230 man-hours per year plus reduction of human error will result from this suggestion.

DES has 100 jobs for college grads

"Over 100 career opportunities are currently listed with the College Recruitment Unit of the Maryland State Employment Service for recent college graduates," Frederick S. Trapp, Baltimore local office manager announced today.

Mr. Trapp went on to say that there is an increasing demand for college graduates in the Baltimore area to fill jobs in private industry, state and federal government.

Present openings are for general accountants; chemical, civil electrical and mechanical engineers; underwriter trainees; chemists and administrative trainees.

Starting salaries vary depending upon the type of business but usually the minimum starting wage offered to a college graduate is approximately $5,000 per year.

Mr. Trapp urged college graduates seeking employment to apply to the College Recruitment Unit of the Maryland State Department of Employment Security.

Youth, 16, charged in assault case

Arthur L. McCaden, 35, of the 2000 block Druid Hill Ave. is in critical condition after being stabbed in his chest Tuesday evening at Laurens and McCulloh Sts.

A 16-year-old youth, George Allen, 1900 blk. Liden Ave. has been charged with the assault. He is being held under bail of $2,500.

Mr. McCaden told police that he and a friend, Norman Clark, 34, of the 2100 block Callow Ave., were talking when they were approached by two youths who started an argument with Mr. Clark.

During the argument, he said, Mr. Clark was struck several times and knocked to the ground. Mr. McCaden stated when he went to assist Mr. Clark to his feet, one of the boys stabbed him with a butcher knife.

Mr. McCaden said he then went to a nearby store where he saw Patrolman Fred Williams, who chased the youths but was unable to catch them.

The arrest was made later.

Maryland 20 years behind on mental retarded—Warren

New discoveries on the causes and possible rehabilitation of some mentally retarded persons have accelerated interest in the condition which afflicts some three per cent of the population, reported Dr. Stafford L. Warren, Thursday.

Dr. Warren, special assistant to the President for mental retardation, made the statement during a "Recognition Day" luncheon given by the Council of Auxiliaries of the Maryland State Department of Mental Hygience.

Although Maryland is one of the most advanced states in the area of mental retardation, Dr. Warren said that it is still far behind in relationship to the need for a more financially sophisticated program.

The nation as a whole, said Dr. Warren, is 20 years behind in the development of physical plants and educational system for the mentally retarded, he said, is a concerned public which will support legislation necessary to provide adequate professional staff, research funds and physical plants to effectively reduce the dependency of marginally handicapped people and to help them become self-sufficient, tax-paying citizens.
