Cotillion hailed for beauty, nets $5,000 for Provident fund

In what has been hailed as the most beautifully staged cotillion to be held on the Eastern Seaboard, the Baltimore chapter of Girl Friends launched 30 young women, here, Monday.

The club had selected the Baltimore Civic Center for the presentation, and had transformed it into an artistic setting with drapes, flowers and special lighing effects.

• • •

PERIMETER DRAPING of two shades of blue walled out the unused balcony seats on both sides of the auditorium. Wreaths and bee lights punctuated the draping. Red and white fringe lowered the ceiling, and indirect lighting and overhead pinks warmed and softened the whole decor.

Representatives of the sponsoring clubs welcomed the guests as they entered and ushers escorted guests to tables. Presiding at the tables were post debutantes.

• • •

A GOLD back drape flanked by red velvet curtains was enhanced by bankings of palms for the stage from which debutantes were presented. Steps covered with grass matting and outlined with palms extended from the stage. Running from the risers to mid-way the auditorium was a red carpet.

Escorts formed a phalanx on each side of the risers, and the sub-debs, delihtful in frocks affected a triangular fromation below the escorts. come on stage from the wings as presented, made her bow and was escorted to the foot of the risers. From that point she walked alone, spotted by pink lights, to the end of the auditorium.

As the Debutante was presented, her sub-Deb left unobtrusively by a side entrance, met the Deb at the foot of the auditorium and took a preplanned position. After the presentation of all debutanted the whole group was presented under focused spotlights. Following this, the sub-debs, carrying the white nosegays of the debs, spanned the auditorium in a formation and precision routine reminscent of that of the famed Rockette

As the spots played on the huge centered crystal ball creating a snowflake effect throughout the auditorium, the fathers danced with their debutante daughters.

• • •

THIS WAS climaxed only by the waltz of the Debutantes with their escorts. Concluding event was the promenade which included a formation of the Debutante, her parents, her escort and her sub-deb.

Later guests joined in dancing and were refreshed from punch fountains at each end of the auditorium.

The entire presentation was against a background of music by Bobby Felder, featuring the organ.

• • •

MRS. PAUL CHESTER, chairman of the cotillion, presented a check to Provident Hospital Building Fund, which brought the Girl Friends' gift to $5000, com to that campaign.

DES urges higher unemployment pay

The Department of Employment Security had cheering news this week for people who find themselves out of work.

It is proposing that the maximum unemployment benefit be raised from $33 to $46 for the 26-week period jobless workers would normally be eligible to receive benefits.

Along with these jobless pay hikes, the Department has also suggested that employers, taxes which go to the states unemployment fund can be reduced more than $4 million.

Increased jobless pay benefits and decreased employers taxes, Stephen G. Cromwell, director of DES explained, were possible because of the high reserve monies in the unemployment fund.

UNDER THE plan announced Tuesday by Mr. Cromwell, unemployment compensation payments would be increased by $6,500,000 and employer taxes lowered by $4,400,000.

The program has the support of Governor Tawes and DES officials feel confident that the measure will be approved when the General Assembly convenes in February.

The plan was recommended by an advisory council to DES comprised of citizens representing labor, business and the general public. Their action was unanimous.

If approved by the General Assembly, the increases would become effective July 1.

In sitting the new $46 limit, Mr. Cromwell explained, no allowances for additions for a worker's dependents raising the maximum compensation above $46 weekly would be allowed.

Under the lesser jobless pay scale, minimal doles were assigned for children of workers drawing unemployment compensation.

Another feature of the new program would be a "sliding scale" of employer taxes. If jobless payments had to be increased because of rising unemployment employer taxes would then rise accordingly to unemployment fund needs.

Mr. Cromwell said the new proposals were possible because of lowering unemployment rates in Maryland and the ample reserves of money for compensation made possible by higher employer taxes paid since 1961.

Surrounding areas study McKeldin tax proposals

Officials of the five surrounding counties, comprising Baltimore's metropolitan area, still had under study, at AFRO press time, Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin's proposal that they unite with the city on common problems.

Representatives of Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Carroll, Harford and Howard Counties met by invitation with Mayor McKildin in his office Tuesday.

The mayor called the meeting primarily to discuss the possibility of a broad-based tax levy.

He wants the five counties to join with the city and seek authority from the state to levy such a tax, whether all areas would take such action immediately.

Specifically, Mayor McKeldin favors the Miles Commission recommendation of a one percent sales and one percent income tax be added in Baltimore and the five counties.

THE ADDED sales tax would be credited to the jurisdiction where the sales occurred, and the income tax credited to the jurisdiction where it was earned.

At the closed meeting Tuesday, it was understood that local problems of the city and counties otherwise, would be handled on a local basis.

Also, that those handled on a regional basis would not affect the political sub-division's identity or authority.

Officials of the five counties now have under study a lengthy statement on Mayor McKeldin's proposals.

Representatives of Howard and Carroll Counties first announced they would boycott the meeting, but later came.

Councilman Henry G. Parks Jr. (4th D.) has been strongly urging a broad-based tax as a source of revenue for the city for some time.

MR. AND MRS. SIMON C. PARKER had a dinner party set for the same (New Year) day, but it was Pocahontas Mrs. P? who got cold feet and called the affair off. Though her town guests might fare alright, her out-of-town guests may get floundered, she feared.

So they set their party up to Sunday, which dawned a beauty. . and it was wonderful to relax with no fear and to enjoy the Parker's bountiful board at leisure.

The Harvey Kings came down from Delaware. She (Ann) is a Wilmington social worker, he a commercial artist, there. Also about were Mrs. Lydia Francis, Mrs. Florence Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Thurman O'Daniel, Dr. and Mrs. Albert Laforest, Lula Patterson and Cliff Mackay

ONCE AGAIN the Baltimore chapter of Epicureans met to welcome in the New Year.

The place was the beautifully and appropriately decorated Elegante Room. Added to the room decorations were the beautiful variety of fashions worn by members and guests. Epps Merita Stokes wore a beautiful dress with a brown velveteen top and beige satin bottom.

Eppie Gladys Daniels did more than justice to the rhinestone trimmed black crepe dress she wore. Also, there was Eppie Sadie Jenkins in a gorgeous black and gold brocade with matching gloves. The guests, too, were beautifully attired and relaxed in the setting of this elegant annual affair.

Eppies and Eppos present were Barbara and Orlando Bennett, Doris and Lester Wallace, Sadie and Armstead Jenkins, Gwendolyn and William Parker, Shirley and Carter Wood, Bernardine and Miles Harrison, Phyllis and Robert Diggs, Merita and John Stokes, Gladys and Samuel Daniels, Vonzella and Arthur Murray, Elsie and David Scott, Elva and Randolph Edwards, Claire Parker and Nikki Randolph.

Guest included Mr. and Mrs. Osarew Gee, Mr. and Mrs. William Simmons, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cole, Mr. and Mrs. George White, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Thompson, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Peck;

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Blackwell, Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Christman, Dr. and Mrs. Harold R. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. William Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Pinderhughes, Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Crosby, Mr. and Mrs. Marsden Rawlings, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Williams;

Silver Spring youth wins Maryland chess title

After breaking a four-way tie for first place, 16-year-old Lawrence Kaufman, of Silver Spring, won the 1963 Maryland Junior Chess Championship at the Howard Park Recreation Center.

The championship tournament was a five-round Swiss match sponsored jointly by the Maryland Chess Association and The Baltimore City Department of Recreation and Parks.

There were 71 entrants, ranging in age from 10 to 20. Robert Erkes, two-time winner of the championship, was the director this year.

Kaufman, by winning the tournament, also captured the Maryland Interscholastic Chess Association's high school championship for 1963. Thomas Oleszczuk, of Hamilton, took second place. The fifteen-year old also won the trophy given for top player under 17, for which was ineligible.
