Oysters, mushrooms are tasty stuffings

To stuff or not to stuff, that is the question when preparing your turkey for the Big Feast.

While stuffing and turkeys are natural go-togethers, you do have the choice of baking loaf pan or casserole dish or the stuffing separately in a filling up the turkey cavity with the delectable mixture.

Baking the stuffing separately shortens the roasting time for the bird, so if time is of the essence that's the solution.

But if you prefer that key juices impart to the stuffing while roasting, then your choice is made—stuff by all means.

• • •

ONE THING'S important—stuff your turkey just before roasting—never ahead of special quality that the turtime with the intention of freezing or refrigerating the bird until roasting time.

You can, however, get the stuffing ingredients ready beforehand, with the dry and liquid ingredients kept separate until cooking time.

Here's another thing: make sure to remove the stuffing from the turkey directly after the meal and store it separately in the refrigerator.

NOW, HERE'S for the stuffing. Allow 3/4 to 1 cup of stuffing per pound of ready-to-cook turkey.

To stuff ...Fill the chest cavity and fasten the neck skin to the back with metal or wooden skewers or pins.

...For stuffing ease, stand the bird on its neck end in a large, deep bowl, then fill the inside of the bird with the stuffing, but don't pack it in.

...Fasten the opening with metal or wooden skewers or pins and lace shut with string To close horizontally use large safety pins.

• • •

WHEN PREPARING the stuffing, you'll find that a 1-pound loaf of white bread makes about 2 quarts of large (half-inch) crumbs.

Pull the bread apart or cut it in cubes; pile it lightly in the cup to measure it.

Cornbread may be substituted for part or all of the white bread.

You'll need 1 to 2 quarts of breadcrumbs for a 4 to 8-pound fryer-roaster.

Roasters 6 to 12 pounds need 2 to 3 quarts; 12 to 16 pounds need 3 to 4 quarts; 16 to 20 pounds need 4 to 5 quarts; and 20 to 24 pounds need 5 to 6 quarts.

LBJ hopes every family can enjoy Thanksgiving
