run in for the extra two points, but failed.

* * *

ALTHOUGH Poly's halfbacks Ronald Tyree and Randy Ruger and fullback Gary Ross managed to run the ball to City's 37-yard line following Belloff's scoring play, City returned strong and fast.

Preston Nash, City quarterback, gained yardage when he successfully passed the ball several times to halfback Eli Tyles.

However, the most spectacular play in the game was made by Belloff, when in the second quarter he ran the ball 79 yards — right up to the Collegians' 16-yard line before he was halted.

In the third quarter Nash passed the ball 29 yards to Maceo Gray to tie the score, 6 - 6.

Two more points were added when Lyles, receiving the ball from Nash, crashed into the end zone, making the score 8-6.

THE COLLEGIANS found paydirt again at the beginning of the 4th quarter when Gray, an outstanding player, ran the ball in for six more points.

Poly's attempts to score in the last seconds of the game proved futile.

The Engineers won the last two games with ease and were desperately fighting for their third consecutive win. Poly beat City in '62 with the same 14-6 score by which City won this game, and in '63 by 28-0.

Out of the 76 "traditional" games played between these two high school teams, the Collegians have walked off with 39 wins, the Engineers 31 and six were tied.

OTHER CITY players were: Raymond Banks, 18, end; Frank Simpson, 15, tackle; Charles Bowers, 17, guard; Donald Wiegman, 18, center; Melvin Massey, 17, guard; Basha Jordan, 17, tackle; Henry Gareis, 16, end; Preston Nash, 17, quarterback; Eli Lyles, 16, halfback; Maceo Gray, 18, halfback; and William Brooks, 17, fullback.

Poly players were:

Mark Smoot, 17, end; Franklin Mitchell, 17, tackle; Gary Arthur, 17, guard; James Dietach, 17, center; Ray Waldron, 16, guard; John Gerbig, 17, tackle; Raul Diaz, 17, end; Edward Belloff, 18, quarterback; Ronald Tyree, 17, halfback; Randy Ruger, 16, halfback; and Gary Ross, 17, fullback.

Pepersack won't

Mitchell, head of the Maryland Interracial Commission.

Pepersack further stated the Department of Correction and its institutions are all governed by the Maryland Merit System Law and the State Employees Personnel Rules.

Citing these as inclusive of all laws pertaining to discrimination in employment, the commissioner insisted these laws and rules are "strictly enforced by this department and by the institutions under its jurisdiction."

The Rev. Mr. Bascom, as spokesman for the Ministerial Alliance, told the AFRO: "My immediate reaction to the commissioner's response — I feel annoyed.

"He has completely ignored our request for a conference.

"High officials should not disregard requests made in attempts to solve problems that are germane to our community.

"This charge is nothing new. We talked to Mr. Curran two years ago, before the allegations of the Interracial Commission.

"Our concern is great because of the large proportion of colored incarcerated in the Maryland Penitentiary."

THE CORRESPONDENCE came as a follow-up to charges that discriminatory practices are in force (though not openly) at the Maryland Penitentiary.

The charges relate that while colored guards are hired at the institution a large percentage of them are dismissed before the end of their probationary period, thus keeping down the total number of colored permanently employed.

THE CORRECTIONAL Officers Association of Maryland has asked the opening of records to show the ratio of colored officers fired during the probationary period in comparison to that of white officers.

The association insists that colored guards have been high on the list of eligibles for promotion since 1961.

However, it charges, to the present time only one has actually received promotion.

Additional charges of discrimination in assignment of penitentiary personnel to various posts within the institution have also been leveled.

cation or job training — and the person who needs the service are brought together.

5. Thus the CANDO program will seek to motivate the discouraged poor into seeking the help that is available to them.

THE ACTUAL launching of this Human Renewal Program will require formal action by both the mayor and the City Council.

The mayor must appoint an interim governing board.

The City Council must create the new municipal department — CANDO.

When the Council has acted, the governing board will have permanent status.

It will be composed of the mayor, president of the City Council, the comptroller and 11 additional members appointed by the mayor.

Of the 11, four will come from nominees of the Associated Catholic Charities, the Associated Jewish Charities, the Community Chest of the Baltimore Area, and the Health and Welfare Council.

A fifth will be a member of the Board of School Commissioners.

The other six will be selected at large.

WHEN THE program is in full operation, the cost will be approximately $23,000 a year, of which about 90 percent will be provided under the Federal War - on - Poverty program.

Funds for this program are provided through the Federal Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, and other related legislation.

The first year's cost of the Baltimore program has been estimated at nearly $4,400,000, which is also expected to receive 90 percent federal financial aid.

The city's program, entitled "Plan for Action for Human Renewal," is the culmination of a year - long $85,000 project conducted under auspices of the Steering Committee for the Plan for Action for Human Renewal in cooperation with Mayor McKeldin's staff.

The Health and Welfare Council provided the technical supervision for the plan.

Cooperating were the Department of Education, the Youth Services Agency, Morgan State College, Department of Health, Department of Welfare, Legal Aid Bureau and Pratt Library, among others.
