in which a Baltimore policeman was held legally liable for damages after illegally searching a citizen.

THE CASE loomed large this week as the NAACP filed legal actions against Commissioner Bernard J. Schmidt and other policemen in connection with police tactics in the Veney Brothers' manhunt.

The case is recalled because the circumstances parallel some of the searches in the current raid, notably those at a pool hall in Walbrook Junction and a night club at Linden and Robert.

Current warrant - less searches in homes are considered an even greater violation of civil rights and acquiscence in the face of uniformed and armed policemen is not considered consent.

FOLLOWING A so - called "crime wave" in late 1962, then Police Commissioner Beverly Ober issued orders to all police: "Search for possession of dangerous weapons on all persons coming under police supervision."

In the wake of this order, numerous "flying squads" swooped down — to taverns, night clubs, pool halls, etc., searching all patrons for weapons.

As in the supposed present search for the Veney Brothers, no search warrants were used. Police have arrest warrents for the Veneys. In most cases, police entered public places shouting "Hit the all," — meaning stand against the wall and submit to search.

The night of Feb. 15, 1953, Club Tiajuana, in the 2700 block Pennsylvania Ave. was "raided" by a squad of police under Sgt. Charles Wrightson.

While other patrons were being patted down, Sgt. Wrightson approached David W. Mason, a local attorney, who protested against the search.

MASON WAS told to either submit to search or be carried to the station house in a patrol wagon. He submitted to the search under protest.

A suit later was filed by W. A. C. Hughes Jr., on behalf of Mr. Mason, asking damages against the policeman for the illegal search and humiliation suffered during and after the incident.

After an adverse decision in lower court, Mr. Hughes, attorney for the plaintiff, took these case to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

On Nov. 16, 1954, the Court of Appeals reversed the decision of the lower court and entered judgement against the policeman.

The Court held that where the police sergeant, without a Warrant, searched patrons of a night club for concealed weapons, over their objection and without seeing a crime committed, such search constituted both an assault and battery and false imprisonment for which the patron could recover nominal damages.

THE COURT of Appeals also held: "the fact that the police officer was acting pursuant to orders of a superior officer when he conducted his illegal search did not relieve him of liability.

"An officer making an illegal search is acting as an individual and is accountable ees each."

According to Mr. Hughes: "Following this important decision against the police, the raids and shaking down ceased. This ruling has been handed down by the courts, already.

"If such tactics are illegal, even in public places, how can the police attempt to justify these raids, illegal searches in private homes — without warrants?

"There is no law to uphold the police in what they are doing. People are afraid to go to public places, some are afraid to walk the streets on account of the police actions; others are even fearful of talking about the Veney case on the street — they might be arrested."

than the places that are left standing."

One lady, still living in a slum-like house nearly in the shadow of the new State Office Building said that "with all that money, maybe they could give me a few dollars. If I had that $4 million to use, all the poor would be blessed."

Charles Black of 512 Druid Hill Ave. said he would use the money first for better housing and then for schools.

"But schools would be the best thing," he added. "We ought to help the youngsters."

HE RECALLED that when he was young he had to walk five miles to school and fight for his eighth grade education and hoped that "the youngsters now will take advantage of their new opportunities. They even have buses now that pick them up at the door for school."

Mr. Black conceded that the poverty program would probably help the younger generation most.

A retired man drinking a coke in the Lafayette Market offered the advice that "the new program would not work if they did not have good leaders to get behind it. He also hoped that something would be done about letting people buy homes where they wished.

THE GENERAL lack of knowledge about the program was illustrated by Mrs. Queen Rodwell of 828 Druid Hill Ave.

When questioned by reporters, Mrs. Rodwell stated, "I didn't know there was anything like that. Lord knows, we could use some help."

She is the grandmother of six children and has eight mouths to feed in her small house. "After we pay the rent and gas and electric, there isn't much but a couple dollars for food for the month," she said.

"I hope they will be able to help the poor. Where there's a will there's a way."

A group of men standing on a street corner was approached by the AFRO. Only one of the men had heard of the program. "We were just talking about something that has to do with that," he said.

"We were just laid off and were discussing what we can do. But they say it's only temporary."

THE AGREED that job training ought to be a part of the program.

The spokesman for the group pointed out that he has a baby daughter and "the best thing for her would be if I have a job." He added that education ought to be stressed also.

The other men in the group said they didn't know about the project and one man volunteered, "I got a newspaper last night, but haven't read about it yet."

told the AFRO: "There is no such thing as probable cause based on an anonymous tip. Courts have held that an informant must be proved reliable before taking action based on the information.

"This is just pure harassment, that's all. A part of the feelings the police have been wanting to let loose on the people."

Other lawyers have talked with the AFRO and made the following comments:

"The entire operation is definitely illegal. There is nothing in the law to support such actions."

"These are the unlawful acts of the law."

"THE TYPE of raids that are being carried out, on most of them we judge in his right mind would issue a search warrant for these houses based on such incompetent and unreliable information."

"The police officers themselves are subjecting themselves to be sued for damages in these illegal searches. A person who commits an unlawful act at the orders of another, is himself liable to punishment."

"A search for the Veney Brothers, of whom we have pictures, does not give them the right to terrorize all the people on the premises and subject them to searches and indignities that have nothing to do with the pursuit of the fugitives.

"The police are just using this as a smoke - screen to conduct illegal shake-downs and let off their steam."

"This is creating an awful lot of ill will for the department."
