—Veney brothers case

store and the shooting of police Lt. Joseph Maskell.

Samuel Veney is also charged in a warrant with the slaying on Christmas Day of police Sgt. Jack Lee Cooper.

THE INJUNCTION proceedings, called a "Novelty" by Judge Thomsen, started on Jan. 14, and for three days scores of witnesses testified that their homes were entered and searched by heavily armed police.

The NAACP lawyers, headed by James M. Nabrit 3rd, of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, also seek injunctive action on behalf of any citizen who have been, or could be a victim of police searches without warrants.

Other NAACP attorneys are Mrs. Juanita J. Mitchell, W. A. C. Hughes and Tucker R. Dearing, of Baltimore, and Melvin Zarr, of the Legal Defense Fund.

Commissioner Schmidt, represented by Attorneys General Robert C. Murphy and John W. Sause began last week and ended on Thursday morning.

During the presentation of their case numerous police witness, among them many officers who took part in the raids, testified that homes were searched only with the expressed consent of the occupants.

LT. JAMES J. CADDEN, homicide squad, who supervised a large percentage of the "investigations" told the court on Wednesday that many of the raids were made on the basis of anonymous telephone tips, but that he had never searched any home without the permission of the occupants.

However, he stated that the special manhunt detail has been disbanded.

Asked under cross examination by Mr. Hughes why he believed the telephone tips in the Veney case had diminished, Lt. Cadden testified:

"Probably because of this legal action . . ."

Mr. Hughes also asked the witness:

"If there were more telephone calls in the future would you continue to raid homes as you have done in the past?"

"Yes, I would," was Lt. Cadden's reply.

JUDGE THOMSEN showed concern with the answer and quickly interrupted.

"You mean you would follow the same practice in spite of the general order issued by Commissioner Schmidt?"

Lt. Cadden re-phased his indicating that he would now follow the instructions set forth in the Commissioner's order.

order stated that if an officer

Commissioner Schmidt's order stated that if an officer was in doubt as to whether probable cause existed prior to entering a house, he should seek the advice of the State's Attorney or the State's Attorney or the Attorney General.

On Thursday seven witnesses for the plaintiffs took the stand in rebuttal to testimony given by police at the end of which the court adjoined.

Final arguments in the case is pending a date which will later be set by the court.

Admits arrest error

Det. Lt. James J. Cadden, who commanded at least 58 raids during the historic man hunt for the Veney brothers, was called to the stand as last defense witness late Wednesday afternoon.

The lieutenant, assigned to the homicide squad, told the court that permission to enter the dwellings had always been given by the occupants in all the homes he raided.

The lieutenant also told the court that homes had "inspected or turned-up" following the fatal shooting of Patrolman Claude Profili last January.

Lt. Cadden indicated that the raids had been conducted at that time in predominately white neighborhoods.

He confirmed that many raids were conducted on the basis of anonymous telephones calls.

UNDER CROSS examination of Attorney NAACP attorney W. A. C. Hughes, Lt. Cadden said that the arrest of Mrs. Maggie L. Sheppard, 73, and her disabled veteran grandson Roscoe Cooper had been an error.

"If I had handled the investigation I would have done it differently," he said.

Lt. Cadden, however, admitted that he had been in charge of the detail which raided or visited Mrs. Sheppard home after a cab-driver reported a conversation he had over-heard between two women passengers.

"I'm sorry I didn't go to the Northwestern District. Perhaps I should have," the lieutenant testified.

LT. CADDEN stated that after entering Mrs. Sheppard's home he had attempted to question the elderly women concerning her alleged taxicab conversation with Mrs. Snowden.

"She was evasive and wouldn't answer the questions. She admitted taking the cab home from the VA building but wouldn't tell me who she was with and what the conversation was about" he said.

"She told me it was none of my business or something like that."

Earlier testimony from Northwestern District Sgt. William H. Rihmann, indicated that Lt. Cadden had placed Mrs. Sheppard under arrest "because she refused to answer the questions."

The sergeant stated that he had been instructed by Lt. Cadden to take the women to the station and "book her" for investigation.

"I never arrested anyone," Lt. Cadden told the court.

Mr. Hughes asked "... then if you didn't arrest her or if you didn't order her arrested, who did?"

LT. CADDEN offered an explanation:

"After I found out and was reasonably certain that the woman had nothing to do with the Veney case I instructed the sergeant to take Mrs. Sheppard to the station and confront her with the cab-driver and try to clear this thing up."

"Mrs. Sheppard seemed willing, she said "Yes, I'll talk with the cab-driver" when I asked her if she would go. I don't order any arrest."

'Wanted to kill us'

Here Judge Thomsen interrupted stating:

"Mrs. Sheppard appears to be at least 70, did it ever occur to you to bring the cab-driver to her?"

Lt. Cadden replied "No sir it didn't."

ACCORDING to Sgt. Rihmann's testimony when Mrs. Sheppard and her grandson arrived at the station she was immediately taken before the desk sergeant who booked her.

Asked by Mr. Hughes if the elderly woman was placed in a cell the sergeant replied "No sir, she wasn't but had left the docket room shortly after bringing Mrs. Sheppard in."

"I had to answer a telephone call and to make a telephone call. When I finished I asked an officer to bring the woman back to the sergeant's room so I could question her," he reported.

"Was Roscoe placed in a cell?" asked Attorney Hughes.

"Yes, he was," the sergeant answered.

The sergeant had also testified that upon entering Mrs. Sheppard home he saw Mr. Cooper standing in the living room.

ALTHOUGH he denied that anyone sized the disabled veteran he had "patted him down looking for a weapon."

He told the court that his primary concern in wanting to question the woman was because of an incidented about an hour earlier when a police officer had been shot at and the bullet had glanced off of a shield worn by him.

Sgt. Rihmann stated that he looked through the basement and first floor of the house.

"What were you looking for?" Judge Thomsen asked.

"I went down to the basement looking for some persons, I don't know whom . . . I was looking for someone who would try to kill us," the sergeant said.

ANOTHER witness on Wednesday was Det. Richard Bovak, homocide squad, who told the Court of the raid of an empty house in the 2200 block Rosedale St.

He said he went through an open first floor front window and opened the door from the inside to admit other officers.

Det. Bosak stated that the raid was based on a tip from a daily newspaper that "a marihuana ring was the informer.

He testified that when he got to the house he knocked at the front door but got no reply.

"I heard something on the inside of the house that sounded like someone moving around. There was a window just off the front door which was unlocked," he recalled.

"When I heard this noise I opened the window and called in, 'It's the police. Open the door.'"

Entered window

There was no answer and he crawled in through the window, he said.

• • •

DET. BOSAK and another witness, who also entered the Rosedale St. Sgt. Robert E. Brathum, of the Special Emergency Unit, both told the court that a window at the rear of the house had not been broken to gain entrance.

They further stated that the noise which sounded like someone moving around," turned out to be a large German Shepherd police dog.

Det. Bosak said that after the detail found no one at home they went next door and talked with a woman and her husband.

"We told them who we were and asked them who lived in the house next door. They told us the Floyds and that they were both working," he said.

WITHOUT mentioning the findings of the special panel of lawyers appointed last Thursday presumably to study the legal positions of both sides and to attempt a compromise, Judge Thomsen resumed the hearing on Tuesday.

Judge Thompson indicated to reporters that the opinions of the attorneys would be taken into account in helping him reach a decision in the case.

Ten witnesses were put on the stand by Robert C. Murphy and John W. Sause of the Attorney general's office to testify on behalf of the defendant Commissioner Schmidt.

Five of the nine police witnesses told the court of their participation in the raid on 2416 Eutaw Pl., the home of the Rev. Mrs. Elizabeth Tompkins, a plaintiff in the civil suit.

Plaintiffs testimony in this particular incident alleged that police had entered the home on Dec. 26, at about 1 a.m. and that resident were not shown search warrants or told why the house was being searched.

THE POLICE witnesses in this case were, Det. Sgt. George G. Shriner, Sgt. William C. Hughes, Lt. Lyman W. Gonce, Det. Robert DePoala and Sgt. Richard L. Connolly.

Sgt. Shriner said he knocked on the door and rang the bell and when the door was opened by Arthur Rayner he stated the mission of the detail and asked permission to enter and search the house.

He testified that Mr. Rayner replied, "You are welcome to come in and look around."

The sergeant said that neither he nor anyone in his presence at any time searched Mr. Rayner.

"It wasn't necessary. All he had on was pajama bottoms," said Sgt. Shriner.

Rapped Louder

LAST WEDNESDAY Det. Oliver Walker, who also took part in the raid at the Eutaw Pl., address said that Mrs. Tompkins had left home the second floor at the request of an officer to get the keys to a locked door.

He stated that upon her return she had opened the locked door to the room of boarder who was out of town.

"I positively remember that she opened the door herself," he testified.

Sgt. Shriner's recollection of this incident sharply contradicted that of Det. Walker.

"Someone gave me a ring of keys and I opened the door myself, looked in, and returned the keys to the woman," Sgt. Shriner's testimony disclosed.

The testimony of the other five witnesses was similar. All, however, recalled that someone wished them a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year" as they left the dwelling.

Lt. George C. Schnable of the Northeastern District; and Robert J. Hewes, of the Northwestern District, in court the part they played in the raid on the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Lankford, 2707 Parkwood Ave.

Lt. Schnable, who was called to the stand first, stated that he did not participate in the raid in an official capacity.

He said he heard over the police radio while cruising in a patrol wagon that the raid was to take place and went to the scene.

Lt. Schnable said when he arrived, Lt. Hewes was playing his man and that he stayed to assist him.

While he and Lt. Hewes were talking, Lt Schnabel stated they were approached by a man who asked, "Are you going to turn-up the Parkwood Ave house?"

He testified that Lt. Hewes replied "yes" and that the man said an AFRO newspaper carrier had reported seeing two men who looked like the Veney brothers enter the house.

THE LIEUTENANT recalled that he and Lt. Hewes rapped on the door with his night stick.

"When no one came to the door he rapped again with the stick a little louder," said Lt. Schnabel.

A woman came to the door and when Lt. Hewes asked permission to search the house Lt. Schnabel said she told them:

"Certainly go ahead and search, it's quite alright, you're only doing your job."

Lt. Schnable had difficulty remembering whether permission was given at the front door, in the hall, or in the living room of the house.

He did recall that no other officers entered the house until permission had been bona - fide racists.

Such a proportion is not calculated to help the Council in its drive to maintain white supremacy.

WHEN Kilpatrick made his revelation, he also disclosed that the chapter had voted to join CORE, which gives it the distinction of being the only White Citizens Council in the country to affiliate with this organization.

Kilpatrick was helped no end in his take over of the Council by Joseph Mitchell, former city manager of Newburg, N.Y., and now national field director of the Councils.

Mitchell trusted Kilpatrick as a true - blood segregationist — or maybe that should be true - white segregationist. Whatever it was, he let Kilpatrick in on the plans of the organization and even appointed him head of the County Council, when its president resigned.

stand he stated that he had received information from the police radio dispatcher that the Veney brothers had been seen by an AFRO newsboy entering the Parkwood Ave. house.

"He (the dispatcher) said the suspects were shacking-up with some people by the name of 'Garrett'," the lieutenant testified.

He stated that he went to the address to look the dwelling over.

"I wanted to make sure that I knew where the right house was," he told the court.

After sending for his men the lieutenant said he started deploying them as they arrived.

Lt. Hewes recalled:

"When Lt. Schnabel arrived I didn't know whether he was to relieve me (of command) or not. I though maybe he was going to be in charge of the detail since he was from the Northeastern District."

'Lot Of Hullabaloo'

UNDER CROSS examination Lt. Hewes referred to Lt. Schnabel's arrival as "unnecessary" and "..... a lot of hullabaloo."

He testified also that while he and Lt. Schnabel were talking a man asked him about the raid.

Lt. Hewes said that he had assumed, "because the man was nearly dress and had information about the raid that he was an AFRO reporter.

"I asked him if he had called the dispatcher and he said yes," recalled the lieutenant.

Mr. Nabrit asked:

"Did you act under your own authority to make a raid or were you acting under orders of a superior officer?"

Lt. Hewes answered that the dispatcher said the Veney Brothers were in the house and that the raid followed as "general procedure."

MR. NABRIT inquired, "Did you place the house under surveillance or question neighbors?"

The witness stated that he did neither.

Lt. Hewes stated that when Mrs. Lankford opened the door she stepped back and continued to retreat until they were in the living room.

"And as far as other officers entering the house while I was talking to the woman, I don't know about that but I guess they had to because by the time I got up to the second floor there were officers up there already," he said.

'Anxious' Cabbie

Cab-driver Alvin Goodale testified on Tuesday that he picked up two woman at the Veterans Administration building on Jan. 6.

The two women were Mrs. Maggie Sheppard, 2003 N. Monroe St., and Mrs. Florence Snowden, 1930 Druid Hill Ave.

Mrs. Sheppard was arrested along with her son Roscoe Cooper, a disabled veteran, because of the conversation cab-driver Goodale claims to have over heard.

He testified:

"As a rule I don't usually listen to conversations of passengers, but I heard an argument between the two ladies about money or something about a pension increase.

"I heard that lady there (pointing to Mrs. Snowden who was seated in the court room) tell the other lady she was a fool, that she was just like her son, getting drunk and shooting police officers"

The cab-driver said after he discharged his passengers at their respective homes he told what he had overheard to two police officers in a patrol wagon at North Ave. and Longwood St.

"I guess I was over anxious to solve some of the crime that's going on," he told the court.

fill of the Council after he held a meeting at his home, and CORE pickets showed up aside his home.

With policemen on hand to watch the fun, CORE outside picketing, and the members inside turning out the lights and rushing for the back door in order to avoid detection, the tax consultant threw in the towel.

Before the meeting ended, however, Kilpatrick managed to get his hands on a list signed by the people who were there, as well as some scurrilous racial stickers which had been distributed in an effort to defeat President Johnson.

The stickers, in not too subtle tones, suggested that a vote for Johnson was a vote to have colored people live next door to white persons.

The literature went to the State's Attorney who decided that no one could be prosecuted, while the list of names came to the AFRO.

ON THE list was the name of a District policeman who had boasted to other Council members that he was going to recruit at least 20 other members of the deprrtment who held the same ideas that he did.

The policeman's name was turned over to Police Chief John B. Layton, who reluctantly noted that under existing regulations there was nothing he could do about the errant cop.

However, the policeman was placed under surveillance and when he appeared for his next Council meeting, little did he know, but he was promised that he has not was being watched.

The policeman is still on the force but Chief Layton heard the last of this yet.

PARREN J. Mitchell executive director of the Maryland Commission on Interracial Problems and Relations, told that he was present when the vote to merge with CORE was taken.

Ever since he was named to the commission, Mitchell said, he has been writing to groups "thought to be segregationist in outlook" requesting an invitation to attend.

His purpose was to "open a meaningful dialogue," but until recently, he had received no replies.

Then the president of the Prince Georges Council invited him to attend a meeting in Washington, D.C. on Jan. 23.

"At the meeting, it was disclosed that the majority of the Council members were persons concerned with achieving full civil rights for all citizens," he stated.

Mitchell proudly displayed a lapel button reading "NEVER" that was given to him at the meeting.

The button means that the affiliated CORE and Citizens boosters believe that white persons sympathetic to the Civil Rights Movement have joined local White Citizens Councils hoping to win members over to a position favorable to full Civil Rights for all."

WHAT KIND of man is Roman Kilpatrick to conceive such an ironic plan for the take-over of a group committed to the things he stands against.

Kilpatrick believes in taking and in getting things done. His involvement with the civil rights movement is of long duration, beginning in his home town of North Carolina.

He keeps extensive files on all civil rights activities throughout the country, and is perhaps just as knowledgable as any other person in the area.

He corresponds with a number of racist groups — not because he has any area of agreement with them — but because he wants to know what they are thinking and doing.

It was this attitude that led him to the Citizens Council.

One of his shining coups was in arranging to stack a meeting of the White Citizens Council in Glen Burnie, with civil rights people.

George Wallace was the speaker but with the civil rights people in the audience, he never really had a chance to wind up and let fly with both barrels, as is his wont.

ANOTHER TIME, when the Council thought it was going to have a secret meeting in Baltimore, it found that it had been infiltrated by a reporter from a Baltimore paper, who had gotten in the place on a ticket obligingly provided by that apparently staunch member of the Council—Norman Kilpatrick.

It seemed that every time the Council had a meeting, it was being infiltrated, but nobody no one apparently ever thought that good old Norman was responsible.

Mitchell, the national field director of the Council, trusted Kilpatrick to such a degree that he entrusted him with records and allowed him to set up the various meetings.

KILPATRICK EVEN had his hands on the membership card signed by the District policeman.

A crowning piece of strategy came when Kilpatrick decided to bring a friend into the fold—Phil Perkins, a former president of the Prince George's County of CORE.

This did add something of a flavor to the meetings and before too long there were 18 infiltrators in the chapter, and only two real segregationists, the policeman and a government worker.

The Council wasn't going any place, but it never seemed to worry Mitchell, the field director for the group, who reposed such faith in Kilpatrick that he took him with him to Montgomery, Ala., for a meeting of Council leaders Jan. 16 to 18.

Into Kilpatrick's little book went more names and more information, and no one ever grew wise that Norm was not what Norm seemed to be.

When asked once whether he was not afraid that his undercover activities might be brought out into the light of day, he answered "no", with an inflection that indicated he didn't think he Council members would ever be that astute to put that particular two and two together.

ALSO TAKEN into Kil-Kilpatrick's confidence was Parren Mitchell, executive secretary of the Maryland Commission on Inter-racial Problems and Relations.

At one point in the masquerade, it appeared that the civil rights leaders knew more about what was going on in the Council, than the Council did itself.

But all things must end, and after having rendered his Council boss de combat, Kilpatrick uncovered his hole card this week—after the Council Chapter, without the presence of its two real members, voted to join CORE.

Somehow, it seemed a fitting end to the story.

tinue, it could set a dangerous precedent," he added.

Burleigh stated that CORE believe Gov. Tawes has enough information to take action, and that the probe now being conducted by the State Insurance Department is merely a delaying action.

He urged the commission to "make appropriate recommendations to revamp the Insurance Department" so that it is able to deal with this "discriminatory section of the insurance industry."
