1st Baptist in Back River dedicates new stone altar

By ELIZABETH M. OLIVER

As you pass a small church away out on the highway or back off some lonely road, don't you often wonder how the brave little temple got there?

Other questions that fill across the mind on chance to see one of these rural buildings anywhere in America are: Who were the pioneers who founded the church? How did they decide to erect their place of worship here? What is going on now in the staunch little parrish?

Since our Nation's landscape is dotted with many a smiling little house of God, it is natural that Maryland should have its allotted number.

A SHINING example is the First Baptist Church that serves the tiny community of Back River, Md. near Essex. Its history was recently brought to light at a rededication service by its pastor, the Rev. Isaiah Hill, age 31, who is a resident of Baltimore and a member of an old Maryland family.

Born in Baltimore, he is the son of the late Sally Hill and Soloman Hill, a graduate of Dunbar High School, Cortez Peters Business School, a veteran of service as Petty Officer 3rd Class, in the U.S. Navy from 1952 to 1960.

He states that he was tutored privately by the Rev. Willie Chambers and then ordained a Baptist minister 14 years ago.

He and his wife, the former Miss Ernestine Tanner, have been married six and a half years.

THE FIRST Baptist Church on Back River Neck Road is indeed a typical rural American parish in that its membership is small and limited to the faithful few who reside in the nearby countryside.

In fact, the number on the church books is so limited the salary paid the pastor is not sufficient, as is usually the case everywhere in the land.

Therefore, the Rev. Mr. devoted young man, works full time as a Department of Public Welfare secretary.

Saturdays and evenings after work, he returns to duties as the Shepherd of the sheep at First Baptist and visits the sick, counsels the troubled, performs marriage ceremonies, raises his hand in blessing at christenings and when the sorrowful occasion comes, takes time off to preside at a funeral.

• • •

"When I first went to pastor at First Baptist, there were only 11 members. I soon realized I was facing the greatest challenge of my life."

Note worthy is his preface to the story of the church's rise to over 100 in membership:

• • •

"I hope it will encourage them to find satisfaction in the humble wayside church and serve it faithfully for here one truly discovers that God works in a mysterious way."

• • •

During the Rev. Mr. King's time, they purchased two buses to transport the faithful on visits to other churches a distance away, to go on outings and tressured trips. They also purchased a piano to back up the music from the old organ.

The Rev. Mr. Thomas succeeded as pastor and was followed by a few other beginning ministers from the community.

• • •

Creator of the stone altar rail, believed to be the first of its kind, is Joseph Armstrong Jr., a member of the church.

Louis V. Jones, violinist, played for kings and queens

WASHINGTON

Louis Vaughn Jones, 69, internationally known violinist and a retired teacher of violin at Howard University, died Monday at Providence Hospital after a lingering illness.

A requiem high mass was celebrated at Sts. Paul and Augustine's Church on Thursday. Burial was in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Jones was born in Clarceville, Ohio, and educated in the public schools of Cleveland, graduating from Central High School in 1914.

He studied violin in Boston, graduating from New England Conservatory of Music in 1918.

He served in France with the 807 Pioneer Infantry Band of World War I, as assistant band leader. Returning to Boston, he conducted a violin studio there for two years.

A concert season in the United States and Nova Scotia with Roland Hayes and William Lawrence was followed by study in France at the Ecole Normale de Musique, Paris; and in Budapest, Hungary with Sollaway, an artist - pupil of the great violin pedagag, Jeno Hubay.

In 1923, he played a command performance before King Alfonso and Queen Bearice of Spain at the American Embassy in Madrid.

After seven years of study and concerts abroad, Mr. Jones returned to the United States in 1928, when he soon became nationally known as a concert violinist. In 1931 he married Miss Grace Lomax of Cleveland.

Mr. Jones was head of the Violin Department at Howard University (1930-1960) for 30 years. As violinist, teacher, and composer he was recognized by music critics throughout the country.

His appearance as guest soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra in 1935 at Howard University was the first recognition of this kind for a colored person in Washington, when Constitution Hall was not open to colored artists.

During the Roosevelt Administration, Mr. Jones played at a White House Reception.

On April 3, 1950 he appeared in a benefit performance for The Fides House with Camille Nickerson, pianist.

Mr. Jones was a member of St. Vincent de Paul Society, The Holy Name Society, and Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

Surviving are his widow, (Mrs. Grace Lomax Jones) of the home address, 654 Girard Street, NW; two daughters, Mrs. Grace J. Young of Cleveland, Ohio, and Renee Marie Jones, a junior of Notre Dame Academy

Teacher killed on wedding trip

A Richmond schoolteacher and her bridegroom of a few hours were killed Saturday night in a car-truck crash on ice-coated U.S. Route 1, eight miles south of Henderson, N.C.

Both 22 years of age, the newlyweds were the former Miss Mamie Alfreida White, a new teacher at the Carver School in Richmond; and Gerald McLaurin, newly arrived in Richmond from his hometown in Fayetteville, N.C.

The couple had been married at 3:30 p.m. Saturday at the Richmond home of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Turner, 532 N. 21st St., the minister being a cousin of the bride's mother.

MRS. TURNER noted that the young woman "was a beautiful bride. She was radiant in a white brocade two-piece suit dress. And the bridegroom was a very nice-looking young man."

The bridegroom, it is reported, had recently been employed in Richmond as a hospital steward.

THE BRIDE'S mother, Mrs. Lena B. White and brother, Robert White Jr., had come up from their home in Manson, N.C. for the marriage ceremony.

After the service and congratulations, the newlyweds drove the Whites back to Manson, arriving about 9 p.m. Then the couple set off for Fayetteville, N.C. to see the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McLaurin.

But they never arrived.
