Ordered to mix, Maddox to sell

ATLANTA, (UPI)—Lester Maddox offered his restaurant for sale Tuesday for $335,000.

Maddox, who closed the establishment Sunday rather than serve a colored customer, said the business was worth $500,000 but "due to an emergency" he was willing to accept a sacrifice price.

A federal court held Maddox in contempt last week for refusing to obey its order to serve all customers. He was ordered to pay a $200 fine every day he failed to comply.

THE STAUNCH segregationist said Saturday he would accept colored customers, but changed his mind the next day when the first colored person attempted to obtain service.

Maddox advertised sale of his restaurant Tuesday in Atlanta Newspapers.

He said he would also consider leasing the property.

Maddox said in the ad that "sales have constantly been in excess of $500,000 per year, producing an income that places this business, fixtures, equipment, stock, building and grounds at a reasonable net worth of $500,000."

Group of ministers pushing unity theme

Is there dissension among Baltimore's religious leaders.

If so, what is being done about it? or what can be done to unite them?

These are the questions facing a recently formed group of clergymen who contend that there is "a lack of fellowship between the so-called big and little minister" of the city.

The organization known as "The Christian Brethren" are asking for suggestions from the public as to how minister can unite.

The time has come, according to the members of the new organization for "ministers to practice what they preach 'Love ye one another.'"

The clergyman are led by the Rev. W. S. Chambers, pastor of New Antioch Baptist Church, where they meet every Tuesday night.

Other officers of the group include the Revs. James S. Williams, pastor, Unity Baptist Church, co-chairman; Isaac D. Hill, pastor, First Baptist Church, recording secretary; Joseph P. Stewart, pastor, New Lebanon Calvary Baptist Church, assistant recording secretary and prayer leader; and the Rev. Herman Cottman, pastor, Christ Temple Church, financial secretary.

The treasurer is the Rev. Lester Hanrick, pastor, 2nd Progressive Baptist Church; the Rev. G. S. McGuire, assistant minister, First Baptist Church, is public relations man; and prayer leaders are the Rev. E. Hargrove, pastor, Christian Memorial Church, and the Rev. James O'Neal, pastor, Southern Baptist Church.

The ministers have also extended an invitation to any ministers who would "like to help bring unity to Baltimore's men of the cloth."
