Cardinal Shehan asks for action

ROME (UPI) — Lawrence Cardinal Shehan of Baltimore told newsmen Wednesday the Roman Catholic Church cannot sit on the sidelines in the American Battle for social and racial justice.

At a news conference in the Pontifical North American College— his first since becoming a Prince of the Church Monday — Cardinal Shehan said, "Great progress" had been made toward racial justice in the United States but that much remained to be done.

"We have everything to gain — the community has everything to gain — by churchmen taking an active part in forwarding the cause of social justice," the new cardinal said.

* * *

HE SAID that with social action and racial justice "the church in the U. S. has been quiet careful to make it a moral rather than a political issue."

It would be mistake for the hierarch "to enter into the political arena," Cardinal Shehan said, but at the same time experience shows the church no more than colored Americans can stand by and wait.

The cardinal's tone saw moderate throughout and he saw the polls as the way to prevent extremists from making any further headway on the American scene.

* * *

THE 67-YEAR-OLD prelate was one of 27 churchmen raised to the sacred purple in Pope Paul VI's first consistory. Public ceremonies were held in St. Peter's basilica Thursday to celebrate the creation of the new cardinals.

Cardinal Shehan also commented favorably on President Johnson's proposed school aid bill. "I think it established the principle for which the hierarchy of the U.S. has been contending," he said.

The bill includes provisions that would allow some federal aid to parochial schools at the secondary and primary level. "I hope it will pass," the cardinal said.
