—Rights Bill

governor has pledged his support for the bills.

He summoned Thomas H. Lowe (D., Talbot), committee chairman, to his office. Afterwards, Mr. Lowe said he would have a reconsidering of the vote by which the bills recieved unfavorable reports, returning them to live status.

Mr. Lowe said he would appoint a sub-committee to go over the bills and work out some form of compromise to enable them to pass the house, particularly the two on fair employment and public accommodations.

The committee is expected to be appointed today.

THIS MOVE stalled for the time being a floor battle over the bills.

(D. Clarence M. Mitchell III, 4th) chief sponsor of the bills, was in a process of gathering the necessary 15 signatures at AFRO presstime to petition the bills to the floor.

Commenting on the outlook for passage of any one of the bills, an aide to Gov. J. Millard Tawes told the AFRO: "It doesn't look good. We had expected at least favorable action on the Fair Employment Bill."

JUST A WEEK ago, Gov. Tawes told a delegation of citizens who approached him on behalf of the measures that he would throw the full weight of his administration behind the bills.

At the time, however, he also commented that he thought the Fair Employment Bill stood the better chance of passage during this session.

Identical bills, sponsored by Sen. Verda F. Welcome, (D. 4th) are before the Senate's Judicial Proceedings Committee.

The House's Judiciary Committee rendered the unfaverable reports with dispatch Thursday afternoon.

Harvey Epstein (D. 4th) and Geral Siegal (D. 5th) argued briefly unsuccessfully, to have a Public Accommodations Bill conform with that of the National Civil Rights Act, to give the state jurisdiction in those areas not now covered by Maryland's Accommodations Bill.

The opposition committee members listned but did not arrage back.

The Judiciary Commitee has no one colored delegate among its 33 members. Mrs. has been absent during this Irma G. Dixon (D. 4th)who Assembly session because of illness.

Who speaks for the Negro?

In nine thought-provoking pages in LOOK, noted author Robert Penn Warren gives a new insight into the Negro revolution and its leadership as he discusses these questions:

- Can America move ahead without violence?
- What next in the North?
- What is the South ready to concede?
- Who speaks for the Negro?

Plus exclusive color paintings—suitable for framing—of Martin Luther King, Roy Wilkins, James Farmer and Whitney Young. Read "The Negro Now," in

Project to list all deaf persons

The Baltimore Deaf Community Research Project wants to locate all deaf persons in the city.

Anyone who knows of any persons who can not hear should call, visit or write The Baltimore Deaf Community Research Project, 18 S. Wolfe St., Phone 24-0020.

Directors of the study include Dr. Paul Hanly Furfey and Dr. Thomas J. Harte. Miss Rosalinda M. Reuter is assistant director.

The 3 - year project under the Catholic University of America Bureau of Social Research, Washington, is financed by the U.S. Vocational Rehabilitation Administration and began here in 1964.

After a list of deaf persons is compiled, there will be a house to - house census; exploration of special problems such as employment, job placement, education and training and a study of the hearing community in relation to social interaction with the deaf.

man, if he knew the men shown.

At 2:30 p.m. FBI and federal narcotics agents entered the firm through six doors and two loading platforms simultaneously. They also had men on the roof. Twenty took part.

They went directly to the machines where the Veneys were working about 10 feet apart. Both were bent over their machines. Agents tapped them on the shoulders identified themselves and announced "you are under arrest."

THE FBI office is about a mile from the factory and the whole operation took about 10 minutes.

Top officials involved in the arrests were District FBI Area director John Malone, special agent in charge of the raid, William Alexander and John B. Bjorklund, agent in charge of the Garden City FBI office.

The Veneys denied their identities but fingerprints proved them to be the wanted men. They refused to make statements.

The Veneys were jailed in the Federal House of Detention in Manhattan and an arraigment before a federal commissioner was scheduled for today.

Earl was hired at the plant on Jan. 26 as a heat sealer; Theresa a strted Jan. 27 as an inspector in the nylon department and Samuel went to work on Feb. 27 operating a chopping machine.

All were paid $1.35 an hour plus time and a half for overtime.

The plant, 20 miles from New York, across the street from Roosevelt Field, employs 150 people, many of them Puerto Ricans.

VICTOR COPPEL, production -manager at the plant, described the Veneys as "quiet capable and hardworking."

Mr. Radovsky declared:

"They were absolutely the most autstanding workers we had here. And they worked long hours. David (Sam) and Ken (Earl) worked 67 hours last week."

IN A statement to the AFRO, Thursday, Mike Figarde, who supervised the Veney brothers' work said, "they were good workers and appeared to be well mannered, so much so that we frequently gave them overtime.

"They were among about 150 employees and got along with them and there was no reason to suspect them of any wrong doing.

"They gave no trouble.

"We are sorry to see them go, and sorry to learn they are in trouble.

"We knew nothing about these charges until about 20 FBI men converged on the plant Thursday afternoon and took them away. Things happened so fast that pp one knew what it was all about."

MR. FIGARDE said the plant's personnel office was closed and he could not give any details about their addresses but he knew them as Browns.

He remembered that the Veneys and a girl named Brown were hired at the same time to work on sealing machines.

DURING THE raid, reported "carried out very smoothly," a heat sealer and a man on a chopping machine nicked their fingers but other than that management reported nothing happened.

The plant, in industrial Long Island, is a plane hangar type. The Veneys first worked on the 5 p. m.to 9 a.m. shift but a couple of weeks ago went on the 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. shift.

Leroy Brown told the AFRO after he was freed that he would return to his job today. He spoke briefly to a reporter but sent Sam's wife on in the home so that she could not be approached.

Of his half-brothers and their troubles, Leroy said:

"This was something that happened on the spur of the moment. I wasn't aware of it. Otherwise, no comment."

Then he added, "All I know is they arrived here shortly after Christmas and said they wanted to spend the weekend. After all, they are my brothers, so I took them in.

"When they decided on a more permanent type of deal, took rooms."

THE ARREST OF the Veney Brothers in Long Island Thursday brought a quiet, unspectacular end to one of the most sensational manhunts in the history of the city—and one of the longest.

Sam and Earl have been the target of a nationwide dragnet since Christmas Day.

It also ended the most controversial manhunt ever to hit Baltimore or Maryland. During the 77-day search more than 200 raids on homes and business establishments before citizens protests of what they called illegal raids were taken by the NAACP to Federal District Court.

An injunction decision against the raids is still pending. Chief Judge Roszel C. Thomsen said earlier he would rule on the petition the last of this month.

THE ARRESTS came on the heels of reports that the Veneys were spotted in Baltimore as recently as last week.

Squads of heavily-armed policemen last Thursday converged on a building at Bond and Lanvale Sts. after receiving information that the Veneys were in a vacant apartment.

Throughout the duration of the manhunt, callers flooded newspaper offices with reports that the brothers had been spotted in various sections of the city.

Lewis recounts Selma clubbing

By MARY STRATFORD
AFRO Staff Correspondent

SELMA, Ala.—Still weak from a sever beating by state police during a voting demonstration in Selma, Ala., Sunday, John Lewis, chairman of SNCC was an unexpected participant in the March led by the Rev. Martin Luther King on Tuesday.

The youthful leader, whose strong-voiced delivery during the march on Washington in August, 1963, evoked lusty yells and cheers, was subdued when he appeared at a rally just before Tuesday's March in Selma.

And in contrast to supporters in previous rallies, this time his audience was silent.

The reason for the silence was plain. Willie Ricks, a member of SNCC who introduced Lewis and admonished the audience to quietness, explained: "The man is weak and he can't talk loud. You'll have to be quiet to hear him."

LEWIS, who was hospitalized at Good Samaritan Hospital for head injuries after the beating, had been released from the Hospital only an hour and one-half before his address.

Mustering his strength, Lewis, low-voiced but still militant, said, "right now we are engaged in a serious venture in the black belt—perhaps the most serious we have been in for a long time.

"Some of you have gone to jail, some of you have been beaten, some shot.

"One of the darkest days was Sunday when Gov. George Wallace was at his best . . . and state trooper Al Lingo and Sheriff Jim Clark."

WITH RUMORS afloat that the planned march would not take place, Lewis referred to the order by Federal Judge Frank Johnson in Montgomery banning the march and asserted:

"I believe the Constitution gives us the right to march any time we get ready. All of us must march for our sisters and brother. Let us do it with a sense of dignity."

In an interview, Lewis said he was still weak and his head pained but X-rays showed there was no concussion from the blow which was struck in the same place as one he received on a freedom ride in 1961.

RECALLING SUNDAY's crisis, Lewis said, "We left Brown Chapel two abreast toward highway 80, two and one-half miles away. We crossed the bridge over the Alabama river and state troopers ordered us to go back.

"I knelt to pray with Rev. Hosea Williams." Lewis saw the Rev. Williams were leading the march. One hit me on the head. I fell to the ground. I got back to the church with assistance.

"I spoke at the church about two minutes. The pain in my head grew sharper and sharper."

Lewis was taken from the church to the parsonage next door where first aid was available, then he was taken to the Hospital.

ANOTHER PERSON on the scene of Sunday's atrocities was Virginia Wells, a registered nurse, who has been working with the Medical committee for human rights here, with special assignment to attend the Rev. Mr. King.

"It was just like a battlefield," she stated. "I have never seen anything like it.

"People were hurt by the charting horses, the whips and the tear gas.

"It made you want to cry when you remembered the women and children who got in line, getting ready to march with packs or bags on their backs."

Parade route

The Ancient Order of Hibernians Saint Patrick's Day Parade will again feature a number of bagpipe bands in its colorful line of march on Sunday, March 14, according to parade chairman, John J. Sweeney Jr.

The Parade will commence at 2 p.m. at Cathedral and Monument Sts., proceed down Cathedral Street into Liberty Street to Baltimore Street, east on Baltimore Street to Holliday Street and North on Holliday to the City Hall Plaza where it will disband.
