Reception follows Brown baby baptism

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cole's elegant Forest Park Ave. home was the scene of a reception Sunday afternoon.

Center of attention was a six-month old Kevin Brown, son of Herbert and Deanna Brown, who was baptized at the morning service at Douglas Memorial Church.

The pastor, the Rev. Marion Bascom, officiated, shortly before he flew to join the Freedom Marchers in Selma.

Mr. Cole and Walter Edmonds are the infant's godfathers. Mrs. Edmonds and Mrs. Lucille Godsey are godmothers.

• • •

NOT THE least bit disturbed by all the fuss, the baby 'eyed' all events and calmly relaxed for feeding in the arms of her grandmother, Mrs. Peggy Harris.

Guests at the reception included:

Messrs and Mesdames Herbert Miles, Walter Brown, Stephen Morris, James Alston, William Thorne, James Godsey, Walter Edmonds.

Mesdames Peggy Harris, Doris Jones, Peggy Hart, Joan Thorne, Doris Fagan, William Britt Sr., Hilliard Fagan, Lillian Allen, Olive Williams and Misses Lucille Wills and Rita Keats.

Logistics of feeding and caring for demonstrators

SELMA, Ala. — The logistics of the five-day civil march to Montgomery are considerably more complicated than you would think.

Plans had to be made to feed 3,000 marchers and bed down 1,000 for Sunday night. made to care for the sick and Arrangements have to be the injured.

The march has mobilized a huge aluminum mobile hospital, a health-mobile and 13 abulances. Aide from the main Medical Committee for Human Rights, there are 42 colored doctors and affiliated nurses of the Alabama State Medical Association. The 300 marchers who will be on the road all the way to Montgomery have been given medical examinations.

THE MEDICAL UNIT has already had some business. Leo Hoylan, a 24-year-old volunteer from Boston College was treated on Saturday night for face slashes inflicted by two whites. A girl was treated for an epileptic seizure just before the march got underway. More cases of exhaustion and coronary than of violence were expected. There are many elderly people in the march.

Food: on Sunday afternoon there were 5,000 sacks of oranges, cookies, and peanut butter sandwiches in the basement of the Green Street Baptist Church. These were enough for one snack. Food during the march will be kept simple. Some consist of chili, Instant coffee, raisins, and green beans. Food is cooked in the church basement in large new garbage pots and then shuttled out to the marchers.

There also are a tent truck, a utility truck, a garbage truck, five latrine trucks, and two vans with washing facilities. The logistics problems have naturally been somewhat eased by the reduction in the number of demonstrators.

FINAL LEG — Marchers, 15,000 strong, massed behind Dr. Martin Luther King and his wife, Coretta Dr. Ralph Bunche and other leaders as they moved toward the Alabama State Capitol in Montgomery on the last leg of the historic Selma to Montgomery "March to Freedom." Others in the front line include J. Philip Randolph, John Lewis, Rev. Ralph Abernathy and the Rev. Hosea Williams.

30,000 in march

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and United Nations Undersecretary Ralph Bunche led more than 30,000 flagwaving civil rights demonstrators in an historic march on the Alabama Capitol Thursday.

At late afternoon the marchers had appointed a 20-man delegation to carry a petition to Gov. George Wallace demanding immediate voting rights.

Wallace had earlier sent out a message saying: "I will not, I repeat, I will not see any group of citizens whatsoever until this demonstration and march has concluded and dispersed."

• • •

IT WAS the most massive racial demonstration in the history of the once solidly segregated Deep South, and matched in drama the massive 200,000-man March on Washington in 1963.

Hundreds of U.S. soldiers —ordered by President Johnson to protect the demonstrators — stood guard all along the route of march and jet planes and helicopters roared overhead, giving this "Cradle of the Confederacy" the appearance of an occupied city.

• • •

THURSDAY MARCH was the culmination of a 50 mile five-day trek from Selma, Ala., where a voter registration drive by King has resulted in massive demonstration drive by King has resulted in massive demonstrations, and two deaths.

Two previous attempts were made to stage a Selma-to-Montgomery march. The first group was turned back with clubs and tear gas.

Wallace, who vowed to conduct "business as usual" at the Capitol today, was having lunch when the seemingly endless parade of demonstrators came trooping into Capitol Square.

• • •

THOUSANDS OF citizens —white and colored citizens —crowded the parade route and leaned from the windows of buildings to catch a glimpse of the marching column that from time to time loosed a deafening chant of: "Freedom! Freedom! Freedom!"

At the square the leaders of the march mounted a platform and addressed the vast crowd.

• • •

BUNCHE, who like King is a Nobel Peace Prize winner, said, "Gov. Wallace should understand that no American is an outsider anywhere he goes in America."

Bayard Rustin, who directed the March on Washington, said the protest demonstrated that "we can get justice all over the country."

The Rev. James Bevel, one of King's most militant leaders, delivered a fiery address, declaring:

"We will march in every county in Alabama until every colored citizen is registered to vote.

The crowd greeted each pronouncement with roaring cheers that carried far beyond the Capitol's gleaming white dome.

THE DEMONSTRATORS' petition to Wallace said, in part:

"We come petitioning you to join us in spirit and in truth what is history's movement toward the Great Society: a nation of justice where none shall prey upon the weakness of others; a nation of plenty where greed and poverty shall be done away; a nation of brotherhood where success is founded upon service and not given for nobleness alone.

"We have come not only five days and 50 miles but we have come from three centuries of suffering and hardship and have come to you, the governor of Alabama, to declare that we must have our freedom now; we must have the right to vote; we must have equal protection of the law and an end to police brutality."

• • •

THURSDAY'S march started from the City of St. Jude, a Roman Catholic hospital and educational center where the demonstrators spent the night in an open air campsite.

It got underway about an hour and ½ late — around noon EST—and it took 5 minutes to get everyone on his way. The head of the column reached Court Square in the center of the business district, at 10 p.m. EST. There was a 10-minute halt at this point to allow the others to catch up.

Silent white pedestrians lined the route of the march despite entreaties by Montgomery Mayor Earl James for people to stay away.

"We've been occupied again, just like the civil war," said a cab driver. "It's a disgrace."

THE LINE of march passed the Dexter Avenue Baptist Church, where King got his start as an integration leader. His career was fatefully launched when Mrs. Rosa Parks refused to sit in the back of a segregated bus. King seized the issue and launched the now - famous 1955 Montgomery bus boycott.

Mrs. Parks marched with King Thursday.

Also in the line of march was Mrs. King, who strode along proudly clutching her husband's hand.

AS THE marchers moved past scattered, sullen white spectators, one crowd of youths chanted insulting racial names.

Nearby, a girl in mud - spattered capri pants stood atop a station wagon and applauded almost continuously as the marchers approached the capitol.

Nearer the Capitol the side walks were lined almost exclusively with watchers. Military police with M-1 rifles at parade rest stood expressionless, some chewing gum.

• • •

THE FIRST casualty of the march was a girl in her teens who fainted as the march neared its final destination. She was carried to a first aid unit.

Al Chinedozi Anonye, a colorfully - clad Nigerian, was also in the line of march. He is an exchange professor at Talladega (Ala.) College.

An elderly man waved to the marchers with one hand and wiped tears from his eyes with the other. Two maids waved from a sixth - floor window of the Jefferson Davis Hotel, the city's largest.

• • •

OF THE many speakers at the demonstration, the Rev. crowd:

"This is a revolution that won't fire a shot, we won't break a window, we won't ever curse, we only came to love the hell out of Alabama.

"We've come to warn you that some of you will be in the cotton patches and some of us in the statehouse."
