Heffners tell perils of life in Mississippi

Members of the Baltimore Society of Friends Church Tuesday night heard what happens to a Mississippi family when it inadvertently becomes involved in the Civil Rights movement.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Heffner, formerly of McComb, Miss., told of the bomb threats, anonymous calls and nightly visits they received last summer after Mr. Heffner had suggested that a rights worker speak to local business groups.

Only the summer before, in 1963, the town had honored the Heffners when their daughter was chosen Miss Mississippi and competed in the Miss America contest at Atlantic City.

* * *

THE HEFFNERS had met the young civil rights worker through their minister. After Mr. Heffner's suggestion, he and his wife were linked to the movement and social ostracism quickly followed.

After the first bombing attempt, Mr. Heffner told the meeting, co-sponsored by the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, "I stayed up all night with a shotgun, because I wasn't trained in nonviolence."

Mr. Heffner, who sold life insurance, reported that his business completely stopped and that their friends dwindled until only the clergyman was left.

"This just shows the peculiar position that a white Mississippian or white Alabaman is in if he wants to speak out," Mr. Heffner said to the group at Stony Run Friends Meeting House.

"I'm firmly convinced that the white Mississippian needs help more than the colored Mississippian. The colored people know they are right."

HE EXPLAINED that the dilemma for the poor white is that he used to have colored people to feel superior to, "now all he has is his hound dog."

The Heffners stated that their phone calls were monitored and that when they asked police about it, the answer was only that tapping a phone was illegal.

Mr. Heffner said he reminded the police that bombing a church or a home is also illegal.

From July until September, when they moved to Hyattsville, Md., the family never had a complete night's sleep. "Every two hours, we would wake and check the house," Mr. Heffner said.

His wife, Malva, who returned to participate in the march from Selma, reported that after the Sunday battle on the bridge, "a good many troopers wore sheath knives in their belts along with their billy clubs."

She also said that state agencies and businesses give "only lip service" to the Civil Rights legislation.

An account of their tribulations will be published in a book to come out in June.

* * *

THE MEETING was one in a series of "Evenings on the Deep South" sponsored by the Baltimore Friends Joint Social Order Committee. It was presided over by Mrs. Mary Cushing Niles.

Also on the program were Mrs. Flossie Dedmond, Mrs. Flaxie Pinkett of Washington and Gren Whitman, Baltimore NCC staff worker.

School Board faces CORE Dunbar March

At a joint meeting of CORE and SCORE (Student Committee on Racial Equality) Tuesday night, plans were announced for a March on the Board of Education at 25th St.

The march will be held next Thursday, April 8 and will begin at Dunbar High School at 2:45 p.m. The march will dramatize CORE demand that immediate plans be made for a new Dunbar High School.

CORE also voices concern for a new kind of high school and a new kind of educational curriculum for children and youth of the inner city.

The youth to be served and the curriculum that is needed determine the kind of structure that should be built and not the reverse, CORE officials said.

"Given the fact of racial discrimination, given the fact of the inner city and its cultural vacuum and given the fact of an urban technology and an automated society, a new kind of high school is a necessity", CORE stated.

* * *

ROBERT S. CLARK, co-chairman of CORE's Education Committee, pointed out the need to offer basic educational foundations (reading, writing and arithmetic), but in a new way for the senior high level.

"In addition, a functional and practical approach is called for to prepare the students for productive lives in an urban setting," said Mr. Clark.

"CORE is demanding that the basic curriculum be replaced by such a new, comprehensive, ungraded and practical curriculum. CORE is demanding that the per capita allotment for all city schools be increased to make new materials and methods possible."

Goucher to conduct summer institute

A summer Institute for teachers and students of the inner city public schools will be conducted by Goucher College from June 21 through July 30, the AFRO learned this week.

The six week training period, according to Dr. Allan R. Brick, assistant professor of English at Goucher, is being sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education in cooperation with the Baltimore Public Schools.

Attending the institute will be 30 inner-city high school teachers and 20 tenth and eleventh grade students who live in these areas of the city.

The students and teachers to participate, said Dr. Brick, will be selected from five high schools.

* * *

"THE PROGRAM will be two fold," he stated. "The teachers will be introduced to materials and techniques designed to improve their classroom teaching.

"Even more important, the institute is expected to broaden the teachers' awareness of student potential as well as heighten the students' insight into their own problems and possibilities."

Dr. Brick stressed that the program hopes to show "that in spite of so-called 'disadvantages' and poor background" many students from inner-city areas have the kind of talent and drive which makes them highly educable.
