Assembly enacts FEP bill, redistricting, little else

By MAX JOHNSON
AFRO Political Analyst

ANNAPOLIS—"Mr. President, there is no use fooling around any longer. We all know this bill is dead.

"I move we table the bill."

Sen. Frederick C. Malkus Jr. (D. Dorchester) arose in the Senate Tuesday evening to make this statement, as the controversial revolving credit bill finally came up for passage or rejection.

The time was 11:55 p.m., five minutes before the General Assembly's required midnight adjournment.

Sen. Malkus' motion carried by an unmistakably favorable voice vote. The Revolving credit bill was indeed dead.

• • •

THIS WAS TYPICAL, in effect, of this Assembly's action on proposed major legislation it faced, during the now just ended, first annual 70-day session.

Only two pieces of key legislation were enacted. At least five other important measures suffered the fate of the Malkus death knell to limitations on revolving credit interest rates.

The two measures enacted were fair employment practices legislation and congressional redistricting, realigning Maryland's seven districts into eight.

It was far from a pleasant session for Gov. J. Millard Tawes and his legislative program, though he supported the two key bills enacted.

A source close to the governor was heard to comment: "About the best thing that can be said about this Assembly is that it's now over."

• • •

IN THE area of local legislation, the Assembly did pave the way for Baltimore City, Baltimore and Anne Arundel Counties to levy a metropolitan area sales tax

But in the waning hours of the Assembly, several of the lawmakers themselves openly agreed the session had been an unproductive one.

Some in the House took the floor to place the blame on the Senate for "lack of cooperation." The senators ignored the charge.

In addition to revolving credit, here are some of the important measures killed during the session:

• • •

PUBLIC ACCOMMODATIONS — Bills to bring Maryland's law in conformity with the national act were placed before both the House and Senate early in the session by Sen. Verda F. Welcome (D. 4th Balto.) and Del. Clarence M. Mitchell 3rd (D. 4th Balto.)

The House passed its bill last Friday. The Senate's Judicial Proceedings Committee, headed by the aforementioned Sen. Malkus, tacked on weakening amendments.

They were aimed primarily at weakening the authority of the Interracial Commission, which would administer the law.

This so angered Sen. Welcome she termed the amended bill "an insult" on the Senate floor and killed it.

• • •

HOUSING — Senator Welcome and Mr. Mitchell placed identical bills on open occupancy in housing before their respective chambers early in the session.

Neither cleared the Judiciary Committees...

• • •

INTERRACIAL COMMISSION—Sen. Welcome, at the request of the commission, introduced a bill to expand this state agency's board from nine to 15 members, to give more of the counties representation.

The Senate's Judicial Proceedings Committee killed it.

• • •

REAPPORTIONMENT — Several bills on reapportioning the House and Senate representation along the one-man-one-vote Supreme Court decree.

The House finally got one over to the Senate. The Senate ignored it and sent its own to the House, which was promptly amended to correspond with the first House passed bill.

The Assembly ended with this unsettled hassle on this key problem between the two chambers.

BALTIMORE REREGISTRATION—Sen. Joseph V. Mach (D. 2nd Balto.) introduced and pressed through the Senate a bill calling for a general reregistration of all Baltimore voters before next year's elections.

Sen. Welcome stood alone among the city senators in opposing the bill.

However, Del. Murray Abramson (D. 4th Balto.) chairman of Baltimore's House delegation, let the bill die in his committee, by refusing to bring it to the House floor.

Mr. Abramson was under considerable pressure to bring it out, up until the Assembly adjourned.

• • •

BALTIMORE TAX RELIEF—The Assembly refused to give the city authority to levy an income tax of its own on persons employed in the city.

• • •

BAY BRIDGE — Gov. Tawes wanted a second bay bridge to parallel the present span. Some of the assembly leaders wanted a southern span.

Nothing decisively developed.

Such is the record of this General Assembly on some of the more important key issues.

All sorts of local bills were enacted though.

They even passed one to allow dog food to be sold in Anne Arunlel County on Sundays.
