Emmanuel Chambers estate is now worth half-million

STUART OLIVIER — EMMANUEL CHAMBERS

The Emmanuel Chambers Foundation, Inc. announced here Wednesday that the $150,000 estate of the Baltimore Club waiter, Emmanuel Chambers, left at his death in 1945, is now worth more than $600,000.

It was also revealed that Provident Hospital will receive a large sum from the fortune within the next two weeks.

Since 1946, the Chambers Foundation has given Provident a total of $45,000 in varying amounts.

Out of the $205,000 income from the estate over the 19-year period, the trustees of the Foundation told the AFRO, "the money has gone exclusively for the welfare of colored persons."

Among such grants were $75,000 to Johns Hopkins Hospital for assistantships and work with colored patients; $25,500 to Morgan State College and an average of $3,000 a year for scholarships the past eight years.

Also, grants have gone to Franklin Square, South Baltimore General, Lutheran and Children's Hospitals plus a one-year tuition scholarship to Peabody Institute established in 1964.

Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, where Mr. Chambers was a member, received $2,500 in 1945.

Facts about the vast fortune and the career of the waiter as a financial genius were disclosed at the unveiling of his portrait at Johns Hopkins Hospital at 4 p.m. on Wednesday.

The informal reception in the Doctor's Private Dining Room was sponsored by the Hopkins Board of Trustees and the Foundation, composed of noted financiers, who were Mr. Chambers' friends.

J. Crossan Cooper, chairman of the Hopkins board, accepted the portrait done in oil by Mrs. James Carey, noted painter. It will hang beside that of the founder, and reknown philanthropist, Johns Hopkins, in the halls of the Out-Patient Dept.

IN HIS acceptance speech Mr. Crossan stated:

"Through these halls more than 1,000 patients pass every day. But, this is just a small tribute to pay to the remarkable man whose life was dedicated to mankind."

A gold plate on the frame of the portrait reads: "Emmanuel Chambers, 1861 - 1945. Benefactor of Mankind."

HOWEVER, the highlight of the occasion in the magnificent room came before the red velvet curtains were pulled back from the portrait.

Presenting the portrait was Stuart Oliver, local financer, president of the Chambers Foundation, close friends of the waiter 71 years, now an official of the Equitable Trust Co.

Mr. Olivier's speech not only moved the 50 some persons present to tears but also wiped out the myth that Mr. Chambers emmassed his fortune through "stock market tips" of the businessmen he waited on at the Charles St. club.

Turning Mr. Chambers "a high-hearted thoroughbred" and "one of nature's finest and truest gentlemen" Mr. Olivier wept openly as he drew back the velvet, "standing here with tears in my heart and on my memory."

Adding a "fond farewell," he quoted a verse he said he was on a tomb in Athens, Greece: "Thrice blessed he who sleeps the milk-soft sleep of dreams untold."

Mr. Olivier said he first recognied Mr. Chambers as a financial wizard in 1905 when at the Baltimore Club he revealed he had $1,500 to invest in stocks "to be paid for, to lay away and watch them grow."

At the time, Mr. Olivier said, no one had ever heard of anything growing except chickens and babies. "But, now, he added, "We have growth, stocks."

QUOTING other instances of Mr. Chambers' uncanny vision in investment securities, Mr. Olivier told how the waiter purchased U.S. Steel, General Motors, DuPont Powder before 1920 and $100,000 in Liberty "four-and-a-quarter" Bonds during World War I for the defense of his country.

His shining hour, he said, came when in the crash of 1929. Mr. Chambers had a block of stock worth $18,000 he could have easily sold but refused to do so "to save an old friendship" of a man connected with the banking institution in trouble.

Mr. Olivier concluded, "His life speaks for itself. Dedicated to the service of mankind while he lived, his will is just a continuance.

"He had no education, was no bank president nor president of a university but during his life he had a fortune larger than the combined membership of the club members he waited on."

AMONG THOSE present at the reception were Howard H. and James Murphy, sons of the late Dr. George B. Murphy, one of Mr. Chambers' closest friends.

Also, friends and former associates, William Brown, James Penn, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Jones, Gardie Williamson, George Manokey, Mrs. Gertrude Patterson, James Coates, Mrs. Lillian Mann, Mrs. Pearl Mason, Mr. and Mrs. T. Milton Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Burke; Mrs. Alice Williams.

Also, Dr. James Carr, Dr. Martin D. Jenkins, Morgan president; Charles Tildon, director of the Provident Hospital Fund Drive, and the artist, Mrs. James Carey.

Other members of the Chambers Foundation original trustees named in the will are Dr. Henry M. Thomas Jr., McClure Hoover, Elmer H. Hopkins Jr., Gaylord Lee Clark, Sterrett Mason and Elliott H. Worthington.

Study housing

practicing the principles contained in those Ordinances for many years.

"It is difficult to see how the action CORE suggests would help to achieve the goals it seeks. In fact, it would perpetuate bad housing conditions for many low income families which could otherwise be helped to better living in the near futuure through public housing and Urban Renewal."

CORE'S LETTER to the government blamed Council for defeat of the Fair Housing Ordinance.

Asking an immediate reply, it also pointed out the evils of discrimination existing in housing in Baltimore:

That colored citizens are at the mercy of real estate agents;

That rents paid by colored citizens exceed rents paid by whites by $15 to $20;

That no Urban Renewal project involving colored citizens can be successful when large numbers of them are thrown onto the open housing market which is totally inadequate;

That without a Fair Housing law, it is impossible for colored citizens to obtain decent housing in places of their own choosing.

Many whom renewal projects involve moving large numbers of people out of one area into another and CORE maintains relocation cannot be successful when the housing market is restricted.
