A hero comes home

Fisk University President Dr. Stephen J. Wright presided at his own commencement a Monday morning ago then flew from Nashville to Baltimore to receive an honorary degree at Morgan Monday evening.

Over 25 years ago when this writer was a cub reporter, Dr. Wright, was very much in the news here in our area, and a hero in our book.

Reason: He agreed to be a plaintiff in the NAACP suit to equalize teachers' salaries.

AT THAT TIME colored teachers in Maryland received less than white teachers. Unbelievable?

So, long before the Supreme Court spoke out, Stephen Wright, an unassuming Upper Marlboro teacher, had the courage to take the matter to court. (Remember the brilliant NAACP attorney, the late Charles Houswas the lawyer?)

Steve Wright's suit equalized teacher salaries in Maryland and led to other equal education suits here and all over the nation.

BUT, BECAUSE he spoke out against injustice, Steve Wright was fired from his teaching job, and that was the turning point in his life.

He left Maryland, went to New York, won a doctorate degree at NYU, then to Hampton as a professor and dean of faculty; and on to Bluefield as president.

Since 1957, he has been president of Fisk, one of the richest and more respected of o ur institutions of higher learning.

His dismissal by Maryland school authorities 27 years ago catapulted him to become one of the country's distinguished educators, writers and administrators.

He told the Morgan trustee dinner audience he considered himself lucky to have been 'thrown out' of Maryland.

Dr. Wright has been our hero through the years. We told him so at graduation on Monday.

To those of this generation who would hesitate to stand up for right and follow their convictions, this true story of Dr. Stephen Wright should be an inspiration.

More about people, things . . .

Many know Mrs. Hicks as a charter member of Douglas Memorial Church.

For years, Mrs. Hicks lived at 1361 N. Calhoun St. J. Alvin Jones Sr., was among her neighbors. She recalls he was the first altar boy at the age of 5 at St. Catherine Church.

She also remembers the late Daniel Murphy, who was also an altar boy at age 5.

'In those days,' she recalled, 'we used to braid the boys' hair. I helped his Aunt Sue braid Dan's hair.'

All her life, Mrs. Hicks says, she has been fond of children. Her only daughter, Hazel, died several years ago.

Among her adopted foster children — Cornelia Wilson Hutchins, from whom she has not heard in years. Can a reader arrange a reunion?

Another foster adopted daughter — Mrs. Ada K. Jenkins. 'We talk every day,' says Mrs. Hicks.

Gadabouting in Baltimore

Fellowship off to second play gambit

By Lula Jones Garrett

If you haven't picked up your ducats for Fellowship House's presentation of "Lady in the Dark" starring Jane Morgan, on July 6, it's high time you did.

Any number of clubs are extending their season just a little bit longer to form theatre parties (remember last year) to attend the Painters Mill production. So Sabina, there's no use of 'dittoeing' . . . waiting to see who's going only to find that everybody, but everybody is going . . . and then storming the ticket fortress. I can tell you now that all of the lowest price tickets are gone.

Fellowship's interest, of course, is that the tickets be purchased from their workers. They do not get credit for tickets sold at the box office . . . and they do so need the money.

FOR PURE BEAUTY, the whole twenty-odd couples who attended the garden party given by Robbie Chissell and Ellsworth Rhetta, Saturday night, say that is where the blue ribbon should go.

The party, as you know, was a bon voyage for Dr. and Mrs. Albert Laforest, who jaunt off within a few days for a trip around the world.

The affair was held in the beautiful confines of the garden of Dr. and Mrs. Chissell's Powhatan Avenue place which, even on non-party nights, is a spot of delight.

Saturday, however, when they had dried off the elegant furniture from the preceding storm, strung up myriads of lights, set up an outside bar (to say nothing of an inside buffet) it was definitely the Nth!

Jimmie in white linen; Robbie in a print on all the blues; Ellsworth in yellow linen embellished with white lace, set a pretty fashion pace for guests to keep up with. But the guests managed . . . as for instance, Dr. Louise Young Caldwell in that hand flower embroidered linen and matching shoes.

Jimmy was getting all sentimental over that exceptional bon voyage cake, hinting of turning it into a second honeymoon symbol, what with a wedding anniversary coming up.

And ready and willing to encourage her were:

The Charles Cephases, Harold Clarks, Roland Williamses, Emerson Browns, George Lottiers, Charles Parkers Lloyal Randolphs,

The William Harrises, Harold Jennifers, Clarence Malden, Richard Perkinses, Myles Robinsons; Drs. and Mesdames William Garner, Bernard Harris, Royston Scott, George Woodland, Lonnie Green, Nathan Pitts.

Drs. and Mesdames Bruce Alleyne, Charles Campbell, Gilbert Caldwell, Simon Carter, John Chissell; also Dr. Jonas Rapart, Mrs. Edith Smith, Mrs. Helen Odom, Mrs. Tillie Pair.

THE SAME EVENING and at the same time, the Pierians were cocktailing and dining at the Belvedere, honoring the couple that will accompany the Laforests around the world, Dr. and Mrs. I. Bradshaw Higgins; and two other couples, Dr. and Mrs. G. James Fleming who will spend a year in Africa, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lamb who will summer in Hawaii.

A lot of banter about the flower and food laden table, a program interspersed with her own original program presided over by Celonia Walden, chairman; and the surprise of the member voyagers when they were presented gifts, added up to a pleasant evening.

But that was not all . . . after dinner, there were slides shown and running comments by Ethel Wise, who had spent some time in Africa; and the same by Maizie Lucas, who not only had been in Hawaii long enough to garner slides (while studying there) but long enough to learn the Hula . . . which she demonstrated.

Hereabouts were:

The Higginses, the Lambs the Flemings, Dr. Jessie Colston, Ruth Welling, Messrs. and Mesdames James Mebane, Medford Reynolds, Glen Carter, Lester Norris, G. Luther Washington, Ernest Johnson, Dr. and Mrs. Emerson Walden, Edith Smith, Lula Patterson, Mabel Perkins, Mrs. Randolph Edmonds, here from Florida; and Cliff Mackay.

AND THAT WAS a gay party that Dr. and Mrs. James Pair had for their daughter, Myrtle Jackson, ere she left for London, Holland, Belgium and Paris, Saturday.

She will study for six weeks at the Sorbonne, and then go on to Madrid and Lisbon.

The party on Saturday drew friends from several cities, including:

Miss Eva Delsarte, Miss Gretchen Brown and Mrs. Edna Pemberton from New York; Miss Fern Goddett from New Jersey, Desmond Henry from Jamaica, B.W.I. Frank Gordon from Philadelphia, Miss Louise West, Miss Elaine Robinson, Mrs. Marshall Ricks and Miss Theresa Robinson from Washington; and Frank Chichester, Mervin Parker, Drs. Thurston Perebee, William Payton and Edgar Guest; Mrs. Audlyn Williams, Mrs. Andrea
