Stepsitters talk

Another young man, Robert Maxwell, of 2745 E. Preston St., sitting beside Mr. Jones, told the AFRO:

"It's sort' a hard keeping cool while I'm working. But when I come home I generally come around here with my friends and we discuss 'Peyton Place'."

THINKING Mr. Maxwell referred to the TV serial, the reporter ventured, "Oh! you like to watch that, too?"

"Sure! But I wasn't talking about that 'Peyton Place'. We have our own 'Peyton Place' right here in real life," he said.

"The people I see while sitting on the steps I try to fit into various TV characters. Some of them do real well" PASSING Lafayette Square, a group of men, sitting and standing beneath a shady tree "attracted the AFRO team.

"What do you think George Wallace was trying to get over when he came up here. He was saying no matter how sophisticated we are, we still don't worship any more to him than to clean the mud off his boots," declared the speaker hotly as we approached.

Another man, sounding like a Black Muslim, spoke up quickly:

"The white devils have had their day of glory, so to speak. The black men all were the face of the earth are rising up in revolt against them."

"Hold it man, listen here, nothing will ever be gained by hating our white brothers. The Holy Bible says. . ." chided the speaker.

A man who was not directly involved in the conversation cut him off to answer the AFRO query about keeping cool.

HE WAS George Stevenson, of 62 N. Carey St.

"This square is about the coolest place I know. I'm retired see, and come here in the morning and stay all day," Mr. Stevenson said.

Asked what was usually discussed during his stay in the square, he replied:

"We discuss everything from religion to politics."

Asked what is a comedy relating the so-called "Negro" problem to be the important issues of our day, he said "Going to the moon, civil rights, and Vietnam."

Most of the men we talked with agreed that sitting under the shade tree provided cool resort for hot days and the most pressing issues of the day were Vietnam, going to the moon and civil rights in their order.

HOWEVER, on the matter of keeping cool, Frederick R. El, 3428 Mondawmin Ave., said "Keeping cool is a psycological thing. If you think cool, you'll be cool."

Amos Gaskins, 1924 Etting St., contended that the best way to keep cool is by taking "plenty of cold drinks, such as beer, ice tea and water."

Our own answer to this question about keeping cool was to get back to the air conditioned AFRO office, which we did.

preliminary hearing Thursday for the husband, Earl Johnson, and ordered him held in $10,000 bail. The hearing is set for Aug. 2.

The serviceman is facing three counts - assault with intent to murder, firing a gun in the city, and disorderly conduct.

Patrolmen Joseph DiPaolo and John Wisnewski reported they found Mrs. Johnson sprawled on the living room floor when they answered a call to the Carlisle Ave. address, shortly after midnight Wednesday.

MR. JOHNSON was arrested at the scene, the officers reported, and the 22 - caliber pistol allegedly used in the shooting was recovered from the bedroom.

While searching for a motive to the midnight shooting, investigators reported they were told that it was caused by "another man."

and operates a grocery store in the same neighborhood.

Both Mrs. King and Mr. Laker were charged with depositing or causing to be deposited trash and debris in a vacant lot adjoining Mrs. King's home.

A police sanitation officer told the court that after receiving a complaint of the trash and debris he questioned both defendants, and both admitted having put the trash on the property.

He said Mrs. King stated that after collecting the debris from her neighborhood she placed it on the lot in a neat pile and called the sanitation department to have it removed.

Mr. Laker stated he saw the trash on the lot and just placed his on top of pile.

"YOUR HONOR, I have been taking care of that lot for eight years free, as the owner of the property, Mr. Smith," Mrs. King testified.

She further informed the court that she was also participating in a neighborhood clean block project.

"I called the sanitation department two weeks in advance before I even collected the trash. The man said pile it up and they would come and clear it away," Mrs. King stated.

"You're working with a clean block project? And the trash has now been cleared away? Well, under these circumstances I'll dismiss the charges," said Judge Blum.

This was in contrast to the case last Tuesday of James Scott, of the 1400 block Parrish St., who was jailed, given probation without a verdict and ordered to pay $4 court costs on the same charges.

Mr. Scott left the court dismayed and bewildered. He had been cleaning the street and alleys of his neighborhood for 25 years and frequently piled trash and debris for the sanitation department to clean away.

It is a violation to place trash in the streets.

AN AFRO reader after learning of Mr. Scott's case, in a letter to the editor said she too was guilty of sweeping her street then calling the sanitation department to have it removed.

She further pointed out that there was a fire near her home and the firefighters piled burnt debris in the gutter outside of the home where it stayed for two weeks.

Another caller to the AFRO felt that if a citizen has enough interest in the cleanliness of his community to get out and clean it up the Sanitation Department should have enough interest . . . "to cart it away."
