'Colts better than Browns, West best in NFL'—Lyles

LOUISVILLE, Ky., (UPI)—East is East and West is West and when they met last year the East won. But that doesn't impress Lenny Lyles of the Baltimore Colts.

Lyles, a defensive halfback with the Western Division champions of the National Football League, still feels that the West is the stronger of the two loops.

THERE was much talk last season of the superiority of the West and the higher caliber of its players.

Then came that championship game with Cleveland's Browns clobbering the Colts, 27-0. Adding insult to injury, the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Green Bay Packers in the Runner-up Bowl.

"TAKING everything into consideration," Lyles said, "I still feel the West is much tougher. In the East two teams have dominated the league —Cleveland and New York. In the West three teams —Green Bay, Chicago and Baltimore have won in the past three years."

As for the championship debacle, Lyles simply shrugged and said, "We made a lot of mistakes and anytime you make mistakes you are going to get beat."

• • •

LYLES still feels the Colts were a better team "but not on that day. The only thing that counts is what's on that scoreboard at the end of the game."

The former University of Louisville star also feels the colts will repeat this year, despite the loss of all-pro defensive end Gino Marchetti and middle linebacker Bill Pellington. Both have retired.

• • •

LYLES has had his ups and downs in the pros, first coming to the Colts as an offensive back. He went to San Francisco where he specialized in punt and kick-off returns and began learning the chores of a defensive halfback. He returned to Baltimore in 1963 and came into his own as a topflight defensive halfback last year.

His ability to "search" a receiver after he has caught the ball —sometimes causing a fumble — has made several opponents downright angry. Both Gail Cogdill of the Detroit Lions, and Ron Kramer of the Packers, had to be restrained on two occasions last season as they went after Lyles.

BUT LENNY believes you have to play it tight.

"It's tough," he said. "In pro ball you don't have any breathers. There aren't any easy men to cover."

And as an afterthough, he said, "I'm telling you it's really mean out there."
