Jones 'sleeper' KO's McBride

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Doug Jones of New York, who has his eye on a title fight with heavyweight champion Cassius Clay, stopped a telling body attack by Archie McBride of Trenton, N.J., Tuesday night with an out - of - the - blue knockout punch in the fifth round.

The veteran McBride had been hammering away at Jones' trunk and had what appeared to be a slight lead in points on his boxing ability after nearly three rounds of fighting.

BUT JONES tagged him on the jaw with a short right-hand chop and referee Cy Gottfried counted the New Jersey fighter out at 2:55 of the fifth.

There were no other knockdowns in the Miami Beach auditorium bout.

WEEKLY TOUCH — Cleveland Browns fullback Jim Brown is reminded by wife Sue not to forget the earmuffs when it was learned that the Cleveland eleven will have to go to the cold climes of Green Bay for the National Football League championship game Sunday. The Packers won their way into the playoff by taking a 13 - 10 extra-period decision from the Baltimore Colts at Green Bay last Sunday.

Williams picks Browns; Davis Packers, naturally

Special to the AFRO

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Sidney Williams predicts that the Cleveland Browns will win Sunday's National Football League playoff with the Green Bay Packers.

Willie Davis foresees a victory for the Packers over the Browns in the same game.

For the not - so - well - informed, Williams and Davis are professional football players. Williams is a linebacker ace for the Browns and Davis the defensive captain and star end of the Packers.

Their prophecies come naturally.

"THE CLAIM is that they play tougher football in the Western Conference," said Williams, a product of predominantly - tan Southern University. "We in the Eastern Conference have lived with it a long time.

"Maybe it would be good to remember they said the same thing last year —until the (Baltimore) Colts learned different.

"THE BROWNS are aware THAT Jim Taylor and Paul Hornung are rugged guys who are hard to stop. They are an asset for a strong ground game. But we played clubs with some pretty hard runners and came out all right.

"They don't hit any harder than Minnesota's Bill Brown and Tommy Mason, or New York's Tucker Frederickson, Philadelphia's Earl Gros or Pittsburgh's John Henry Johnson.

"AS FOR their speed, I doubt that anyone who has tangled with guys like Bob Hayes, Homer Jones, Sonny Randall and Bobby Mitchell and contained them, has any reason to fear Green Bay's quick boys.

"Of course, what i've had to say pertains solely to our defensive job. With Jim Brown on our side and a healthy Frank Ryan at quarterback, I see no need to resort to hypo our offense. I think we'll win and put to rest for good, this talk about the weaker Eastern Conference."

"WE FIGURE to be hurting a little, but that won't stop us from taking the Browns," asserted Davis, the all - pro graduate of football as it is played at Grambling.

"There's one thing you can be certain about, and that is we won't make the same mistake the Colts made last year. The Packers aren't going to let the Browns set the game pattern if there's any way it can be helped.

"CLEVELAND HAS a fine ball club. It is versatile, despite the fact that Jim (Brown) gets most of the attention. We don't plan to forget that they can throw the ball, too. That happened to Baltimore.

"I think we showed against the Colts last Sunday that we have the ability to adjust on the field. Every time we played them before the playoff, the Colts were a passing team. Sunday, they came up running and, after a little early trouble, we adjusted and stopped them.

"Enough to win, anyway. That's what we intend to do Sunday —to win."

THE TITULAR game was declared a sellout within 24 hours after the Packers were declared division champs.

This means that 50,852 fans will watch it live along with millions on television. In fact, the Packers were "oversubscribed," and they were working on a plan to make as many season ticket holders as possible "happy."

Gov. Warren Knowles proclaimed this city "the football capital of the world" and invited Ohio Gov. James in succeeding Sen. Saltonstall.

The senator himself named Mr. Brooke and these possible candidates:

Gov. John A. Volpe; Lt. Gov. Elliot Richardson; and four Massachusetts congressmen, Reps. William F. Bates, F. Bradford Morse, Silvio O. Conte and Hastings Keith.

MR. BROOKE, however, has demonstrated tremendous vote - attracting ability.

In winning a second successive term as attorney general last year, he swept all 350 towns and cities in his state by a 2-1 majority.

He won in that Democratic state, though the GOP presidential candidate, Barry M. Goldwater, whom he refused to support, lost there.

Since that overwhelming victory, Mr. Brooke has been projected on the national scene as a strong voice in the Republican Party.

He won his first term in Nov., 1962 with over 1,100,000 votes, and by a huge plurality of 259,000 votes. At the time, he was the only Republican to win state - wide office.

A native of Washington, he is a graduate of Howard University and Boston University's Law School.

MEANWHILE, Ray C. Bliss, GOP national chairman, has announced plans to launch a four - year program to strengthen his party in big cities which traditionally are Democratic strongholds.

The first phase of this project will be initiated when a meeting in Washington Jan. 24 and 25 of GOP chairmen from 17 key cities in Baltimore will be represented at this meeting by Walter E. Black, GOP city chairman in Washington, by Carl Shipley D.C. chairman.

—Integration

even, token representation on the wartime staffs of the State's military organizations seems incompatible with the Pentagon policy which has fully integrated our fighting forces in Vietnam and other world trouble spots.

UNDER the re - organization plan announced by Defense Secretary Robert M. McNamara, the Maryland Guard soon will begin to absorb many of the Army Reserve units in the State.

This added responsibility within the defense system of the nation is expected to call for a closer adherence to national policy on enlistments and promotions within the beefed - up guard.

Brig. Gen. Henry C. Stanwood, the man who has headed the State Selective Service since its inception some 25 years ago, confirmed that his military staff is now, and always has been white.

He denied that an opening on that staff exists, adding that he does not expect one to open up within the near future.

"I am the director of the State Selective Service," he said, "and I ought to know what I need."

The change in the National Guard command here will probably be announced this weekend. It is an almost certainty that Brig. Gen. George M. Gelston will take charge of the state's armed forces, replacing Lt. Gen. Milton A. Reckord who is resigning.

Native businessmen making African independence real

By GIM OKOH

WASHINGTON — Africa is awake with pride in states and self - government and black businessmen have emerged too, asking more of a reality.

University training does not mean much to African businessmen, although many are Sophisticated in trade and finance. They were versed in their craft and independent before the advent of foreign rule.

PERHAPS SULEMANI Serwanga of Uganda, often described as "king" of African businessmen, is the best known millionaire in Africa.

Serwanga is 65 and lind. Born in a small village in Buleme zi, Uganda, Serwanga begin as an Asian cotton trader.

He saved his money and in 1929, he bought an old lorry came a store worker employed brother.

business with his younger as they liked.

IT WAS a business of little profit, at first, for there was no fixed fare for a particular journey and passengers paid what they liked.

Still, by 1953, the brothers had acquired three buses, and the colonial government enacted a law stipulating that a passenger should be charged 5 cents a mile.

The business was checked in 1955 when the government took control of the country's communications, and Serwanga's company was ordered not to operate in Kampala, but in the villages only.

addition, a good number of cars and trucks for special transport purposes.

A FORMER president of the Cameroon Assembly, Paul Soppo Priso, resigned from the French Parliament to give business.

more time to his expanding An educated farmer, Priso saved sufficient money to invested in buildings leased to commercial houses and foreign embassies.

Priso's company grew so much that he decided to quit politics before the country's independence in 1960.

Priso now owns a general hospital in Yaounde which employs ten doctors and about 100 nurses, more than 100 commercial buildings in Duala and Yaounde, a brewery for brewing "Capsso" (cofee and soda) which employs over 2,000 skilled and unskilled workers, and a technical colege which prepares undergraduates in carpentry, mechanical engineering and bricklaying.

Mustapha then began to buy it to other parts of the country, and retail it to the natives. Later the company African Commerce Limited of joined hands with the United Sierra Leone in, importation and exportation of rice.

Today, Mustapha Brothers is believed to be the richest native - company in Sierra Leone.

KUNGU KARUMBA of Kenya, 65, started his transport business with one - tone lorry, carrying local tradesmen from their homes to various commercial towns in Kenya. President Kenyatta in 1952, he joined hands with a German firm, Mercedes - Benz.

Karumba is now reputed to own over 90,000 pounds [illegible] of modern buses that run in most areas of Kenya.

NOWHERE IS the new African businessman doing better than in Nigeria. The number of Nigerian millionaires is growing almost faster than the country itself.

Chief Matthias Nwafor Ugochukwu, formerly of the Nigerian Police, is regarded today as one of the greatest Nigerian businessmen.

Chief Ugochukwu won 50,000 pound on an Irish Sweepstakes ticket in 1950, and put the money into transport. He later changed to motor parts and tires.

He is now the chairman of the Nigerian Industrial Development Bank, a member of the board of directors of Commont Bank, director of Nigeria, and owner and director of Ugochukwu and Sons.

Fed registrars in three Miss. counties open daily

Federal voting examiner offices in three Mississippi counties, normally open for business only on the third Saturday of each month, temporarily resumed daily operations.

In announcing the change, the Civil Service Commission said the examiner offices in Clay, Leflore, and Madison Counties, Miss., resumed daily operations on Dec. 23 and will continue that schedule through Jan. 8.

The CSC explained that operations in the three offices were limited to the third Saturday of each month because the number of applications for listing had declined sharply.

The agency said the decision to place the offices on a full schedule temporarily was made after consultation with the Justice Department and "in consideration of anticipated increases in voter listing applications resulting from voter registration drives during the next two weeks."

THEY WILL be open for listing from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday, except during the New Year's holidays on Dec. 31 and Jan. 1.

The Clay County office is located in the Post Office Building at West Point; Madison County office at 285 Peace Street in Canton; and Leflore County office in the Post Office Building in Greenwood.

TO DATE, the Clay office has listed 858 voters, Madison has listed 5,108 and Leflore has listed 5,318.

The three locations are among 6 counties in four Southern States in which the Civil Service Commission has established voting examiner offices. Under the 1965 voting Rights Act, CSC is charged with the listing of eligible voters without regard to race or color in counties designated by the Attorney General.

The counties involved are those in which tests or devices have been maintained and in which less than 50 per cent of those eligible to vote were registered or had cast ballots in Nov. 1964.

Since President Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act last August, the examiners have listed 80,013 persons—78,355 of them non-white—as eligible to vote.

Agency files 12 complaints of job bias

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission filed 12 complaints Tuesday charging racial discrimination by 11 employers and a union in six states, including California.

The complaints, the first filed by the commission itself, involved allegations of discrimination in Missouri, Louisiana, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

One complaint in Missouri and two in California were referred to state fair employment practice agencies under provisions of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

A SPOKESMAN for the federal commission said names of the firms and the union accused of denying equal rights to colored persons, Mexican American and American Indian workers could not be revealed under the Civil Rights Act.

State officials to whom the three cases were referred have 60 days in which to take action before the cases are returned to the federal commission.

Under the Civil Rights Act, a federal mediator seeks to negotiate a satisfactory agreement between the complainant and any firm charged with discrimination. Failure to reach agreement would send the case to a federal court.

A COMMISSION spokesman said more than 3,000 complaints have been filed so far in 40 states by individuals and organizations, but that the 12 complaints filed Tuesday were the first filed by the commission itself.

The commission is empowered to file complaints when there appears to be a danger of reprisal against individuals making complaints or when it appears that a pattern of discrimination exists.

American kids fitter now than 7 years ago

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American school children aren't the softies they were a few years ago.

Compared to the youth of 1958, a 12-year-old boy now can throw a softball 10 feet farther and is better at sit-ups, the broad jump and the 50-yard dash. Girls are more fit too.

These were conclusions of a University of Michigan study financed through a grant from the U.S. Office of Education. Results were announced last week.

TESTING SCHOOL children for physical fitness was first begun after a study showed that European youngsters did better than Americans on fitness tests. U.S. children were tested in 1958.

CONCORD, N.C. — The 36 participants in a science and mathematics workshop heard Dr. Ralph J. Bean of the University of Tennessee Mathematics department discuss arithmetic and counting through the set theory. Other general session speakers included Dr. Lionel H. Newsom, Barber - Scotia College president; David Boger, B-S assistant professor of chemistry and physics; and Charles Aldrich, chairman of the mathematics and science department of the western district of the NCTA.

Since then, American kids have improved.

For instance, a 12 - year - old can do three pull - ups instead of two, 50 sit-ups instead of 31, run the 50-yard dash in 7.8 seconds instead of 8, and throw a softball 120 feet instead of 110.

Dr. Paul A. Hunsicker, professor of education at Michigan, cited increasing emphasis on physical education in elementary schools as a reason for the improvement. Yearly half the states have strengthened physical education requirements in schools.
