upon a police cruising car.

In the meantime, discovering the escape, the two assailants fled the house.

One of them, James Reid, ran into a patrol car in the 2000 block of Ashland St. and was detained by the police.

At this point in time, the police were somewhat uncertain about his accomplice. The victims were too upset, testimony indicated, to be of much help until later in the day.

The mother stated that approximately eight hours after the attack, she was visited by Henry Reid and a cousin.

It was at that point that she realized who the other man had been.

SHE TOLD Judge Sklar that she had met Henry Reid on a number of previous occasions and that when he came to her house that August morning with his cousin, she recognized him by his voice as having been one of the attackers.

By coincidence, while the other Reid was still in her house, a patrolman came to the door. After a brief conversation with the woman, the police took the "guest" into custody.

The defense raised the issues of mistaken identity and alibi; but Judge Sklar, after a lengthy summary of the evidence, found both men guilty of burglary and James Reid guilty of rape of the mother and of attempted rape on the daughter.

His brother Henry was also convicted of attempted rape on the woman but innocent on the charge of attempted rape on the daughter.

Sentence has been deferred pending motions for new trials.

mother know what was up.

Suddenly, the nice gentlemen turned into mean old men and ran right by her mother and her house, through the alley by the house —and disappeared.

Yes, the varmints vanished with the bird - in the-bush and also the bird - in - hand (Mrs. Thomas' $70).

Enter now what might prove to be a hero. A 13-year - old youth in the area - Gregory Oliver, was curious about a man he saw running through the alley.

Like any young boy who would like to be another Sgt. Watkins, or Sgt. Burke, or Capt. Mello, or Sgt. Roy, or so many others who have set great examples of police careers — this young'un took to following the man.

—east in the alley, north on Rosedale, west on Pressman, then, a - ha — to where the varmint got into a car.

SO—THE young detective, who had already noted enough of the man's appearance to describe him to police, made note of the car and the license number.

Western District police say it's a matter of time. The two gentlemen are invited to walk into the station house and give themselves up.

Why make it tough? You just can't win when you have alert citizens who are curious about people running through alleys and are willing to cooperate with police.

AND PLEASE, Dear Citizens, don't enter into the spirit of the flim flam — Christmas season or not — and you won't have to feel foolish after.

No matter what kind of new twist is given, the flim flam artist always ends up with the same old story — how much money do you have, or how much can you get (well get it) and of course give it to me to hold while we get this straightened out.

Why let someone else hold your money? Doesn't make sense.
