Laundry firms sue Local 195 workers

A civil suit in the US District Court involves Local 195, AFL-CIO Laundry and Dry Cleaning International Union and its president Cleveland Harris.

Complainants who filed the civil action on Dec. 21 were agents for the Bugle Coat, Apron and Linen Service, Inc., Oliver and Chester Sts., and Industrial Laundry Corp. also at Oliver and Chester Sts.

They state that union employees wrongfully refused to complete the night shift on Dec. 4 and Dec. 11 1965 and ask the court to award them damage.

The persons who left work at 8 p.m. those nights, the companies claim, violated the union contract and caused them to have to farm out the work left undone at great expense.

The sum for damages would include attorneys fees and other costs of the action in court.

* * *

HOWEVER, ON Jan. 5, Tucker R. Dearing, attorney for the union and Mr. Harris, filed in an answer giving reasons why no damages should be awarded.

Mr. Dearing states in the union's counterclaim, that the contract does not require that employees work 8 p.m. on Saturday nights to make up the agreed 40 hours week.

He states that the complaint caused the employees grevious injuries by loss of wages and that the union itself has suffered monetary damages and has been hampered in organizing employees in other plants by this action.

Mr. Dearing emphasized that a condition, precedent to the signing and ratification of the company-union contract, provide (1)—that the night shift work force on Saturdays would be scheduled, so that all employees would be out of the plants by 8 p.m. and (2) — that work scheduled would be arranged to guarantee each employee a minimum of 40 hours a week.

He further states that, despite protests of the Union, the firms have continued to violate the contract by requiring employees to work until 11:30 p.m. Saturdays.

The date for the hearing has not been set.

Housewife beats SS deadline

DEBUT TONIGHT — Sammy Davis Jr., revolutionizes TV format tonight (Friday) when he debuts on NBC with his own "Sammy Davis Show." First tan entertainer to head a nationally-televised hour, the versatile Davis will have Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Nancy Wilson, Cornbed Monica and the Will Mastin Trio visiting as guests. Channel 11 at 8:30.

A charming East Baltimore housewife who carries a picture of the family of the late President John F. Kennedy and the torn corner of a $10 bill for "luck had just that Wednesday.

Mrs. Mable B. Cornish, 2606 E. Oliver St., gave this reaction Wednesday to her good fortune while collecting her $50 Social Security Contest check:

"I was screaming so loudly they (her family) thought I was going crazy."

The screams of happiness were triggered by the Tuesdays edition of the AFRO which carrried 217 - 10 - 8525 as the top prize-wining Social Security Number.

Mrs. Cornish's good luck charms had a brilliant sense of timing, too. The contest closes tomorrow (Saturday) when the last numbers for this segment of the game appear.

Particularly gratifying too is the fact that the winnings came just in time for medical bills, Mrs. Cornish said. One or her four daughters, Miss Helen F. Cornish became ill last week and is an out patient at the hospital.

Other daughters are Mrs. Christine Stanley, 453 High St., Cambridge, and Miss Marie Cornish, a Montgomery Ward Clerk, and Miss Brenda Cornish, a seventh grader at Herring Run Junior High.

Her husband, William A. a steelworker and the family attends Christ Methodist Church.

This is her first time at winning in any contest. Mrs. Cornish said, but she felt she was about due when the SS Game started so Mrs. Cornish sent in "several coupons bearing her number.

TEN DOLLAR winners in the second to last day of the giant money give-away contest were:

Mrs. Sallie M. Stratton, 1308 Argyle Ave. and Mrs. Ella Bailey, 1300 Holbrook St. They collected on 238-16-1363 and 218-18-0448, respectively.

Mrs. Stratton a widow, has one regret:

"I'm sorry its not enough to pay for all those repairs BURHA (Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency) ordered. But itll help, she said.

Mrs. Bailey, a newcomer to the city said "I'm so thrilled I don't know what to do."

—CORE lashes

CORE leader community ideas of W.E.B. DuBois, the world famous sociologist, who in his nineties gave up his U.S. Citizenship for that of Ghana, where he died a few years ago.

"I used to believe the great DuBois when he said that the educated 10 per cent of us would lead the rest out of their misery," Mr. Carter said.

"But then Professor Frank in E. Frazier wrote the Black Bourgeoise and he said that kind of thinking was not right.

"I am beginning to believe Frazier," Mr. Carter declared.

An indication of this change of thinking is cropping up in the local CORE chapter which is determined to go all out to organize the masses in the city's ghetto.

In addition, CORE is opening up its ranks to "everyone who wants to be free." This, it is believed by the organization's spokemen, will give their group the "militant transformation' needs" to do battle with the oppressor."

By everyone, CORE means even those who do not hold as firmly to "non-violence as do those who are already with us.'

* * *

STREET RALLIES are in the planning; so are a number of additional local centers CORE, in short, is going political.

"We don't think that we can break down the ghetto," Mr. Carter said, "but we will clean it up and we are going to boycott all exploiting real-estate interests.

This year, he promised, the City and State will see a major crisis in employment, education, housing—in all areas where democracy has yet to materialize.

According to CORE, "the school system must be turned upside down to make it right side up."

For too long, the group charged the local school system has been planned for the middle class child, "not for our children whose needs are great and different and must be attended to."

THESE SPOKESMEN do not look to the "official agencies" like the Maryland Interracial Commission or the agencies under the Washington anti-poverty program as organizations capable of solving the problems of segregation and poverty.

"Take the CAA (Community Action Agency)" said then said "It's controlled by the City Council and as by the City Council and as far as we are concerned, there is but a shade of difference between our City Council and the White Citizens' Council."

Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin was not spared either. He was accused of "dealing with two-headed monsters of handing out school building contracts to firms which made much of their profits from segregated housing.

"They blamed the Mayor for "the lily white Zoning Board" and said that they were tired of having building inspectors showing up "after the baby has been burned to death because of a faulty electrical system."

The planned community centers will insure that "the offenses of slum lords and other exploiters will be known to all.

CORE ALSO promised to keep a close eye on the local poverty program and on "all future appointments to state and city posts."

All in all, CORE, whose record of militancy is well known, promises to be even more militant in the days to come. Before they give up their current philosophy of non-violence they want to give it another try.

"Deal with us," they seem to be saying," or call Guard."

It is not a threat, they say, nothing more than a prophecy.

Join Fellowship House for exciting winter program

The after-Christmas down season that lasts until Easter need not get you down. No Baltimorean needs to have the blues if he can not fly South to escape dullness here.

Fellowship House, 3200 N. Hilton St., offers an exciting, fascinating program of, up, children, families of all races and faiths and ages broad hundreds of grown-ups will find long winter evenings and week - ends can be fun.

The 1966 search for new members is on now.

If it's people you want to meet (and who doesn't need people?) you'll find all races and ages at Fellowship House, doing just what you'd like to do —learning more about each other, how they live and work.

According to Miss Ruth Fegley, the dynamic director who resides at Fellowship House and directs the full program, reaching out to people to help them gain understanding is the main purpose of the organization.

A friendly hand is extended to all, to entire organizations, at a small yearly cost of $25 (or more); to whole families, at $10 for the year; to teenagers at $2.50; to regular adult members, at $5.

So vast is the program, it is almost impossible to outline, but it's certain you'll find what you like and have the time of your life.

Mail in membership fees to Fellowship House, 3100 N. Hilton, Baltimore, Md. 21216 and you'll receive a membership card at once.

Or, just stop by or phone. All contributions are tax deductivle. And, Fellowship House needs you.

* * *

EXACTLY WHAT is the Fellowship House program? Generally, it is a training house where people gather to learn to get along together.

The process is not a rigid, class - room ordeal but takes place during hobby sessions, book discussions, get - acquainted gatherings, religious holiday observances, dinner parties, luncheons, activities for children.

Persons who have undergone the almost miraculous experience like to speak of Fellowship House as a peaceful haven where you go to talk, when you need to talk with someone for deeper understanding of the world and any of its problems.

Regardless of background, beliefs, station in life, all persons are recognized as individuals.

Through programs and projects, all ideals are demonstrated.

As Fellowship's credo and pledge states, "In an era of increased awareness to the need freasing tensions between groups, it is essential that we learn to live together."

* * *

FELLOWSHIP HOUSE in the role of service has several outstanding, noteworthy projects. Towever, the one flourishing now is the Tutorial Project.

Over 60 students from several Baltimore high schools serve as tutors for elementary school children who need help in specific subjects.

They come each week: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons. Under the direction of Mrs. Mary Taylor, they receive aid even in remedial reading.

Any teenager who wishes to apply may become a tutor. All children who need the service are welcome.

To tell about this program (and the many other services of Fellowship House) Miss Fegley makes frequent speaking engagements at schools, clubs, churchs, public gatherings in all areas of the state and this section of the country.

This time of year, the Fellowship House Legislative Action Group is geared to distribute literature, hold discussions, conferences, inform members and the community. As a center for meetings, evenings buzz groups, either pro or con legwith assemblies of varied islation before the state, city or county government.

Human Rights organizations find Fellowship House a good place to go for quiet gatherings, discussion, planning.

Teenage Interracial - Interfaith home visiting is one of the many interesting projects that branches off human rights.

Likewise, neighborhood organizations come into at together for a look at the housing picture in the city, to see what can be done, to find new ways of overcome the racial complications.

Participation in the campaign for open occupancy in Baltimore involves, at this time, the mimeographing of letters, information circulars, printing of the essentials and details for the Fair Housing Ordinance due to come before the City Council Jan. 13.

One valuable leaflet available at Fellowship House is the condensed sheet prepared by Baltimore Neighbors, Inc.

The appealing manner in which Fellowship House accomplishes its goal was in the November, 1965 program, "How to Dress a Demonstrator Delightfully."

Rummage Sales to raise money are also enjoyable, as serious work becomes fun.
