Balto. lawmakers to get 1st police bills Monday

AFRO Annapolis Bureau

ANNAPOLIS — Baltimore's General Assembly delegation is scheduled to receive Monday for initial consideration the first bills designed to revamp the city's Police Department.

This will be the first phase of proposed legislative action necessary to follow recommendations in a recent report on grinding the effectiveness of the department by the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

The bills, in preliminary form, will deal with whether city residency is required of the new police commissioner and specifics for qualifications, all subject to amendments and final decision by the delegation.

Thomas B. Finan, attorney general, and Robert C. Murphy, his deputy, appeared before the city delegation Wednesday afternoon to advise their staff would prepare the bills.

Actually, Messrs. Finan and Murphy came to brief the delegation on the IACP report to get recommendations on what legislative steps were desirable.

* * *

ONLY THE six sessions in the 45 - member delegation had received copies of the report, however, so little of substance could be accomplished other than decision to start with what do do about a new police commissioner.

Commissioner Bernard J. Schmidt and Chief Inspector George J. Murphy, second in command, are scheduled to retire Feb. 3.

Mr. Finan suggested the delegation might well want to think in terms of an interim appointment to fill out the commissioner's unexpired term until next year, should other recommendations of the IACP report be found desirable.

This report advised three commissioners, three deputy commissioners and 12 directors as administrative heads.

Mr. Finan, however, urged quick action, "so that the Police Department of a city of a million people wouldn't be headless for any extended time."

HE POINTED out that an omnibus bill, covering other changes necessary through legislation, could come later.

Still other recommended changes adopted could be effected, he said, by administrative processes without need of legislation.

All depends on the desires of the city delegation, something its members are not clear on at the moment.

For example, Sen. Paul A. Dorf (5th D.) wanted to know:

"Why are we in this present condition, when this condition has existed over a period of years? Many are still questioning why this report, the background of the men (IACP investigators). Why this aftermath to fill a vacancy?"

* * *

AFTER Mr. Finan had explained the IACP came with the highest recommendation for the survey, and that none had been conducted of the Police Department in 25 years, Murray Abramson (4th D.), chairman of the city House delegation, gave this answer:

"Maybe we are all at fault. Maybe it's your fault and my fault for we saw a lot of things and done nothing about them."

Sen. Dorf interrupted to say loudly: "Speak for yourself, I've had no connection with the Police Department. Don't blame me."

Mr. Abramson continued, stating it was necessary that the delegation study the report and prepare to move with all possible dispatch.

Having said that, he asked for a motion for adjournment and got several at once.

THE ASSEMBLY opened Wednesday with a state of the the state message by Gov. Tawes, which was hailed by his fellow Democrats, and criticized by Republican members who want to know where the money is coming.

As of Thursday afternoon, 63 bills and 12 resolutions had been introduced in the Senate, 71 bills and 5 resolutions came from for his lavish program.

Wednesday afternoon the opening day of this 70 - day Assembly session, Gov. Tawes told a joint gathering of the Senate and House their ai hshould be securing for the people "the fruits of our great and abundant society."

He said he was paving the way with the largest budget in state history full of improvement of mine increased benefits and advantages for all — yet, without tax increase.

Here is how the governor painted the picture in his state of the state message:

"But financial soundness the state is, and has been, a most of you know.

"But financial soundness must be matched by a vigorous and healthy social and economic climate in which people of Maryland may earn a living, raise their families and enjoy all the advantages trat are possible for them to have in an affluent society.

"This means that if they are to enjoy to the fullest life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness they must have good schools, good hospitals, good roads, plenty of recreational facilities and the many other services that government can provide."

THIS WAS Gov. Tawes' closest approach to mention of needed further civil rights legislation to insure all citizens equal enjoyment of "our great and abundant society."

Such proposed legislation, however, including tighter public accommodations and fair housing bills, are under preparation for introduction at this session.

In unveiling his whopping $883,046,701 budget, the governor said he saw it as a healthy sign, reflecting the growth of the state.

Essential services of health, education and welfare accounted, he said, for most of the increased expenditures.

Noting the general fund increase of $60,335,600 he has recommended, the governor cited these major allotments:

A total of 37.9 percent is earmarked for education and related purposes, 21.5 percent for health, hospitals and mental hygiene, and 12.7 percent for public welfare, training schools and camps.

Provisions for Medicare are also made in the budget, he revealed.

* * *

ON THE point of the controversial Cooper — Hughes plan for financial aid for Baltimore and needy political subdivisions, the governor said emphatically:

"Just recently I stated as clearly as I knew how that I was not opposed to the objectives of the Cooper — Hughes plan, but that I would insist on any modifications that were necessary to protect the state's revenue position."

Earlier, he had been quoted as saying he would oppose the plan because it provided no additional state revenues.

The governor touched in some detail on increased funds for education, public welfare, parks and recreation, traffic safety, highways, drunken drivers with a recommendation for revocation of licenses of those who refused to submit to chemical tests — and the urging of tighter controls over sale of firearms.

* * *

HE NOTED that the budget contains plans for the state's first comprehensive community health center, to be located adjacent to the Medical School of the University of Maryland in Baltimore.

Also, that funds are provided for a day hospital in Baltimore County; first phase of construction for a $4,000,000, 530 - bed hospital in the Washington area for the mentally retarded, and $497,800 for a 60 - bed hospital for the severely retarded at Rosewood.

The governor also asked legislation to put a second Bay Bridge alongside the present one.

It was a 34 - minute address, which the governor began thusly:

"As one lame duck to another, and you are looking at an honest to goodness lame duck."

He had limped in on a cane, having hurt his ankle a few nights before at an affair in Baltimore, when a portion of the speakers' platform collapsed.

After warning the Assembly members they must get along with congressional redistricting or face the possibility of the courts doing it for them, Gov. Tawes urged that they so conduct affairs:

"This last year of our stewardship will be our finest year."

There was polite, respectable applause wren he ended.
