Gadabouting In Baltimore

Parties perk up the 'Little Season'

With Lula Jones Garrett

It's really pretty old hat to, in this new trend, set up a list of descriptions of dresses worn to social affairs unless the dresses are far beyond the ordinary or the wearers are celebrities . . . what with a set, like Baltimoreans usually knowing how to dress and using that knowledge beautifully.

But it is also pretty hard to refrain when a group, like the Alphas' guests on Saturday night, adds so much to the scenery.

The A-Phi-A's party, in Blue Crest North, was quite a thing. Deep orange colored clothes topped their tables, which were centered with flower arrangements holding masses of white and gold carnations at the base, extending into a tripod holding a duplicate bonquet. Beverages were served at the table, and a lavish smorgasbord in an adjoining section provided a lush supper.

The ladies, as I said, were fashion models in gowns that ranged from the strapless model, the lace top underpinned with pink, worn by Norma Malden, to the complete cover - up floor-length, long - sleeved skimmer worn by Carolyn Chisself.

And I'm not sure which was drawing the most eyes, Madeline Murphy in a two-toned gown of red skirt and pale pink top, with matching evening coat of the red line with pink; or her husband, Bill, who is sporting a distinguished vandyke these days . . . and it wouldn't be just another goatee. His has a broad streak of gray to lend interest.

Shapely Carolyn Bostic's gown was of white satin with a green sequin top (which is a very tame description of a mighty awaukky number) and Gwendolyn Hillen's form - fitter of green and silver brocade had built - up shoulders, intricately draped bodice, and a skirt that went into a swirling ripple at bottom.

And different no end was Shirley Pinkett's greige floor-length knit dinner suit, worn with a mink stole of almost the same shade. Betty Williams was way ahead, wearing one of the swirly chiffons that will make fashion news come spring. Her gown was in sea foaf green. Hermione Weaver kept step . . . her chiffon gown being in pale blue. Mrs. Parlett Moore chose a Grecian number, off one shoulder.

FROM ALL INDICATIONS, the committee had more fun than anyone when the Provident Hospital Auxiliary had its cabaret party on Saturday night.

The affair was in the Cherry Hill Steelworkers Union Hall, which had been transformed into a thing of beauty by the hard working ladies . . . the organization's colors of cherry pink and white were seen everywhere.

A high point of the evening was the presentation of the committee. In addition to wrist corsages of pink carnations, each lady carried a long stemmed pink carnation which she gaily tossed into the audience as she was presented. When the entire committee was assembled, they were joined by their escorts and stepped off into a graceful waltz.

Martha Holmes, president, wore a column of palest blue brocade with matching shoes and rhinestone accessories. Beatrice Avery, vice president and chairman of the affair, was regal in sea foam peau de soie with jeweled bodice and wafer - thin straps. Willia Blandy, first vice president, sparkled the night away in a sheath of Italian glittered crystalline.

Garnet red peau de soie was selected by Lorraine King. The bodice was intricately criss - crossed. Maggie Watkins, co - chairman, was stunning in an evening suit of Dresden blue brocade with matching stole which converted into a hood.

Gloria Hardy was there too. Her leaf green silk taffeta gown had a scoop neck and gently flared into a contoured skirt.

Sequins were much in favor as evidence by the shells topping slender evening skirts worn by Madie Mitchell, Juanita Selph and Muriel Cousin. Edyth Whyte, wife of the hospital administrator, Henry Whyte, chose black crepe slip dress caged in black silk criffon. Louise Tildon, wife of Charles Tildon, director of the Provident Hospital Development Program, was enchanting in an empire waisted dress with graceful white slipper satin bodice and gold slim skirt.

Ida Swanson's black velvet featured a high at front neckline that dipped low at bodice back. Pinnie Ross selected a classic one - shoulder Grecian gown in a bright new green with a free - flowing mantle of lighter than air chiffon.

LENA KING LEE stepped out of role of attorney and into that of very charming hostess and the other by her when she invited twenty -odd guests in for a very elegant seated supper and highly stimulating talk in her apartment on Calloway Avenue.

And the conversation groups wandered all over from the club room to the den, from the living room to the foyer, while Mrs. Lee, an eye - filler in a black hostess gown, split to here, wandered among them.

For dining the guests were divided between two long tables, one headed by the hostess and the otrer by her nephew, Bill Ross, who assisted as her host that evening.

Special guests were the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Jackson and Judge Mary Arabian.

Also there were:

Messrs. and Mesdames Milton Allen, Samuel T. Daniels William Ross, Cordtlandt Brown, Clift W. Mackay, William H. Murphy, Charles C. Mason; Dr. and Mrs. Parlett Moore and Mrs. Grace Gates.

EARLIER the safe evening, the Leon Williams-es' chic domain on Ellamont Road was the setting for a gathering of Girl Friends.

Mae (Mrs. W.) poured cocktails for the G.F.'s while she awaited the full contingent to arrive . . . then shunted them into the dining room for a delicious luncheon. They lingered about the tables while transacting their business . . . then skittered to the club room where an instructor awaited to teach them the new dance steps.

At the session were Georgeanna Chester, who heads the chapter, Olga Parker, Eliza Robinson, Lula Mackay, Bernice Chatman, Gwendolyn Lewis, Mae Parrott, Agnes Patterson, Elizabeth Stewart, Anita Wheatley, Vera Williams, Catherine Wilson and Theda Wilson.

Spear-heading the week of activities was a worship service at the Christian Center on the College campus. Following this the brothers dined together in the Memorial Refectory, at one o'clock. At six o'clock several representatives of the chapter visited and took part in the Founders Day Vesper Service at their brothers at Maryland State College.

On Monday, the Chapter held its 52nd Anniversary banquet in the Faculty Dining Hall of the Refectory. The guest speaker was the Eastern Regional Director of the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Samuel B. Newton.

Mr. Newton is a member of the Graduate Chapter, Zeta Sigma, which is located here in Baltimore. Other members of the Graduate Chapter present were Ernest W. Lee, president, Alonzo S. Jeter ,secretary, Dr. Roland C. McConnell, faculty advisor for the Gamma Chapter, Gilbert Daley, Eastern Regional Director of Education, Acie L. Williams, laision officer, and Dr. Socrates Saunders.
