J. H. Johnson, manager of refineries in the nationwide company's Chicago General Office was on hand to congratulate employees at the commemorative ceremonies.

If YOU Ask ME

BY BETTYE M. MOSS

People, places, things

'You name any part of the body . . . and that's where I hurt . . . still hurt . . . I have multiple body injuries . . .'

Mrs. Desper D. Brooks (Clarice), 1203 Lyndhurst, still managed to laugh this week as we asked her about that Jan. 17 freak auto accident.

Here is what happened: She was driving out Liberty Heights, went to make a turn into Reisterstown, a tow truck hauling a car rammed into the back of her car and she was knocked out cold.

Mrs. Brooks allows that she is still pretty lucky. 'People tell me that if I hadn't had my seat belt fastened, I would have been knocked through the windshield . . . or killed.'

Many know Mrs. Brooks as the director of the Baltimore Urban League job training project, and as the wife of the contractor.

Send hurry - up - get - out cards to her at the Lyndhurst Ave. address. She'll be there awhile.

Note from Episcopal Bishop and Mrs. Wyatt E. Mills (Rebecca), advises that their fellow Virgin Islanders are agog. Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth is expected for a visit.

Pleasant person met this week: The Rev. Melvin Chester Swan, who assumed pastorate of historic Waters AME Church four months ago. He succeeds the Rev. W. B. Nash, who was promoted to district superintendent.

Assignment to Waters is like coming home to the Rev. Mr. Swan, who pastored in Baltimore some years back — in the Turner Station area.

Already, he has become 'involved.' He is also the new chairman of the Baltimore NAACP's education committee which calls itself, 'Parents and Schools.' You'll be hearing from them.

The new minister's family includes his wife, Dorothy, presently studying at Shaw University; and a son, Melvin Jr., a teacher at Price High, Greensboro. They will move to Baltimore shortly.

Death in L.A. — Word comes this week from Los Angeles of the death there of Mrs. Cora Spencer Beaver, 86. She lived in Baltimore until 1945 when she moved to the West Coast to be near her daughter, Mrs. Edna Deaver Shipley - McCormick, the well - known civic worker and businesswoman.

Mrs. Deaver's husband, Alphonso, also of L.A. survives. Other survivors, all former Baltimoreans, include a sister, Anna Mae Newton; and a brother, Albert Spencer.

Baltimore relatives: — James Spencer, the school principal; a niece, Mrs. Eddie Day; and cousins, Judge Robert B. Watts and Mrs. Emile Gibson (Lucille).

Cuff note: — Mention above of Mrs. Gibson serves to remind that her husband is in Lutheran Hospital for tests, may be at home by the time you read this. He's the postal worker. Cards will reach him at 5500 Belleville Ave.

Sunday's snow did not keep over 300 persons from attending a banquet honoring Joseph E. (Buddy) Lee, and Walter J. (Walt) Freeman, the two Druid YMCA executives who are retiring because of illness after 36 years of service.

It was a tremendous tribute that their associates and friends filled the Prince Hall Masonic Temple to witness what this writer believes were the most sincere tributes ever heard at a testimonial.

Orchids to Grand Master Samuel Daniels and Prince Hall Masons for donating use of the hall.

And, orchids too to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Booker (Naomi), who gave musical tributes. How beautiful their voices were. They sang, 'The Lord's Prayer,' 'Climb Every Mountain' and 'This Little Light of Mine.'

The Bookers' appearance was doubly significant. They first met at the Druid Hill Y pool!

P.S. — Relatives of Mr. Lee and Mr. Freeman came from N.Y., N.C., Pa., N.J., N.Y. and Del. for the banquet, including Mr. Lee's mother, Mrs. Eva V. Lee, Southport, N.C., and Mr. Freeman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Freeman Sr., of Newburgh, N.Y. And in all that snow!

Cuff note: Both Mr. Lee and Mr. Freeman are Kappa men. Both are college grads and played football — Lee at N.C. College — and Freeman at Morgan.

Both are too young to be retired (Lee is just 49 and Freeman only 29), but often people in dedicated, community service give too much of themselves.

Would that the people who benefit most from such 'faithful' servants could have 'turned out' for them with money and help in their active years.

Those of us who have known of Lee's and Freeman's contributions to the young of our community wish that they might soon be restored to health and to service.

Looking for something different for your active youngsters to do? Take them skiing!

Jack and Jill Mothers did on Saturday. Their 12 and 13-year - olds visited Oregon Ridge, in Cockeysville, Md., 20 miles north of Baltimore (off Beltway Exit 24).

Note: Did you know that a ski range has cars which lift you up the steep, snowy incline so you don't have to struggle?

Did you know that you can also travel up the incline by standing on an incline plane?

Did you know that you can sit inside the ski lodge and watch your youngsters get ski instruction?

Did you know that youngsters who have learned to water ski can ski on snow with little difficulty?

Did you know that energetic youngsters can do many things much to the surprise of timid mothers and fathers, like snow skiing? They can!!

Name's the same: Marriage licenses issued in Baltimore last week had these look - alike names:

Linwood Scott, 21, U.S. Navy and Mary E. Scott, 24; Ronald Washington, 22, and Beverlieve Washington, 20, both of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Also, Alexander B. Keys, 22, and Pauline Keys, 20, with an additional note that they were divorced Oct. 13, 1965.

Isn't life funny! On Sunday at the Masonic Temple, we watched George W. Evans Jr., the postal employee and camera bug, as he moved about the banquet room to take pictures.

He smiled and we chatted a moment about photos. I remarked later to the head of the house that he was such a fine fellow, always the same.

Then, two days later tragedy. His only son, 14-year - old George 3rd, died of a bullet wound in the head.

Unbelievable? It is to those of us who belong to St. James Episcopal Church, who have watched little George grow up.

Altar boy, Sunday school leader — courteous, and kind as he offered a helping hand to the older people who had difficulty with the altar steps.

A neighbor boy and a City College classmate have been charged with the killing which took place in the Evans' Normount Ave. home as the three waited for time to go to school.

Irony: One of the accused youths — Clyde Tatum Jr., is the son of a man whom Mr. Evans calls 'one of my best friends.'

They are both members of King David Lodge, Prince Hall Masons.

Visitors here: AME Zion Bishop and Mrs. W. J. Walls of Chicago and Salisbury, N.C., were in Baltimore Tuesday for the day - long ecumenical conference at St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Bishop Walls, AME Bishop George W. Baber, Methodist Bishop Prince Albert Taylor were among 27 Catholic and Protestant leaders who attended the unprecedented meeting.

It was a getting - to-know you gathering where denominational leaders discussed common problems.

Smile of this week: This one is by Dr. John A. Sensenbaugh, State Superintendent of Schools, guest speaker at Monday's Flower of Youth banquet:

'Thank you for that delightful obituary. It is nice to hear such things while you are alive.

Introductions, are all right as long as you don't inhale them.'

His definition of timidity: The man who waits and consults his brothers and associates, waits so long, until he is 60, and there is no time left to carry out their advice.

DHS student gets 'after Yule gift' in Criminal Court

A Douglass High School senior in Criminal Court Wednesday threw himself upon the mercy of the court and received a real break, a sort of "after-Christmas present."

On the advice of his attorney, Benjamin Brown, Calvin Walter Green, 17, 600 Woodington Rd., never in trouble with the law before, said he attempted to take a woman's purse shortly before Christmas in hopes of 'getting things I never had before.'

Appearing before Judge J. Gilbert Prendergast he testified his father was unemployed, his mother deceased; and that he, residing with his grandmother, witnessed dire need in the family.

Pleading nolle contendre, he stated he made the decision to commit the crime on the evening of Dec. 16 on Paca St. near Lexington St.

Firemen chased him and were aided by police in the vicinity as the purse snatching victim, a woman, screamed.

Young Green was released in custody of his grandmother, Mrs. Emma Green, as he told the Court, "I knew I was wrong. I am sorry, but it was near Christmas and I never had much ever."

—The Malcolm X case

son, 20, of the Bronx, had shot-gunned Malcolm X while Thomas Hagan, 22, of Paterson, New Jersey and Talmadge Hayer, 22, of Paterson, New Jersey and Thomas 3 X Butler, of the Bronx had created a disturbance, later rushing to the stage and firing pistol shots into Malcolm's prone body.

TEMPLE, in medium brown, youthful looking with a heavy thatch of hair and a sparse mustache, said when Malcolm X took the speaker's stand around 3 p.m. he heard the scraping of chairs, and looked to his left to see Hagan rising. Hagan said to the man sitting next to him, "—r-r, what you doing with your hands in my pocket?" the witness related.

Hagan took a gun from his jacket pocket and fired to the right in his direction, Temple said. He said he hit the floor putting his hands behind his head to show how he had taken cover.

When he rose — ten minutes later — he's not sure — he saw Hagan and another man running from the stage followed by Reuben Francis. Francis, Malcolm X's bodyguard, is accused of shooting Hagan in the leg during the melee. He is expected to testify later during the trial.

TEMPLE MAINTAINED that he had seen Johnson at Muslim meetings in Chicago and had seen Hagan selling the Muslim newspaper on the streets. He had also seen Hagan quell a disturbance at a Muslim meeting using a "karate chop" he said. The District Attorney is contending that the three defendants are Black Muslim enforcers who assassinated Malcolm X because he denounced the group he once led.

Security has intensified in the court room located in the corner of the 13th floor in the Criminal Court Building. Additional guards were on hand Thursday because of the trial of William Epton being held in the corridor. Epton accused of leading the Harlem riots of 1964 was sentenced to a year in jail.

Bearded long haired youths and girls in slacks crowded the corridor alternating between the two trials were frisked as they entered the Malcolm X murder trial where police are still alert to a possible outbreak between Malcolm X followers and the Black Muslims.

NOT AS many persons identifiable as Muslims showed up Thursday, although a number of the New York Muslim leadership has been attending the trial regularly. There are reports that the word has been passed among the membership to stay away from the courtroom so as not to prejudice the jury.

Well groomed in conservative garb, the Muslims generally sit at the right side of the courtroom while followers of the slain Harlem leader, clearly dressed, sit on the left.

FOUR DAYS of grueling cross examination failed to shake the second state witness' identification of the trio he said fired the shots which felled the fiery nationalist.

Cary Thomas, 35, an admitted dope pusher who said he has carried a gun since he was 15, appeared to be more composed when he left the witness stand Wednesday afternoon than when he began his testimony last Friday.

The Malcolm X bodyguard, who took cover when the shooting started said he did not draw his gun because he was afraid of hitting innocent bystanders in the confusion. He later failed to reveal the identity of Malcolm's killers because of fear of his life, he said. He said he did not know who to trust in Malcolm's organization of Afro-American Unity because "there are so many different people coming in and out."

DEFENSE ATTORNEYS hammered away at the stocky prematurely balding witness, seeking to bare his unsavory record, to cast doubt upon his ability to identify Malcolm's assassins. They also sought to implicate other of Malcolm X's followers as possible participants in the plot, citing friction within the group.

Much of the questioning was repetitious and Supreme Court Judge Charles Marks, in frequent clashes with the defense attorneys of the sort which has characterized much of the proceedings thus far, warned them that "such repetition is unnecessary."

ON WEDNESDAY morning Thomas' voice was surly and he spoke defensively with his eyes downcast as attorneys continued to probe his Army record. He admitted with a disgusted expression that he had been released from the Army after five and a half years with a dishonorable discharge.

Thomas was vague about the Muslim leadership and who else was present at the Audubon Ballroom beside the three defendants on the fatal afternoon. One juror winced when he described the distance between himself and Butler to be "about 15, 10, or 7 or 8 feet when the shots were fired."

He was forced to admit that he was mistaken when he had told the grand jury that he knew that Hayer was a member of the Jersey City Muslim Mosque. He said he assumed Hayer was a member because he had seen him at the Mosque.

Hayer, of Paterson, New Jersey is the only one of the defendants who contends he is not a Muslim. He is represented by white attorneys.

In court he does not speak to Butler or Johnson, both of whom often huddle in whispered conversation during the trial.

Asked why he did not draw his gun when the shooting started, Thomas replied:

"I was afraid—there were too many people in the way—I could have drawn the fire — there were women and children there — I just decided to quit the muslims be-

The witness who also gave cause "I just found out it was wrong. I did what he had demanded of me." Thomas said he was a lot of live—they are not what he said they were—" "Why did you follow Malcolm?" he was asked.

"What Malcolm said was pretty good," he said. Thomas indicated earlier that he was not assigned to duty on the day of the shooting and that Malcolm X had ordered him no one was to be searched.

Thomas was arrested by police March 2; and has been held under $50,000 bond since then as a material witness. He said he had decided to tell police who killed Malcolm X because they promised him protection.

—Husband sought

longing to the suspect in the murder of his mother, Mrs. Eva Taylor, 100 block Colvin St.

Mrs. Taylor told the AFRO her son, whom she had not seen in weeks, came to her house early Sunday morning, about 4 a.m.

"He was acting strangely," Mrs. Taylor said, "and he didn't stay long. He left this briefcase and I have not seen or heard from him since."

THE AILING mother of the now-fugitive had no cause to be suspicious of her son's actions at that time and shunted the bag off into a corner of her room.

The briefcase remained untouched even after police came to her home Monday informing her of the mass murders and seeking leads to Taylor's whereabouts.

It was during a later visit by police, Tuesday, that she remembered and produced the bag that may prove significant in determining some factors of the crime.

Search of the case produced personal belongings the slain woman was known to have had in her possession shortly before midnight Saturday.

Among official papers and paraphernalia of the Moorish movement were found insurance policies on the dead children and their mother, a bank book evidencing a joint savings account, birth certificates of the children, and numerous other personal items later identified as belonging to the murder victim.

The insurance policies, made out over two years ago, bore the names James Taylor —El and Gervine Taylor—El. The suffix to their names served as a conclusive link to the Moorish movement and not the Black Muslims.

Policies on the wife and children all bore the name of Taylor as beneficiary or joint beneficiary, making collection of the policies for burial expenses impossible.

THE EARLY Sunday delivery of Mrs Taylor's personal things to the home of the suspect's mother, plus the difference in the condition of the adult's body and those of the children serve to strengthen the theory that Mrs. Taylor might have been slain between mid-night and 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

The children are known to have been alive as late as 2:30 Sunday afternoon when they were seen through the window of the home by Mrs. Taylor's employer.

Waymond Myers, manager of the North Ave. theatre where Mrs. Taylor worked as a 'candy-girl', told police the children came to the window when he went to the Newington Ave. house to find out why she had not come to work.

The children's actions, as he related them to the AFRO, indicated the presence in the house of another person.

An hour later another incident indicated the presence of someone in the house.

BERNARD SMITH, stepfather of Mrs. Taylor, went to the house accompanied by a policeman after being called by Mr. Myers.

Mr. Smith told the AFRO that, although he and the officer received no response after banging on the front and rear door, he did see a curtain move at the basement window.

The children were nowhere to be seen at this time. It was due to Mr. Smith's concern that eventual discovery of the bodies was made Monday morning following a call to police who sent two officers to break into the house.

On numerous occasions Sunday the worried step-father had attempted, without success, to get police to break in.

Mr. Smith and his wife, Minnie, mother of the victim, again met police Monday morning when a rear door to the premises was forced.

After discovery of the bodies on the third floor, a police called it "the worst sight I have ever seen—and I have seen some."

THE ANGUISHED stepfather was stopped half-way up to the top floor.

"They asked me to take my wife back downstairs,' he said. I saw a policeman, pick up a knife from the landing and then I knew it wasn't wrong in being worried.

"If only the police had broken in Sunday afternoon when I called them—or even if they had let me break in. The children might still be alive."

In the front bedroom was Mrs. Taylor. The 23-year-old mother had apparently been beaten with a length of pipe that lay across her body.

Knife wounds had been inflicted in her throat and on her wrist.

In the rear bedroom the body of 18-month-old Curtis lay in his crib with his throat gashed open.

On a mattress on the floor, their only bed, were the other two tots with knife wounds in their throats.

Following police permission to enter the house Tuesday, Mr. Smith described the place "an awful mess."

"It looked like someone had turned on a spigot and just let blood run all over the place.

"I will never forget it," Smith commented.

'THAT WAS the first time I had ever been in the house' he went on. 'Gervine's husband never let her have any company, not even her mother or me, even though she was our daughter.

"She could not have any friends. If she wanted to see her family, she had to go out to see them and take the children with her.

"Gervine's only pleasure was in being around her mother or her aunts—that's as far as she went," Smith continued.

"We never knew 'Stoney' had a criminal record or that he had been in a mental institution. I wonder if Gervine knew."

Her members of the family, and even the mother of the suspect describe Taylor as "closed-mouthed" and having very little to say to anybody.

He was also described as intelligent and quick to grasp a situation and having no traces of any kind of mental disorder.

"He just wanted to be left alone," commented an acquaintance and former scholmate of the suspect.

A CHECK by the AFRO with people who had come into contact with Taylor revealed he had become interested in the Muslim movement years ago but later found that his personal habits did coincide with principles and teachings of Elijah Muhammad.

He is believed to have joined the Moorish Science Temple in Chicago several years ago.

In Baltimore, both he and his wife visited the Baltimore St. temple beginning about two years ago, before the birth of the youngest child, now murdered.

Both in and out the organization, Taylor is described as a "sort of floater," or one who moves around from one temple to another.

Information gained from reliable sources show that the wanted man held meetings at his house, both at a former address on Edmondson Ave., and on Newington Ave., and indicates that he might have attempted to organize his own organization with himself as "leader."

In his briefcase were two embossing machines used to affix the official seal of the associate counsel of the Legal Defense and Education Fund of the NAACP.

IN 1964 and early 1965, she was a New York state senator, and since February, 1965, has been Manhattan Borough president.

She was a partner in the New York City law firm of Pearlman, Motley and Bronheim from 1949 to 1952, and a member of the New York State Advisory Council on Employment and Unemployment Insurance From 1958 to 1964.

As a federal judge, upon confirmation of the nomination by the Senate, Mrs. Motley would receive a salary of $30,000 a year.

The White House announced Johnson's intention to nominate her about an hour after news photographers were called into the President's office without explanation to photograph Johnson and Mrs. Motley.

Mrs. Motley awaits Senate approval

Constance Baker Motley said her appointment as a U.S. District judge helped to advance the cause of two minority groups"—women and colored citizens.

Mrs. Motley was nominated Tuesday by President Johnson as the first colored woman to sit on the Federal bench. She now is president of the Borough of Manhattan, the first woman to hold the post.

Her nomination to a Federal judgeship, she said at a news conference, indicates "America is about to make good on its promise of equal opportunity for all."

As a former attorney for the NAACP, she said, it also "gives great status to civil rights lawyers who a few years ago were not the most popular people in the country."

Mrs. Motley said she would resign the Borough presidency "if and when I'm confirmed by the Senate," and that she hoped race would not be a factor in the selection of her successor. The last borough presidents have been colored.

Mrs. Motley, a 44 - year-old Democrat, will be nominated by Johnson for the bench of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, succeeding the late Archie O. Dawson.

The wife of Joel Wilson Motley of New York City, and the mother of one son, Mrs. Motley is an attorney who specialized in civil rights matters.

From 1945 to 1965 she rose from a research student to Moorish movement to official dignitary.

SEARCH FOR the fugitive has now spread to other cities where other temples of the movement are being checked.

Meanwhile, police are checking out the possibility of a jealous motive in the slayings; however, attempts to gain information concerning this angle of the case have meet with an official "No comment."

—Water Dept.

the Water Department had "every right to tell her landlord that the water was to be cut off.

Mrs. Holland stated that when she advised the landlord of this, he said there was no worry because the bill had been paid.

The wife of the landlord, contacted by the AFRO, said Tuesday they had received no notification of the required revocation of the water main, but would have their plumber contact the Water Department immediately to do whatever had to be done.

There are at least four other small children in the apartment house, Mrs. Holland said.

UP THE street at 1712 Hamlem, three other families faced the same situation which was not corrected until Monday by a landlord.

One of these persons, Mrs. Augusta McNeill, who has has two children ages one year and nine months, said she had had to get water from a sister a few doors away.

Across the proposed inner block park at 1715 Lanvale St., Morris Henson told the AFRO the water in his home had also been off since Friday.

He said he had finally contacted his landlord, who was to send a plumber around Wednesday to begin the required reconnections.

The Water Department spokesman said all such reconnections must be done by the property owner's plumber or licensee.

His office, he said, had records of notifications sent to the properties of all such tracts where reconnection of the water supply is required.

A BURHA official told the AFRO bids on construction of the inner park between Harlem and Lanvale will be let in April. Construction is to start in June and it is scheduled for completion in October.

The Harlem Park area, when completed, will have 29 such inner parks.

She now is unemployed, and the family savings are gone.

"We need help. We are only staying for a while with a neighbor, but we will have to find somewhere else to live soon," she added. The Townes family is staying at 653 Gutman Ave. temporarily.

Although final reports have not been made, Mrs. Townes told the AFRO that she believed someone may have broken into her home and set the fire accidentally.

Phase I and II of the Snow Emergency Plan were put into effect shortly afterwards but were lifted mid - day Thursday.

Among the legions of irlated moterists and cautious pedestrians; a collection of calloused hands and aching backs, joy still reigned — among children.

For them the snow meant an extra day out of school. Already primed for a three-day weekend due to the mid-term lull, they suddenly found themselves facing four school - free days, and to even a kindergartner, that's a precious bonus.

If given the green light, Paren J. Mitchell, CAA director, said his agency is prepared to start operations in the new area well within a three-week period.

There has come in the past, however, considerable outspoken opposition from several councilmen to the agency's proposed expansion of its anti-poverty campaign into West Baltimore.

The proposed CAA area of operation would be North Ave. on the north; Fremont and Mt. Royal Aves. to the east; roughly Pratt St. on the south, and Pulaski St. to the west.
