Paquin raps 'selfish interests' of some critics of school plan

Opposition to School Superintendent Laurence G. Paquin's revamping of high schools has come mainly from alumni of City College and Baltimore Polytechnic Institute, while this week a number of civil rights groups, including the Urban League, have commended the plan to make all high schools except Carver and Megenthaler prebaccalaureate.

Dr. Furman L. Templeton, executive director of the Urban League, in a personal letter to the superintendent Wednesday, commended him for his "courage, depth and foresight" in the study of the secondary education in this city."

"Although some people certainly will disagree with some of the details," Dr. Templeton said, "your philosophy and broad outlines should win widespread support.

"Please count me among those who intend to give you all possible assistance in carrying out your plan. Please feel free to call upon me whenever and wherever I can be of help."

The executive board of the League met Thursday afternoon to consider Dr. Paquin's plan in detail.

* * *

IN ADDITION TO the support of the Urban League's director, the superintendent also won praise this week from the American for Democratic Action and the Committee of 28 Parents, a group which had opposed the proposal to make City College an all college preparatory school.

In announcing A.D.A's support, Miss Una Corbett, chairman of the group's Committee on Schools, told Dr. Paquin the Executive Board had expressed approval "for your creative, imaginative, timely and professional program for improving high school education in Baltimore."

The A.D.A. specifically commended his concern about de facto segregation, his scholarly rather than emotional presentation of the effort to provide maximum opportunity for each student.

The group held some reservations about the plan to locate a second Baltimore College at the old Poly building and about the method of selecting students for new Honors Programs.

It called one of the aims of the plan the "Providing of "quality education in integrated schools for all our youth," and offered "out full support in the work ahead."

* * *

DR. PAQUIN, in a public meeting at Walbrook Trinity Presbyterian Church Wednesday night, chided the opponents to the plan as "short-sighted" and "seeking their own selfish interests."

He noted that he has had about 20 letters from individuals against the plan, mostly from alumni of City or Poly objecting to the "downgrading" of their schools, and about 10 letters in favor, "mostly from groups like A.D.A., 28 Parents and the Urban League.

He said a clear reading of the proposals will show that no schools will be "downgraded," and that the greatest hinderance to the plan could be "apathy."

"Last year we asked for $36 million for the school construction program," he pointed out as illustration, "and we got $15 million."

The only other opposition to the plan has came from Baltimore Junior College Wednesday he feels Dr. Bard who criticized the proposal to place the second campus of the college in the old Poly building.

The superintendent said Wednesday he feels Dr. Bard is "asking too much" in his wishes for a completely new campus in the Inner Harbor Project.

Both Dr. Bard and the Junior College faculty, the latter unanimously, have backed the high school plan in whole, with the reservation of favoring Paquin's alternate proposal to build the second campus in the inner harbor area.

SOME CRITICISM on behalf of the City College proponents has been leveled by Melvin J. Sykes, attorney for the group of alumni which had proposed an exclusively college preparatory future for City.

Mr. Sykes questioned whether overcrowding would not still result, even after the revamped building program, and whether this would not downgrade the school.

The Baltimore chapter of the Maryland Society of Professional Engines also expressed fears for the future of Poly, which concentrates on the sciences, if it is made a comprehensive high school.

SOME CRITICISM on behalf of the City College proponents has been leveled by Melvin J. Sykes, attorney for the group of alumni which had proposed an exclusively college preparatory future for City.

Mr. Sykes questioned whether overcrowding would not still result, even after the revamped building program, and whether this would not downgrade the school.

The Baltimore chapter of the Maryland Society of Professional Engineers also expressed fears for the future of Poly, which concentrates on the sciences, if it is made a comprehensive high school.

The meeting Wednesday night at the Walbrook church drew 65 representation of the Mt. Holly, Windsor Hills and other neighborhood improvement associations, who questioned the advisability of locating the proposed Walbrook high school in a commercial area.

After answering questions about the new school, Dr. Paquin told the group that if they do wish to register their dissent with the school board, it must be done quickly because the project is going ahead rapidly.

Spokesmen for the groups, backed by CORE, said they had come to have their questions answered before deciding on a course of action. They feared that the new school would become another all - colored high school.

In response to a question, Dr. Paquin wryly quoted from a newspaper article to back up his position on the comprehensive high school.

He read a quote from George B. Brain, former superintendent here and now president of the American Association of School Administrators, stating his backing of the New York City superintendent in his move to change most of the city's high schools into comprehensive schools.

"We're with him on this 100 per cent," Dr. Brain had said. The quote brought a smile from the audience because Brain's name has been invoked on numerous occasions by the City proponents.

Gadabouting In Baltimore

Omegas host 1450 at gala Mardi Gras

With Lula Jones Garrett

The greatest party (surely in size) on the local front this season, was the Mardi Gras, the annual offering of Pi Omega chapter of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

Some 1,450 guests came to the affair, a goodly number being from surrounding cities and states.

While the "Brothers" lend no small bit of color to the affair, their purple and gold hitting a high note in the scenery, guests try with them in costumes that tax the imagination.

If you think it is easy to pick a dozen winners from over 1,400 guests, you should just stand by and see it tried. It wears one to a frazzle, just looking. But prize for the best costumed male went to Hiram Ammons, who was disguised as the Hunch Back of Notre Dame; and the couples' prize went to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Giles, as Jolly Green Giants.

The Baltimore chapter, which garners funds via the Mardi Gras to "beat up" in scholarships, is headed by James E. Grant.

Other officers are William M. Gardner, vice basileus; Robert L. Johnson Jr., keeper of records and seal; Carlet Burton, assistant keeper of records and seal, Malachi C. Darkins, keeper of finance;

Also: Eugene Ward, chaplain; George H. Ball, keeper of property; Alfred James, keeper of peace; Earl Koger, chapter Editor and Benjamin C. Whitten, parliamentarian.

Hosts at the affair, held on Friday evening at East Winds the attractive ballroom on Pulaski Highway, were:

Charles N. Alston, Carleto Burton, Lester Buster, E. Custis, Willie Dawkins, M. Woodburn, Luther Day, Alexander B. Gates, Dr. Robert L. Gill.

Haywood Harrison, Bertram Harrington, Clarence Henderson, Edward E. Hall, John J. Hurt, Joseph A. Jackson,

Alfred James, Robert Johnson, Earl Koger, William Gardner, Eugene Ward, Arthur Milburn, I. Henderson Neal, W. Glen Neal, Alphonso Parks,

Joseph Perches, Otis H. Robertson, Powell Sheffey, Hayward Strother, Carl J. White, Mack Williams, Kenneth D. Ervin, George L. Bennett.

John J. Cardwell, Malachi Darkins, Harrison A. Fallin, James E. Grant, Harold F. Folkes, Earl L. Hagan,

William F. Henderson, Richard L. McKinney, William Mumby, Elmer Patterson, Benjamin F. Smith, Lloyd White, Benjamin Whitten, Melvin Woodburn.

Out-of-town guests included:

Mr. and Mrs. George E. Meares of Brooklyn, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Greenup of St. Albans, N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. James Avery of Plainfield, N.J.;

Arthur King, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Martin, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Woodard, Lorenzo Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Elzie Chapman, George Diggs and Mrs. Francis Taylor of Annapolis, Md.

Mrs. Miriam T. Lafayette and Earl O'Neal of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. John Westherford and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Noel of Annapolis, Dr. and Mrs. Milford Caldwell of Dover, Del., Dr. and Mrs. Horace D. Ferguson and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Burton of Annapolis, Md.,

Mr. and Mrs. David Jackson of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Freeman of Patterson, N.J., Mr. and Mrs. Roger Conway of Richmond, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Felmon Motley of Dover. Del.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Tinnen of Washington, Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Downing of Newport News, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Grant of Aberdeen, Md. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Wells of Wilmington, Del.,

Dr. and Mrs. E. Worthington Waters of Dover, Del., Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Simons of Washington, Mrs. Isabelle Clark of Philadelphia.

AMONG THE many gala breakfast parties that followed the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity's annual Mardi Gras at East Winds, Saturday morn, was the petit affair at the Pentnutt Ave. home of Thomas and Yvonne Hicks.

Guests wined and dined on an assortment of fine foods and drinks until sunrise.

Yvonne is the popular teacher at School No. 204, is active in the National Council of Women and also is corresponding secretary of the Lawyers' Wives.

Among the guests were Harry Gall Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Baylor, Mrs. Mary McKnight, and Leon Williams of Washington, Mrs. Dorothy Baker and William H. Nelson Jr.

A HUNDRED AND FIFTY Hamptonians assembled at One West, Sunday, for the annual Founder's Day dinner.

'Twas like old times meeting and greeting, reminiscing, shoulder patting, kissing and hand shaking, as it usually the case when Hampton Institute alumni get together . . . and when an even higher occasion because their beloved Major Walter Brown was honored guest. 81 years set lightly upon the shoulders of Major Brown, who remembered and called by name every Hampton man there, as well as the majority of the women.

When the Association presented a gift to him he responded saying that he had not been invited to speak . . . and then preceded to review the history of Hampton from the time Samuel Chaplain Armstrong, the founder, first landed, to the present time.

And the Hamptonians there hung on every word, scarcely breathing lest they miss a line, for many of the younger members were not so aware of the Institute's early history.

Scheduled speaker was Dean Thomas Hawkins, who cited the high standards of scholarship Hampton is insisting upon and getting; of the high qualifications of the faculty and of the necessity of Hampton alumni funneling top-quality material to the school.

Dr. Maurice Adams, who presided, kept the meeting moving smoothly with wit and knowhow. Jake Cox, president of the local alumni chapter, who also spoke; Dr. Saul Perdue, who made the presentation; Dudley Henry, who introduced Mr. Hawkins and William Boykins, who gave the benediction, were other program participants.

Mesdames Mary A. Johnson and Patricia Page were co-chairmen of the affair. Other committee members included Mrs. Phyllis Thompson, Dudley Henry, Mesdames Catherine Adams and Melissa Perdue, Theodore Gross and Clarence Barber.

* * *

INCIDENTALLY, the Hampton Pals (they are women alumni of this city and Washington, who for the past 15-years have met about twice a year to revive the days together at their Alma Mater) were entertained by Inez Kent, E. Estelle Thomas, Zelta Washington and Vernice Wynn, this week.

They had cocktails and lunch at West View Shopping Center, and from there went to the home of Mrs. Washington. Missing was Dr. Flemmie Kittrell of Howard University, who is abroad at present.

Attending were Lois Carter, Catherine Royston, Ivora Evans, Gwendolyn Lewis, Thelma Rice, Mesliisa Perdue, Catherine Adams, Patricia Page, Mae Parrott, Phyllis Tilley and the hostesses.

Hints for Homemakers

INEZ KAISER

"Wink away your cares and woes, there it goes, there it goes; bye, bye, soil marks."

I was surprised to hear the lady who helps me singing on laundry day, until she informed me of her wonderful discovery . . . WISK. "You see," she chanted, "it's liquid . . . no waiting for WISK to dissolve like powdered detergents."

Well, a new song can form on the lips of all happy users of WISK, for it is the heavy-duty detergent that starts working instantly because it is liquid. Her dancing eyes and glistening smile assured me that she was well on her way to a day of "household happiness."

Why don't you, too, discover the miracle of WISK and end kowling at the hard-to-clean areas. You just pour WISK directly on heavily soiled areas, and the remainder to the wash, and then you are off to clean the rest of the house. Yes, I said "the rest of the house," for WISK is not to be restricted to the laundry. No, no, far too much cleaning power for that!

As my singing lady learned, WISK cleans walls, floors, cabinets, ranges and blinds, for "WISK puts its strength where the dirt is," wherever it is. You see it's concentrated. Just one-half cup of WISK equals one and one-half cups of ordinary laundry powders.

So buy WISK with confidence, a LEVER BROTHERS PRODUCT, unconditionally guaranteed and sold by all grocers everywhere.

Something new is in the offing for the homemaker, who has been dishrobed because she lost her touch at fixing sandwiches. Have you been made to feel a little guilty when the lunch pail returns almost as full as when it left? Has it dawned on you the sandwiches might be too plain, too dry or just not appetising enough to be eaten?

Perhaps I can help you get back on your throne by wielding a crown on your behalf . . . IMPERIAL MARGARINE . . . the "Crown Jewel" of the margarine world. IMPERIAL is the margarine that tastes like the "expensive spread," but costs so much less.

You can find it at your grocer's in the brilliant red, blue and gold carton. To me the blue symbolizes the horizon reached by Lever Brothers to assure satisfaction. The gold identify with pure golden corn oil and other vegetable oils and a flavor fit for a king. That is why there is a crown on the IMPERIAL MARGARINE packages.

So reach for one of the individually wrapped creamy-yellow bars of IMPERIAL MARGARINE. Once you do, you will not be just a sandwich maker, but "Her Majesty" who produces delectable, palatable delicacies.

I have just been reminiscing about how important that final touch was to my appearance when I attended a recent Valentine's Day luncheon. It was most reassuring to know that I had a dependable friend with me — FINAL TOUCH. This is the fabric softener that contains Lemo-White, an exclusive whitener that keeps your clothes white, especially those difficult-to-whiten miracle fabrics.

During the afternoon many enviable glances were cast at my crisp white blouse, and I smiled as I thought how fresh and bright FINAL TOUCH kept all my clothes, even those dainty "unmentionables." FINAL TOUCH is a luxury everyone can afford, and once you try it, you won't want to do without it.

You will enjoy new softness, new whiteness, new ironing ease. In addition, you'll find that this fine new Lever Brothers product removes the static that causes your clothes to cling.

You would expect that only a genius would be able to obtain such results. But FINAL TOUCH has easy-to-follow directions which tell you simply to pour it in your final rinse . . . in either machine or hand washing.

Let "happiness in the home" be the byword for every homemaker this month. For some this may sound like an almost impossible task. Faced with the dull routine of housework and preparing the same old meals, it is no wonder some of us find it difficult to maintain a degree of sanity and yet keep the family happy.

Well, what I foresee is a change in the weather. My forecast is for showers . . . "happy showers." I predict that happiness showers will change foggy days to "reigning" days when you introduce your family to MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S. "The Original Buttered Syrup."

The most important meal of the day is breakfast, yet it seems to be the hardest to persuade the family to eat. But this will cease to be a chore when your menu includes plenty of French toast, pancakes, waffles and cereals covered with delicious-tasting MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S syrup.

Instead of the usual grouchy children, there will be happy eager eaters. Dad, too, will be anxious to have something other than his usual hasty bite. He will like its original buttery taste.

Buy MRS. BUTTERWORTH'S syrup, and make your house a house of happiness. Discover for yourself what Lever Brothers has achieved through this lip-smacking buttery and maple-flavored syrup.

Zesty Chili-in-cheese sauce turns hamburger into prize

There are so many ways to serve this flavorsome ground beef dish that you could have it several times a week and seldom repeat a recipe. That's fortunate, since it's combined with other foods to make delicious "stretcher" meals.

For a change of pace, some day soon, try Baked Hamburgers in Cheese Sauce. Place hamburger patties in a baking dish; top with onion slices and then pour on the sauce. It's a simple but zesty medley of Worcestershire sauce, mustard, chili sauce and sharp Cheddar cheese, blended with cream of celery soup for smoothness.
