They raised their own money, brought thousands of illustrated "Welcome" buttons and matchbooks, held meetings, coffee klatches, and sponsored scores of other vote-getting projects. With the help of other interested groups and individuals, their candidate, Verda Welcome, won a seat in the Maryland House of Delegates.

A few days later, at a party celebrating their victory, the "Women for Welcome" passed long enough to organize themselves into a permanent club, known then as "The Valiant Women's Democratic Club," with Delegate Welcome as its advisor. In 1965, the name of the club was changed to "The Valiant Women's Welcome Wagon Democratic Club.
