Rights bills out for this special Assembly session

By MAX JOHNSON

ANNAPOLIS — Proposed fair housing legislation, repeal of the state's miscegenation law or other civil rights matters, unsuccessful during the regular session, will not be considered during this special session of the General Assembly.

Only congressional redistricting and bills dealing with the fiscal affairs of the state will be cleared for action by the Rules Committee, Sen. William S. James (D. Harford), Senate president, told the AFRO Thursday.

This means concerned citizens will have to wait until after the coming elections and a newly selected Assembly convenes next January for further consideration.

Because of reapportionment, the smaller Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland counties, bitterly opposed to such legislation, will not control the subsequent Assemblys as in the past.

• • •

MEANWHILE, THIS special session called by Gov. J. Millard Tawes will attempt to resolve differences between the Senate and House over congressional redistricting.

As the regular session adjourned at midnight Tuesday, the House wrangling over the Cooper-Hughes tax reform measure precluded all chances of agreement.

At the time, dispute was over whether to give Baltimore just two districts, or to put a portion of Congressman Edward A. Garmatz's 3rd District in the southern section of the city with the rest in Anne Arundel County.

Under the fiscal affairs heading, Sen. James reminded Thursday, the Cooper - Hughes measure could again be introduced, if its sponsors want to be hardheaded about it.

Painter dies after fall from ladder

A 29-year-old painter died Monday night in Maryland General Hospital as a result of a 40-foot plunge he took when he slipped from a ladder Saturday morning as he was painting the dome inside the Prince Hall Grand Lodge Masonic Temple, 1301 N. Eutaw St.

Angel Pizarro, 1300 block N. Chester St., was admitted to the hospital shortly after the 11 a.m. fall in critical condition with a fractured skull and multiple injuries.

Central District police said Mr. Pizarro, an employee of Thomas E. Dungee, painting contractor, 3200 block Sequoia Ave., had climbed about 40 feet up a ladder composed of three 20-foot aluminum lengths when he lost his footing and fell to the floor.

• • •

THE BASE of the ladder was located near the front of the Temple in the center section of pews, police said.

John F. Howell, 1300 block Frederick Ave., who was holding the base of the ladder for Pizarro, told police the lengths of the ladder apparently were not locked together properly, causing the painter to lose his footing.

Howell said the ladder had been assembled and was standing for two hours before the accident.

Pizarro had a gallon paint bucket and brush in his hands when he tumbled, police said.

Bowie students' boycott wins officials' sympathy

By STERLING A. PAIGE

A 12 - hour student boycott of all college activities and functions at Bowie State College Wednesday was 90 per cent effective, according to leaders of the protest.

A student grievance committee said the protest was designed to spotlight college problems and focus public and school administration attention on the need for state action in correcting some of the stated and obvious conditions now existing.

Classes, registrations and cafeteria use were avoided by students during the boycott, said to have the blessing of several unnamed faculty members.

Primary among the complaints were deplorable conditions in the physical makeup (buildings) of the campus and the lack of communication between the administration and the student body.

The students took newsmen on a tour of buildings on the campus to back up their charges of substandard living facilities, a condition, they say "has remained static for years despite administrative awareness."

The lack of communication, the students complained, is due to the domineering attitude of the administration.

• • •

"WE ARE not making a personal attack on any one," Louis Edmondston, spokesman for the committee, told the AFRO.

"We are simply insisting that students have more voice in the policy - making at the college. At present we have none," he added.

The members of the 5-person grievance committee presented a firm, determined, but courteous attitude as they explained their problems.

"There is a faculty - student committee here," one said. "However, the faculty chairmen don't bother to consult with student representatives before initiating policies affecting us."

"The administration dominates the student assembly programs," another voiced.

Then too, some of our students are suspended and sent home on a few hours notice—even without due process.

"The order is given to pack up and leave the campus by 5 a.m. — or whatever the time may be — and that's it," she added.

Rent strike unit plans new attack

The Baltimore Rent Strike Committee announced Thursday it will hold a public meeting to discuss plans to fight for a rent strike law.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday at 1809 Ashland Ave.

According to Joan Berezin, acting secretary of the committee, the meeting will discuss specific projects for awakening the community and the public at large to the need for such a law, which would enable a tenant to withhold rent until a landlord had made necessary repairs on his building.

• • •

AMONG THE proposals to be discussed, Miss Berezin said, was a plan to pick out target areas in which there were large numbers of building violations and send lists of the violations to the Baltimore Building Inspector.

She added the committee was in the process of preparing pledges to be signed by tenants giving the name of landlords, the amount of rent paid and listing repairs needed, and stating support for a rent strike law.

When a large number of such pledges were collected, she said, copies would be sent to the Building Inspector's office and to public officials.

The Rent Strike Committee, whose planning chairman is Samuel McNair, 939 N. Wolfe St., decided to hold the public session at a meeting Wednesday night.

Flyers were drawn up for distribution in the East Baltimore poverty action area explaining the purpose of the meeting and urging all interested persons to attend.

Complaint at phone company aired at CRC

Charges of racial discrimination launched by an employee of 2½ years with the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, were aired this week in two days of hearings conducted by the Baltimore Community Relations Commission.

Mrs. Bernice Jackson, 3800 Block Edgewood d., a service representative for the company at its York Road office, charged that failure to include her in frequent lists o promotions was due to discriminatory practices.

The charges were denied by representatives of the company, many of whom testified in the two lengthy sessions.

William C. Sterling, divisional commercial manager, and Robert B. Alexander, general personnel manager, both asserted that promotions into management were not made along racial lines, and the non - promotion of Mrs. Jackson was due to

Raid nets suspects in Jan. slaying

Homicide Squad Lts. Clarence Roy and Anton Gloss led a party of homicide and holdup squad detectives in an early Wednesday morning raid on a house in the 1300 block of N. Carey St. and captured what they termed "prime suspects" in the murder of a Hamden area grocer Jan. 28.

Flushed from the house with tear gas in the 2 a.m. raid was a 23-year-old man, whose 19-year-old brother minutes before had given up voluntarily.

The grocer, Henry H. Jeulich, 47, 3100 block Chestnut Ave. was murdered in his Northeast Baltimore store while his wife was a horrified witness during a holdup that netted two thieves about $350.

In the day-long series of stakeouts, police also arrested six other youths and a girl. All were being questioned in a string of armed robberies and holdups.

Five of the men, aged 16 to 22, were arrested about 1 p.m. at a house in the 3600 block of Park Heights Ave.

Another youth was later arrested in the 500 block Johannsen St., and about 7:30 p.m. another arrest was made at the Park Heights address—this raid netted a 17-year-old girl.

When the girl was captured another suspected 23-year-old escaped from the raiders, police said.

A four - year-old boy who played with matches Thursday morning caused the death of his three-year-old sister, a Fire Department investigator reported.

Carla Lovelace 3, one of the four children of Mrs. Phyllis Taylor, 28, 2400 block Francis St., was dead on arrival 9:10 a.m. at Provident Hospital.

Lt. Adam F. Stacharowski of the Fire Department Investigation Bureau said she died of smoke inhalation and slight burns sustained when fire spread to her bedroom.

Stephen, 15 months, one of three brothers, was treated and released at Provident Hospital, where his mother Miss Phyllis Taylor, 28 who was not home when the fire started, was treated for

Plan to remove stables from residential areas

An ordinance to phase-out all horse stables in residential use districts in the city within the next two years will be sent to the City Council Thursday by Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin.

The Council meets at 5 p.m. Thursday rather than its usual Monday period, in deference to the Jewish holiday.

The mayor will also send up the nomination of Sanford J. Rosen, professor at the University of Maryland School of Law, as a member of the Community Relations Commission.

The ordinance on stables will not affect horse-drawn huckster wagons on the streets, and thus impede the livelihood of such persons.

It provides that all stables be removed from residential use districts by Sept. 1, 1968, and that whenever a future area is zoned residential where stables exist they must be removed in a two-year period.

There are 22 stables throughout the city, a spokesman for the mayor stated.
